Eisteddfod is Opened by Musician In London.

In a pretty glade in Kensington Gardens, in London, near the Serpentine, the Welsh bards celebrated recently the ritual of the Gorsedd which marks the opening of the national eisteddfod.

According to the ancient tradition, the rites must be performed "in the face of the sun, the eye of light," and though the somber skies made it impossible to carry out the letter of the law, it was fulfilled sufficiently in the spirit by the performance of the rites in a druidical circle erected in the open air.

The circle consists of unhewn stones, outside of which three other stones are placed. In the centre of the circle is the Maen Llog, a large stone supported on three others.

A trumpeter, standing upon this stone, sounded the Corn Gwlad, thus formally opening the Gorsedd, and the prayer of the Gorsedd was recited in Welsh.

The bards, in their blue, green and white robes, presented a striking spectacle, and the insignia of his office rendered Dyfed, the archdruid, a notable figure. With his flowing white robe, oakleaf crown, and golden torque of horseshoe shape, he was impressive indeed as he mounted the Maen Llog and cried aloud thrice in a voice of thunder the formal challenge, "A oes Heddweh?" (Is it Peace?).

"Heddweh!" the assembly shouted, and Dyfed sheathed again the eight-foot sword which, in symbolic rite, he had half drawn from its scabbard.

Speech-making in Welsh followed, and then the bards and onlookers trooped off to the Albert Hall, where the eisteddfod met.

The proceedings at the hall during the morning were disappointing in a great many ways, and there appeared to be a deplorable lack of organization.

The best singing was heard in the chief choral competition, in which the first prize went to the Carnarvon Choral Society, and the second to the Llanelly Choral Society.

At the afternoon meeting Mr. Balfour made a most interesting speech in praise of music.

"Music has ever been one of the great arts in which Welshmen have excelled," he stated. "There cannot be a gift which carries with it higher pleasures—pleasures more easy of attainment, pleasures which leave no after-sting, no after-taste of evil, but which raise and must raise the whole level of civilized pleasures among the people who practice them.

"Music knows no national barrier; music is not subject to the limitations which unhappily beset language. Music speaks to men of all races and of all tongues."

Costly Pennies.

Who was Wiglaf? Numismatists know, and gave £449 for two of his silver pennies at Sotheby's. Wiglaf, or Withlafe, as his name is sometimes spelt in the old chronicles, was that King of Mercia tributary to Egbert, first King of England, and held nominal sway between 825 and 839. His silver penny, without bust, with a cross in centre and a pellet in each angle within a beaded centre on the obverse, and lunettes and pellets on the reverse, caused exciting bidding, which reached £375 (Spink). Only one other of this particular type is known, and it is fortunately in the British Museum. Another Wiglaf penny, with a rude head in a circle and a cross-crosslet in centre of reverse, realized £176 (Lincoln). This was found at Dorking in 1817. The sale was that of the famous Rashleigh collection. A penny of Ecgberht (765-791)—not to be confounded with Ecgberht, son of Offa of Mercia, but the King of Kent mentioned in old charters—without a bust, but with the King's name, made £153 (Lincoln). Only three other coins of this type are known, two being in the Hunter Museum, Glasgow An East Anglian penny of Eadvald, 819-827, realised £52 (Lincoln), and one of Jaenberht, who was Archbishop of Canterbury between 766 and 190, £33. This was discovered near Netley Abbey, and wears the names of Offa and the Archbishop. In the digging of the foundation for the Martyrs' Memorial at Oxford, another of this prelate's pennies was found, and this fetched £20. A penny with the disdemed bust of Cynethryth, who was Offa's Queen, made £30 (Spink).

Lord Balcarres as a Walker.

It was Lord Balcarres, a trustee of the National Portrait Gallery, who announced the saving to England of Holbein's picture, "The Duchess of Milan." His lordship has crowded much good work into his thirty-seven years of life. Not only has he distinguished himself in the cause of art and architecture — he is a trained architect—but he has also served the state in the House of Commons as one of the Unionist Whips. A notable characteristic is his rapid walk. "Burns' gallop is nowhere in it with Balcarres' walk," growled a recalcitrant member on one occasion after being fetched back to the never-ending divisions while trying to escape. "It's no good unless you are streets ahead."

Helping the Enemy.

A coal heaver was getting in a load of coal in the suburbs of London. He was shoveling in the coal at a good rate when he was startled by a terrific yell from the house adjoining.

"Wot the dickens is the matter?" queried the coal man, starting up.

"Matter, you thickhead!" shouted the man, frantically endeavoring to pull his hair up in clots by the roots. "You are putting the coal down the wrong hole. My wife's people live there!"—London Tit-Bits.

Self-Supporting Blind.

Of the students at the Royal Normal College for the Blind, South London, Eng., nearly 90 per cent. are self-supporting.

Cheap Living.

She—I'm living on brown bread and water to improve my complexion. He—How long can you keep it up? She—Oh, indefinitely, I guess. He—Then let's get married

Result of Rashness.

"Out of a job, are you?" asked the first girl. "Boss catch you flirting?"

"No; I caught the boss. Say, what sort of a wedding dress do you think is real swell?"

Truly this world can go on without us, if we would but think so.—Longfellow.

FISHERS OF LUNENBERG.

They Are the Rivals of Gloucester For Cod Bank Honors.

It is recognized that the fishermen of Gloucester have long monopolized fiction and poetry as being the real catchers of cod, and the most picturesque of those who make their living on the Grand Banks.

If you ask a Bluenose, that is a resident of Nova Scotia, who are the real bankers, he will tell you "the men of Lunenburg." Lunenburg is the rival of Gloucester in the hunt for cod, and a pretty husky rival, too, for fishermen from that seaport on the south shore of Nova Scotia are the backbone of that industry that is valued well over $3,000,000 a year.

The Lunenburg fishermen spend about half the year at home, but they do not use this time sitting around the docks spinning yarns. They are busy with lobster catching or in the woods. When March comes around they begin to make ready for the sea.

The schooners are put in order and stocked with provisions. On the Sunday nearest March 21 the churches hold special services, and prayers go up for safe and prosperous voyages. They are devout, these Bluenose fishermen, but they keep an eye on the profits, too.

The fishing schooners are small, rarely reaching 100 tons. The law requires vessels exceeding that size to carry a certified master, and the Lunenburg man can't see the use of passing examinations in navigation. With a compass and a dipsey lead the master of a banker can find his way in any weather.

The start from Lunenburg is like the start of a yacht race. Most of the bankers go out on the same day, and there is good-natured rivalry among the skippers as to who shall first anchor on the fishing grounds.

When a skipper makes a berth in a likely place real work begins. The dories, flat-bottomed boats about fifteen feet long, which are very seaworthy but don't look it, are put overboard and the trawls are set.

These trawls are something sizable in the way of fishing lines. The main line is from one to one and a half miles long, with a fringe of smaller lines which carry the hooks. The trawls are anchored at each end and are set like the spokes of a wheel whose hub is the schooner. The dories move up and down the trawls, taking off the fish and rebaiting the hooks. It sounds easy, but in a heavy sea it is ticklish business.

When a schooner has loaded full with fish, cut and salted down, she steals away from the shrieking medley of foghorns and makes for Lunenburg. It is a lucky skip which enters port without her colors at half-mast, which would indicate that one of her crew has gone. The fleet gets back from the spring trip about the end of May, unloads and sails back again on the summer trip, which lasts until autumn.

Cinematograph In Central Africa.

There seems to be no limit to the ramifications of modern inventions. No sooner does anything establish itself in the favor of the public than it bobs up serenely everywhere. Who would have thought, for instance, that the cinematograph, popular and entertaining as it is, would have appealed to the wild and woolly native of Central Africa? Yet a letter from the office of Superintendent of Buildings at Zoomba, Nyassaland, assures me that this is so. The venture is successful, too. Mr. Hackett, of Frome, Somerset, is the intrepid pioneer, and the letter I have received states that "his exhibition has attracted the natives by the thousand." They call Mr. Hackett the "witch doctor," and he is still proceeding in to the interior, "with a convoy of 40 Kaffirs to carry provisions, outfit, etc —London Answers.

Soreness of the muscles, whether induced by violent exercise or injury is quickly relieved by the free application of Chamberlain's Liniment. This Liniment is equally valuable for muscular rheumatism, and always affords quick relief.

One of the natural curiosities of South Mashonaland is a "German-sausage-tree." It bears deep-crimson flowers, 3 inches long, in blazing bunches of twelve; but when the tree fruits into fat, substantial, sausage-like pods, there remain no leaves, and it looks like a sausage larder indeed. These beans are 20 inches long, and 12 inches in girth, and are beloved of the native tribe of Shangaans and baboons. But the tribe of the Karanga are a very superior people, and would never deign to eat them. There can be no reason for this, as, at least, no one can accuse these "sausages" of being connected in any way with dogs or cats!

IF SICK--WHY PAY

Unless Health First Returns.

Here is what should and can be done!

Now you would not willingly pay for that which was worthless—would you?

Then why pay for medicine until that medicine first proves to you its actual worth?

Positively knowing what Dr. Shoop's Restorative can do for the sick, I say to all: don't pay a single penny for it until it has first benefited you with a dispassionate trial and proved to you, by its own merits, its great value to you and your needs.

I am perfectly willing to the sick everywhere that "Dr. Shoop's Restorative is absolutely free if it fails". Let others do the manner else pass their prescriptions by.

If you need more strength, more vitality, more vigor or more vim, use my Restorative a few days and note the immediate improvement.

When the Stomach, Heart, or Kidneys go wrong, then test Dr. Shoop's Restorative. I do not claim the Stomach nor stimulate the Heart or Kidneys, for that is wrong. Years ago I cast away that foolish idea in medicine. The books below will best tell you how I am succeeding.

Those books also tell of a new hidden "double nerve," no larger than a silken thread. They tell how that nerve, until it fails, secretly gives to the Heart its power, its tone, its never-ceasing action or impulse.

Those books will open up new and helpful ideas to those who are not well. They tell why the Stomach, and Kidneys each have their "double" or power nerves. They tell how the Restorative was especially made to reach and revitalize those weak or failing inside nerves. All of these facts tell why I am able to say, "It is free if it fails".

This is why I say "take no chances on a medicine whose maker dare not back it just as I do by this remarkable offer".

So write me today for the order.

I have specialized heart and nerve troubles in nearly every community to learn my success in the sick.

But write me first for the order.

All druggists sell Dr. Shoop's Restorative, and all are not authorized to give the 30 days' test. So, if you see a fine package, don't allow disappointment and delays. Get the size which best you need.

A postal will do.

Better, you are free to consult me or you would your home physician. My advice and the book below are yours—and without cost.

Perhaps a word or two from me will clear up some serious ailment. I have helped thousands upon thousands by my private prescription or personal advice plan. My best effort is surely worth your simple request. So write now while you have it fresh in mind. Immediately means immediate. Dr. Shoop, Box 18, Racine, Wis.

Witness—One day I had some shrimps to sell, and I asked the plaintiff to help me. He said, "I can't push the barrow because my arm is bad, but if you like I'll come along with you and holler."

Counsel—Why was that?

Noisy Avians.

The bellbird, which makes perhaps in its natural state the greatest noise of any known avian, is found both in South America and certain parts of Africa. Its voice will carry on a still day a distance of quite three miles. Its note is like the tolling of a distant church bell and is uttered during the heat of the day, when every other bird has ceased to sing and nature is hushed in silence. The horabill, a bird which is widely distributed in India, the Malay archipelago and Africa, has also a very loud note. Its call has been described as "between the shriek of a locomotive and the bray of a donkey" and can be heard a distance of a couple of miles.

HISTORIC WEAPONS.

Among the trophies of arms displayed on the walls of Windsor castle one of the most interesting of the long series is a group of weapons and armor sent to Queen Victoria by Lord Kitchener after the Dongola campaign on the upper Nile in 1896.

The trophy consists of a coat of chain mail, a number of spears and a long cross hilted sword. On the straight steel blade of the sword there is an inscription in odd fashioned letters: "No me saques sin razon. No me entrimes sin honor."

The words are Spanish, but the same motto was inscribed on sword blades in the days of chivalry in most of the languages of Europe. Its meaning is the knightly rule for all who bear the sword: Do not draw me without reason. Do not sheathe me without honor.

The weapon was taken from the abandoned camp of Wad Bishara, the dervish general, after the battle of Hafir (Sept. 2, 1898). How came a blade with such a motto to be found in a Moslem bivouac in the heart of the Sudan?

The presence of these crusader swords in the Sudan is not so difficult to explain. In the thirteenth century the Mohammedan caliphs of Egypt not only carried on successful wars against the crusaders in Syria, destroying the last vestiges of the Latin kingdom of Jerusalem, but also defeated two attempts of the Europeans to invade Egypt itself, one of them led by St. Louis of France.

Enormous quantities of western arms and warlike equipments must have thus passed into the possession of the Mohammedan conquerors.—Chambers' Journal.

In buying a cough medicine, don't be afraid to get Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. There is no danger from it and relief is sure to follow. Especially recommended for coughs, colds and whooping cough. 6

People Who Can't See.

The history of the past assures us that there are few, if any, departments of human knowledge in which the blind have not distinguished themselves, says The War Cry.

Two of the world's greatest poets—Homer and Milton—were sightless; while Dr. Saunderson, once professor of mathematics in the University of Cambridge, lost his eyesight when twelve months old, but, although his parents were poor, he advanced so greatly in knowledge that he became an expert Greek scholar.

Then John Metcalfe, of Knaresborough, another blind man, became a [illegible] swimmer, a musician, and an engineer, who distinguished himself in building bridges and making roads.

There still exists, we believe, a monument to the memory of Dr. Hugh James, the blind physician of Carlisle; while in Birmingham there is a blind man who cleans and repairs clocks, and has even constructed new ones.

Queen Victoria's Journals.

Lord Esher has been giving some interesting particulars of Queen Victoria's journals. There are said to be over 100 volumes of them, all written closely in a small running hand. The last entry is dictated and was added just ten days before the Queen died. The journals, it is said, will never be seen hereafter in their complete form.

Unreasonable.

"Your baby cries a great deal at night. Can't you do anything for it?"

"Your dog barks a good deal. Can't you do anything to stop him?"

"Confound it, such unreasonable people as you haven't any right to live in a flat!"

The Result the Same.

"Gimme some of that prune pie."

"Son, you've had two kinds of pie already."

"Then another kind won't matter. There's only one kind of stomach ache."

A Cool Deadhead.

Mr. Oscar Asche, the London actor, who, with his wife, Miss Lily Brayton, is on his way to Australia—his native land—which he left eighteen years ago, remarked just before he set sail, apropos of the slump in theatres, that the deadhead is a destroyer of drama. "Once give a man a free seat for a play," he said, "and you will have a difficulty ever after to make him 'pay to go in.' While I was touring with a certain highly-respected manager, we were playing at a long-famous old playhouse in an ancient town. We had billed 'Macbeth' for the Friday night, but during that day the theatre was burnt down. For our next week there our chief contrived to borrow a playhouse a little way out of the district. On reaching there to rehearse on the Monday the manager received a letter saying that the writer had been given two dress-circle orders for the performance of 'Macbeth,' but as that play was not performed owing to the destruction of the theatre, the writer surmised that the manager would remit the money value of these orders."

Wasting Valuable Time.

An old farmer died in a little village in the neighborhood of Paris. His fortune, the fruit of years of patient toil, was invested in a nice compact little farm. A nephew of the departed, believing himself to be heir, called a few days later on the lawyer and before saying a word about the succession thought it only right and proper to shed a few tears.

"Poor uncle!" he murmured. "So kind, so affectionate—to think that I shall never see him again!"

The notary allowed the young man to give full vent to his sorrowful emotions, after which he quietly observed:

"I suppose you are aware that your uncle has left you nothing!"

"What!" exclaimed the nephew, suddenly changing his tone. "I'm not down in the will? Then why on earth did you let me stand weeping there and making a fool of myself for a good half hour!"

An Editor's Woes.

Editing a paper is a nice thing and no mistake. If we publish jokes people say we are rattle-brained. If we don't we are fools. If we publish original matter, they say we do not give them enough selections. If we give them selections, we are too lazy to write. If we don't go to church we are heathens. If we do we are hypocrites. If we remain in the office we ought to be out looking for news. If we go out, then we are not attending to business. If we wear old clothes, they laugh at us. If we wear good clothes, they say we are extravagant. Now, what are we to do? Just as likely as not someone will say that we purloined this from another paper. So we did.

Fought Under Nelson.

The name of James Herton, who for seventy-six years has resided in Queensland, was among the list of old-age pensioners recently approved by the Home Secretary. Herton is said to be the first white man born in Queensland, first seeing the light at the home of Dr. Ballow, whose residence stood on the site of the present Royal Navy, and fought under Nelson, and also had the honor of being the first pilot in Moreton Bay. He met his death by being taken by a shark.

ARE YOU IN DANGER?

You May Be Neglecting a Small Ailment and Thereby Inviting Serious Disease.

That little maladies grow into serious diseases we all know. Upon the stomach, liver and kidneys rest mainly the work of maintaining health. Most of your little sicknesses come from derangement of these organs. Experience proves they are very frequently out of order, not badly perhaps, but even if only slightly out of order, it acts upon the mind and the spirits and upon the strength and regularity of the system.

It won't pay you to neglect your health; at the first sign of headache or languor take Dr. Hamilton's Pills and note how bright you feel next morning. You'll have a grand appetite, enjoy your breakfast and feel full of energy to go to work upon.

Your food soon tastes so good that you eat more than ever before and, of course, you grow stronger, ruddy, vivacious, just sparkling with energy and good health.

Soon your friends will notice the improvement, and by continuing to tone up your system with Dr. Hamilton's Pills you lay the sound foundation of permanent good health.

There is no medicine better for men, women or children, nothing for family use half so beneficial as Dr. Hamilton's Pills of Mandrake and Butternut. To look well, keep well, and feel well, use Dr. Hamilton Pills 25c per box, at all dealers, or The Catarrhozone Co., Kingston, Ont.

VISCOUNT KITCHENER

A Brief Biography of Soldier Who May Visit Canada.

General Horatio Herbert, first Viscount Kitchener of Khartoum—who has just completed the great work he undertook in 1902 of reorganizing the British Indian Army—was born on Midsummer Day at Ballylongford, in the County Kerry.

During his exceptionally brilliant military career the retiring Indian commander has asserted himself with characteristic confidence and unbending will, and Lord Kitchener must be accounted one of the most strenuous soldiers that the British Empire has ever possessed.

Coming of a military family, Lord Kitchener passed thirty-eight years ago from Woolwich into the Royal Engineers. Since then his career has been one of scintillating brilliance for "K. of K."—as he is now often called "for short"—has been to the fore in many expeditions and campaigns, and has "built himself an everlasting name" for thoroughness in the profession of arms.

A veritable "glutton for work," he assisted in the Palestine survey in 1874-78 and that of Cyprus of 1878-82.

Then he was sent to Egypt, and entrusted with the command of the Khedive's cavalry and the remodelling of the native army. Having effected this to his own exacting desiring, he, as Sirdar, conducted a vigorous opposition to the forces of the Khalifa. He found it necessary to build a railway to Omdurman before he finally broke the power of the prophet, annihilating the Khalifa's army in 1898.

By this time he had reached the rank of major-general and been made a K.C.B., and he came home covered with Egyptian honors, to receive the thanks of the British Parliament, a peerage, and a grant of £30,000.

In the year following, when matters seemed to be going wrong with our forces engaged against the Boers in South Africa, Lord Kitchener was sent out as Chief of Staff to Lord Roberts. Here, again, he distinguished himself for determination and dash in combination; and when Cronje had been circumvented at Paardeberg and the British flag hoisted in Pretoria, he was promoted to the commandership of the forces in South Africa on Lord Roberts' return to England.

Kitchener brought the long campaign to a close. Again the gallant fighter and fine organizer was thanked by Parliament, given a further £50,000 from the country's public purse, and raised in the peerage to a viscounty.

As a full general he was sent out in 1902 to India as Commander-in-Chief, with practically a free hand to reform the army of our great Empire of the Orient. His ideals of duty brooking no civilian interference in matters military, Viscount Kitchener soon came into conflict with the then Viceroy, Lord Curzon, and the friction ensued in the resignation of that able statesman in 1905.

Since then Lord Kitchener has practically been permitted to have his own way at headquarters in India; and on the completion of his task in the Orient, he is credited by some with hankering after overthrowing the influence of the non-military element in the War Office for good and all.

Barrister's First Brief.

My first brief I have the best of reasons for remembering particularly clearly. I was engaged for the defence in a case of robbery. Two men, the prisoners, had seized the prosecutor on the platform of Shrewsbury Station, and while one of them held his arms the other quietly rifled his pockets.

They were caught red-handed, and I had a brief to defend the prisoner who had held the prosecutor by the arms. I made the obvious defence. I urged that it was vindictive to sacrifice two victims to justice when one would suffice, that the distinction between the two prisoners was manifest, and as the one I defended had not taken any money at all it was impossible to pretend that he was as guilty as his companion.

To the amazement of everybody, not excepting the chairman—who had been careful in his summing up to sweep away my sophistries—the jury made the distinction I suggested to them, and returned a verdict of "Not guilty" against my prisoner.—"Reminiscences of Mr. A. C. Plowden," in The Strand Magazine.

A Pageant of Priests.

Pageants have so far illustrated the history of a single town or city, but the one held recently in the grounds of Fulham Palace, London, was unique. It depicted the growth and history of the Church of England.

It was split up into a number of episodes, and, beginning with the publication of the Edict of Emperor Constantine, came right down through the ages to the acquittal of the Seven Bishops in 1688. A final tableau, representing the church "throughout the world," concluded the gigantic spectacle.

The grounds of Fulham Palace, lent by the Bishop of London, were well fitted for such a purpose.

The spectators were housed in a grand stand, 294 feet in length, 90 feet in depth, and covering an acre of ground. In addition to a large royal box, there was seating accommodation for 6,750. His Grace the Archbishop of Canterbury performed the opening ceremony.

An Amiable Violinist.

Robert Browning and Joachim met one evening at a friendly gathering in London. The violinist had "obliged" without satisfying certain ladies, who entreated the poet to obtain from him another solo. Browning, feeling the delicacy of his task, discharged it diplomatically and spoke, as some times he wrote, so as to conceal his thoughts, while the violinist, not understanding, bowed and smiled and did not play.

"Oh," said the poet, "I wanted you to give us some more music."

"Then, why did you not come and say, 'Joe, old boy, give us another tune?'" returned the amiable violinist.

Land and Water.

There is three times as much sea as land in the world.

Hats Were Once a Luxury.

In the reign of Elizabeth the wearing of hats was considered a sign of luxury. By an act of parliament every person above the age of seven years and under a certain degree was obliged on Sundays and holidays to wear a woolen cap made in England and finished by some of the fraternity of cappers.

A HARASSING QUESTION.

What Is the Business Woman to Wear In Hot Weather?

In the first place, she wants to be cool in summer, but in any case she must be neat. And if she is neat she will at least look cool, a thing that she would not do were she ever so thinly clad in apparel that was other than neat.

As it grows warmer it is a great temptation for the business woman, especially if she is rather new in the field, to resort to some of the cool, dainty frocks that suggest themselves for July and August wear. But if she has been a business woman long enough to understand the situation she knows that frills and furbelows have no place for her. She also knows that they are not essential to feminine charm and that even in the hottest weather perfect tailoring and immaculate cleanliness will do as much toward making her look and even feel cool as sash ribbons and lacy garnitures.

But just what is the business woman to wear in hot weather?

Must she stick to the cloth skirt and white waist of fall and winter? Not necessarily. There are days when she doesn't want to think of a cloth skirt. In this case if she still wishes to retain the two piece suit arrangement it would pay her to have a coat and skirt of linen or cotton poplin in tan or blue.

But this is not wholly satisfactory, as it necessitates the purchase of a coat which is not entirely suitable for wear with other garments, and the coat must be pressed often to keep it in trim. Besides this, the skirt will require more frequent laundering than the coat, and even with the best material this is sure to make a difference in the appearance of the two garments.

This season affords a peculiarly fortunate solution to the dress problem of the business girl in the smart one piece tailored dress. It is, if strictly tailored, entirely proper for wear on the street without a coat, while the shirt waist and skirt seem to suggest the presence of a coat like the skirt. Then, too, the plainly made one piece dress is perfectly suitable for business wear and can be carried out in almost any material. Even a gingham in shepherd's check of black and white has a smart tailored look, though the more common materials are cotton poplin, racket cloth, rep or linen. The last, however, is only suitable for the woman with an unlimited amount of money for laundry and pressing.

The final advantage of the one piece dress is that it is quickly adjusted, no tiresome fussing with belt, collar and cuff links, but on and fastened up in a minute.

To add to this a skirt of some lightweight material, such as mohair or lightweight suiting, will provide an alternate costume for wear with shirt waists.

It takes a little courage, to be sure, but the wise business girl has learned that even in hot weather she must not yield to the temptation of wearing those soft, rumply feminine looking things. And, too, if she is wise and has a position of any responsibility or importance she will go just a little easy on this "Dutch neck" craze and will not despise the starched collar altogether.

Widows' Caps.

Widows' caps are as old as the days of Julius Caesar. An edict of Tiberius commanded all widows to wear one under the penalty of a heavy fine and imprisonment.

Shooting Flying Birds.

In Smith's "History of Kerry," published in 1754, is found the statement that the art of shooting flying birds was taught to the Irish people by the French refugees who came over after the revocation of the edict of Nantes and that to this circumstance is due the decline and disappearance of falconry.

Bicycles.

The first bicycle with pedals was made about 1840.

St. Paul's, New York.

The oldest public building in New York is St. Paul's chapel, at the corner of Broadway and Fulton street. It was built in 1766, ten years before the Declaration of Independence.

Card of Thanks.

Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Roberts, 496 Stewart street, desire through the medium of the press to extend their heartfelt thanks to the loving friends, who so willingly sacrificed their time to render service to them in their hour of trial, they especially wish to thank the young men who so kindly twice offered their services as bearers, and also the officers and members of St. John's church. It is with a sincere sense of gratitude that Mr. and Mrs. Roberts extend their thanks to all those who did their best to lighten the load of sorrow which it has been their lot to bear.

THE "REVOLUTIONARY" BUDGET.

It is impossible for outsiders and for millions of Englishmen to understand those fierce opponents of the Lloyd-George budget who call it revolutionary and socialistic. There is nothing unprecedented about taxes on undeveloped land, for every country in the world levies them. The tax on the unlearned increment of land—on value due to social and industrial factors—is novel, to be sure, but it is levied by scores of municipalities in Germany, and will shortly be levied by the imperial government. It would astonish the German ministry and its parliamentary supporters, whose attitude toward the social democratic party is admirably well known, to discover that they have been [illegible]ing of stealing socialistic proposals in regard to taxation and property.

Lord Rosebery advises the lords to stand like a rock in the defence of constitution, which he sees threatened by the land proposals of the budget. He had previously protested against the budget on the ground that the party in power had no moral right to go beyond the mandate of the last general election. He had talk ed about the imperfections of the constitution and the need of new safeguards. He had implied that all important and new proposals ought to be submitted to the people—a strangely radical view for a conservative liberal and a still stranger one for the Tories.

If the lords follow his advice and reject the budget in the name not of the landed interests that do not wish to pay their share of taxation but in the name of the "people," the tories and their allies will have created a [illegible] and have done more for [illegible] and "revolution" than a hundred budgets of the Lloyd-George kind. True, the lords never veto [illegible] and never pose as [illegible] of the constitution and the [illegible] of the electorate [illegible] [illegible] [illegible]

Armouries will be the Best Equipped Club in the City—Suite of Rooms for the Privates—Games of All Kinds—Shooting and Bowling Alleys and Indoor Baseball

The officers of the 57th Regiment have plans prepared and in the hands of a committee which is working them out, to make the life of the Peterborough volunteers a most desirable and a most enviable one. The armories will be the largest and best equipped club in Peterborough and will rival any regimental quarters in the Dominion. The object is clearly to uplift the members of the regiment by providing for them the very best kind of amusement and entertainment, and at the same time to maintain the regiment to its full strength.

That the object desired will be attained is assured. The officers in future will have no trouble in securing lots of men and of the highest standard. If the recruits are not of the proper stamp when they join they will be wonderfully improved before they have remained long. Then another object is to make the 57th regiment an organization to which the young men will wish to belong the year round, for it is only in this way that the Rangers can reach the top of the ladder and retain that position in the Canadian militia.

The armories are now equipped with a shooting alley for rifle practice and it will be in use every night by two companies, the band, or the officers.

A bowling alley, with three modern alleys is to be installed for the use of all the soldiers and military musicians.

The officers are making arrangements whereby the privates of the regiment will have the same conveniences and advantages as the officers and non-commissioned officers. For the use of the privates a suite of rooms in the west end of the armories upstairs and adjoining the hall has been set apart. In these rooms will be placed all kinds of games and amusements and also some gymnastic apparatus.

The regiment has already in its possession an outfit for indoor baseball and this game will be taken up as soon as the fall weather sets in and outdoor games are abandoned.

It is understood that the intentions are to arrange both company and section competition in the various games and exercises. Arrangements will also be made whereby the different departments will be used one night a week by the different companies (two companies a night), a night for the bands and one for the officers.

These features and the club privileges are available only to the bona fide members of the regiment and to them all things are free, while outsiders cannot participate at any price. This will be an incentive to the young men to join the regiment and it will promote enthusiasm and loyalty among the members. This is the motive of the plans and the officers are to be congratulated upon their efforts and all will wish them every success.

Quaker Oats Co. Instal Ten Inch Water Main for Fire Protection

The Quaker Oats Company have just completed an improvement to their fire fighting equipment which will enable them to handle any kind of a fire on their own premises with their own apparatus. To accomplish this feat the company has gone to great expense. A sprinkler system was installed some time ago and and it was operated from their own pump house which lifted the water from the river a distance of 20 feet to the pumps. Now, however, this has been done away with. A 10 inch main has been laid from a point up the river down to their pumps with a drop of 14 feet. This gives a direct pressure of seven pounds before the pumps are started at all. Then when the pumps are in operation a water pressure of 135 pounds is maintained while the hydrants are in use.

Yesterday afternoon the new water main was tested and Chief Howard and Engineer Rankin were invited by the management of the company to be present. When the pumps were turned on a stream of water was thrown over the top of the grain elevator, a height of 176 feet. This is a most creditable feat and it will put the Quaker Oats Co in a most desirable position in case of fire. While the stream was being thrown the water gauge showed 135 pounds pressure, while the steam gauge showed only 40 pounds pressure.

The test was most perfectly satisfactory in every way.

Additional Information of Fire Insurance Rates

(To the Editor of The Times.)

Sir,—During the past few days reference has been made in our local papers to reduced insurance rates for Peterborough. The city is to be congratulated on its equipment, which has made the reduction possible.

It occurs to me, however, that the articles referred to may be somewhat misleading, and I therefore offer an explanation.

It is true, as stated, that there has been a reduction of 25 per cent. in the key rate. There are, however many other features to be taken into consideration in arriving at the rate in a mercantile, or manufacturing risk. It does not therefore, necessarily follow that the reduced key rate will give a lower net rate in every case. As a matter of fact, while in the course, in the majority of cases the rates are to some extent reduced, there are others whose rates are advanced. In such cases, of course, there are defects or extra hazards charged for that either did not exist or were not taken into consideration in the previous cases. In such cases the only consolation is that, were the the key rate not reduced, their rate would still be higher by 25 cents.

Early in the year the Canadian Fire Underwriters' Association sent to Peterborough several competent rating officers, who thoroughly inspected every building used for commercial purposes.

As a result of their report, and taking into consideration the lower key rate promised for improved fire protection and equipment, a new tariff was issued for Peterborough, which took effect for new business and renewals on the 9th of August last.

As stated above the tendency is a reduction yet some rates remain unchanged, while others are advanced.

There is of course some reason for the increase, where one is made, and I shall always be pleased, as will any agent, to give any information which may lead to the securing of a more favorable rate.

On dwelling houses of first and second class construction there is a reduction of 5 cents per hundred, and in this respect we are in the same class as the city of Toronto. On third and fourth class dwellings there is no change to the rate.

Trusting that this explanation may prevent any misunderstanding with respect to rates.

I remain,
Respectfully,
W. J. THOMPSON.

AT ST. LUKE'S.

Harvest Festival Will Be Held on Thursday, September 30th.

The annual Harvest Festival at St. Luke's church will be held Thursday, Sept. 30th, at 8. p.m. The Rep. Canon Cody, M.A., D.D., rector of St. Paul's church, Toronto, will be the special preacher. The subject of his sermon will be of national issues. Dr. Cody is one of the most eloquent preachers in Canada and an acknowledged scholar. He should be met by a large congregation.

ORANGEISM PROSPERS.

Growth of the Order in Peterborough Substantial.

Orange Sentinel:—The Sentinel had a visit on Saturday from Bro. N. A. Howard Moore, of Peterborough, who gave us an excellent report of the progress made by Manchester L. O. L. No. 50 in that city. A most satisfactory increase in membership is recorded, this, notwithstanding the fact that unlike most lodges No. 50 goes considerably beyond the Grand Lodge limit for the cost of the degrees. It has been proved in the case of this lodge that increasing the cost of membership improves the quality. Another feature of the lodge is that it owns all the regalia that is need. No member is allowed to purchase any from out of his own pocket. The lodge assumes the entire burden. The energetic young Master of the lodge is Newton Hopkins, a Yorthy successor to W. H. G. Armstrong, who resigned that office to become Grand Organizer in Saskatchewan. This lodge has a Presbyterian minister for a member, and experts to add to their numbers other Protestant ministers before very long.

FRED AND HARRY JOPLING WERE ARRESTED

Yesterday by High County Constable Geo. Cochrane—Police Magistrate Edminson Granted Bail in the Sum of $4,000 Each

Fred W. Jopling and his brother Harry Jopling, have been charged with manslaughter as the result of the fight they had with Arthur Bellard at Chemong Park on the night of August 23rd, last. Both young fellows were placed under arrest yesterday by High County Constable Geo. Cochrane and they remained in custody until about 9.30 last night when Police Magistrate Edmison granted bail in the sum of $4,000 each.

The arrest was the outcome of the coroner's inquest which terminated on Wednesday. Crown Attorney R. E. Wood, K.C., laid the information and had the warrants issued.

When brought to the city the prisoners were accompanied by G. J. Jopling, father, and James Jopling, a brother, and they went directly to the offices of their solicitors, Messrs. O'Connell & Gordon, where they consulted with Mr. O'Connell.

Mr. O'Connell made an application to Magistrate Edmison for bail. The application was heard last night at nine o'clock in the magistrate's office. The Crown attorney consented to bail being granted, and the sums were fixed at:

Harry Jopling, $4,000, in two sureties of $2,000 each. E. J. Jopling and H. LeBrun going as sureties.

Fred W. Jopling, $4,000 in two sureties of $2,000 each. E. J. Jopling and H. LeBrun going as sureties.

The preliminary hearing will be before Magistrate Edmison on Friday morning, September 24th, at 10 o'clock in the county court room. The bail was only granted till the preliminary hearing and both the young men must appear in person at that time and place.

The arrest of Fred Jopling and the warrant for Harry Jopling caused quite a sensation in Bridgenorth and is the talk of the whole district although such action on the part of the Crown authorities could not have been unexpected after the verdict of the coroner's jury. Until the preliminary hearing next Friday the boys will have their liberty.

Ask for Detective in the Springfield Mysterious Discovery

The Springfield tragedy or the finding of the human skeleton near the C.P.R. tracks at Kendry's siding, is not yet dead. Crown Attorney R. E. Wood, K.C., is now in communication with the attorney-general for the purpose of having a detective sent down to investigate the case.

It has been found on close examination that the right leg was broken between the ankle and the knee. Both bones were broken and it is fore the body was placed in the bush.

ed a small paper package of Paris green a short distance from where the body was found. There were about three table spoonfuls in the package.

The constable's theory is that the man was thrown from a train and that the neck was broken at that time. Then the body was picked up and carried into the bush and left there and that the Paris Green and razor were placed in their respective positions for respective positions later for the purpose of making the mystery still more mysterious.

Horticultural Society Awarded Prizes for Lawns and Gardens

The awards have been made to those who took such great care of their lawns and gardens during the past season. The five judges made their annual tour on Tuesday and they were more than delighted with what they saw. One of the officials told The Times that there has been a wonderful improvement in horticulture in Peterborough the past few years. Every year has seen more lawns and more beautiful lawns and flowers than the previous one. This year has far exceeded all others and they only wished that they had fifty or a hundred prizes to award to the especially well kept gardens.

The judges were particularly struck with the increased interest the amateur horticulturalists are evidencing, for it is particularly this class that the Horticultural Society wishes to encourage. It is the amateurs, the most numerous with small premises and limited means who can make or mar the beauty of the city. It is therefore especially pleasing to the society to see the advancement being made. There are few cities in Ontario as beautiful as Peterborough.

PRIZE WINNERS.

Professional Class—

1. Mr. James, on Mrs. A. L. Davis' grounds.
2. Mr. Vickers, on Hon. C. B. Stratton's grounds.
3. Miss Dickson, corner Murray and Dickson street.
4. Mr. John Wood, corner Hunter and Belmont streets.

Amateur Class—

1. Miss Davidson, Park street, Ashburnham.
2. Mr. Harry Richardson, Homewood avenue.
3. Mr. S. McKee, Water street, north.
4. Jas. Stevenson, Simcoe St.

Flowers.

1. B. Cooney, Stewart street.
2. Mrs. W. Kennedy, Aylmer St.
3. Mr. W. Taylor, C.P.R. grounds.
4. Mr. Wm. Logan, corner Aylmer and Brock streets.

Special Mention.

Peterborough Lawn Bowling Green.
Mrs. John Thorndike's property.

Special attention is drawn to Miss Davidson's property, the winner in the amateur class. She has fruit and flowers and a lawn which is indeed beautiful and does credit to the city as well as to Miss Davidson who looks after it herself.

"WAS FADING AWAY."

A Young Woman—Scarcely Thirty—Seemed to Be Dying on Her Feet.

"I think it should be the duty of the schools to teach children how to keep well," writes Miss Naomie E. Naydon, a well-known and highly esteemed resident of Bristol. "Ignorance of the laws of health and the use of improper remedies destroyed my vigor and led me to the verge of invalidism. I was as a girl ruddy and strong. Nothing seemed to affect me until I was about thirty. Then gas began to form in the stomach. I suffered with bloating and a general failure in strength set in. If I went upstairs my breath hurt. My system was very irregular and until I grew pretty bad I didn't pay much heed to my condition. Then I got blue, worried all the time, wakened in the night and couldn't get to sleep again. None of the medicine I took helped me. One day I was reading of a very interesting case like mine cured by Dr. Hamilton's Pills, I took the same treatment, it was just right—didn't physic me to death, but took hold of the weak, sick parts of my system and set things right. It seems as if Dr. Hamilton's Pills have made me young again and all my color, spirits, vigor and health of former days have returned to stay."

Every girl and woman should use Dr. Hamilton's Pills regularly. They help a woman in many ways. Beware of the dealer who tells you to take an inferior pill on which his profit is larger than on Dr. Hamilton's. Sold in yellow boxes, 25c. per box, all dealers, or The Catarrhozone Co., Kingston, Ont.

THE WEATHER.

A few scattered showers

Another Religious Trouble in the West

Toronto, Sept. 16.—There is arising in the West today another religious trouble that bids fair to outdo the celebrated Separate school question. It deals with the efforts being made by the different religious bodies to convert to their ideas the one hundred and fifty thousand Ruthenians in the Western Provinces, and what has been said and written about the matter already equals, if it does not surpass the warmest passages that took place when the school question was at its height.

At present all the Catholic arch-bishops and bishops of the West are convened in the city of Quebec, and the trouble is almost certain to be discussed there.

SOME WARM LANGUAGE.

An idea of how bitter the contest for the Ruthenians is going to prove can be gained from today's issue of the Catholic Register and the Canadian Extention. The Register has two of its staff, Father Canning and Father Roche, at present investigating conditions in the West. The following is part of what is said in this week's letter:

"Everywhere the people have reading places where they congregate. The better educated read aloud for the benefit of the others, and then there is discussion in which all take part. And here I where the Brandon Normal school has got in its deadly work. I'll treat more fully of that institution later on, but suffice to say here that this Manitoba Government Normal school at Brandon is a nasty, low-down, proselytizing Orange institution, and is an eye-sore to the whole Catholic population of the Province."

The same matter is taken up editorially, and the Register has the following to say of the "Ranok," a missionary paper.

"The Ranok, the organ of the Presbyterian missionaries, is a disgrace to common decency. If proper action were taken it could be shut out of the mails. It is the most villainous, lying, and indecent publication that has appeared in recent years in any language."

BAPTISTS NEXT.

Other religious bodies are very apt to get into the fray also. About a week ago an announcement was made that the executive committee of the Baptist Home Mission Board decided to undertake the publication of a Ruthenian religious paper for mission work in Ontario and the West. Rev. John Kolesnikoff, the Russian Baptist missionary in Toronto, is to be the editor.

"These people are becoming wonderfully aggressive," says the Register. "It will be necessary to watch them closely, or favor will be played with the faith of these simple people."

The Ruthenians are all Catholics though of a different rite, the Register says. Great difficulty has been experienced so far in securing missionaries who know the language and follow the rite. Other religious bodies have Ruthenian missionaries going around the West, who are able to speak the language.

ONE CATHOLIC MISSIONARY.

At present the Catholics have but one missionary. Father Fabourin, a French-Canadian. He secured permission to adopt the Ruthenian rite, and at present is trying to look after 25,000 of those visitors from a foreign shore, who have made Canada their home.

To see that the Catholic Church is not behind in the work, the Church Extension Society, which has on its books the names of some of the most prominent Catholics in Canada, has pledged itself to supply the necessary funds for the erection of ten churches for the Ruthenians and to secure missionaries for the West. Word was wired to Father Sabourin to "construct immediately."

SEVENTY YEARS OLD.

"Though I had passed by seventieth birthday," writes R. A. Silvera from Duncan P. O., "I am painfully aware that one of the penalties of old age is the slowing down of the activities of the system. One of the most dangerous condition of old age is constipation, an incfrect cause of many sudden deaths. I have used many medicines, but none so suited to old age as Dr. Hamilton's Pills. They are wonderful regulators—keep the stomach and bowels in perfect condition, prevent indigestion, biliousness, liver complaint and constipation. I recommend Dr. Hamilton's Pills because they never grip nor cause distress—just a mild tonic laxative."

By using Dr. Hamilton's Pills regularly you have a guarantee of good health. 25c per box, at all dealers, or The Catarrhozone Co., Kingston, Ont.

Harvest Festival at St. John's Last Night

St. John's church was beautifully decorated yesterday for the annual Harvest Festival services which were held in the morning and evening. Large quantities of all kinds of harvest produce, including grain, roots, fruits and flowers, had been sent in on Wednesday and these were carefully arranged by willing workers so that the sacred edifice looked its very best. The services in the morning was the celebration of the Holy Communion and it was largely attended.

In the evening at eight o'clock the special harvest service was held and thoroughly enjoyed. The service was wholly musical and the singing was led by a well trained choir of over 40 voices under the leadership of Mr. R. J. Dovey. Rev. Dr. Langfeldt assisted the rector, Rev. Canon Davidson. The special preacher was Rev. J. H. Teeney of St. Philip's church, Toronto. He delivered a powerful service which was closely followed by the congregation. He prefaced his remarks by saying how delightful it was to again visit Peterborough and see the many evidences of improvement on all sides. He spoke a word of congratulation upon the appearance of the church.

Rev. Mr. Teeney took as his text, "Thou crownest the earth with goodness," and spoke of the many mercies God had extended to us as a nation and as individuals which should make our hearts truly thankful.

The decorations will remain in their place for Sunday and the choir will repeat the special music.

Peterborough's Exhibition is Now Assured of Great Success

The Weather is the Only Thing that can Possibly Spoil It—The Program is an Ideal One

Peterborough Exhibition was opened yesterday under the most favorable conditions. Everything is going with the directors so far. it all depends on the weather and every member of the association and every friend of the fair hope for fine days today and tomorrow, although the probabilities promise a few scattered showers but they may do more good than harm.

Early yesterday the Midway began to take on a busy appearance. Many tents are erected and many refreshment stands and side shows are on the grounds besides a dining tent, president's office and directors dining tent and secretary's office. The latter place was particularly busy all day and it will be today and tomorrow. It is situated just at the entrance west of the big building.

The poultry tent is again placed at the main entrance. It is an immense place, and the inside is lined with coops furnished by the Peterborough Poultry Association. These coops are very convenient and afford ample room for two big birds. The poultry exhibit will be a large one and this morning the chicken men will be very busy placing their exhibits. Even yesterday a large number of birds were taken down.

The exhibits of farm produce, fruits, ladies' work, etc., found in the main building are all far superior and more numerous than heretofore. In fact there is a splendid exhibit in all lines. Then all available space is taken up by local manufacturers and merchants, who are making a splendid display.

As a matter of fact the first day of Peterborough's fair never gave promise of being so great a success In the way of special attractions everything one could desire will be seen. In front of the grand stand there will be a continuous performance from the noon hour until six o'clock with a band concert by the 57th Regiment Band.

The horse races include a 2.40 class, an expressman's race, a dog race, a carters' race, etc. These will start at 2 o'clock sharp. Not a moment's delay will be tolerated by the committee so that this year the people will not have to sit around and wait for the races to start.

When you get on the ground secure a program from the president' tent so you will miss none of the good things. Go down early, take all the family and friends and stay late. Then don't miss the night performance.

FIRE DEPARTMENT.

Will Parade at the Fair This Afternoon and Evening.

One of the attractions at the Exhibition this afternoon and tonight will be the parade of the Peterborough Fire Department. The entire apparatus, including the chief in his handsome buggy, the two hose waggons, the hook and ladder truck and the steam engine will be on the grounds. In the afternoon the parade will be at 3 o'clock and in the evening at 9 o'clock.

MAYBUILD LINE.

Trolley Line Between Bobcaygeon and Fenelon Falls.

The Lindsay Warder says:— Mr. S. Anderson, who is now operating 40 miles of electric railway and represents large interests, is looking into the possibility of a street railway system from Fenelon Falls to Bobcaygeon passing through Sturgeon Point, and it has been suggested that a large hotel and pavilion may be erected on the beach at the east end during the coming winter. This would materially increase the earnings of the railway, and also make Sturgeon Point one of the most popular resorts in Canada.

Children's Chest Troubles

Nurse Carrington Says Her Long Experience Proves the Safest Remedy is to RUB ON NERVILINE!

Every mother knows how difficult it is to get a young child to take a cough mixture. Seldom will one help unless given in large doses, and the result is to completely upset the sick child

Speaking of the promptest cure for chest troubles and children's Nurse Carrington says: "In all my experience in nursing I haven't met any preparation so dependable as Nerviline. It is the ideal Liniment. Every drop you rub on is absorbed quickly, sinks through the pores to the congested muscles, eases, relieves and cures quickly. Especially for chest colds, pain in the side, stiff neck, earache, toothache, I have found Nerviline invaluable. In treating the minor ills of children Nerviline has no equal. I think Nerviline should be in every home."

A million bottles of Nerviline used every year—this is itself a burden of every year—this is itself a burden of proof that it is the ideal liniment for the home. TURN ABOUT.

Hon. Charles Murphy, the Secretary of State at Ottawa, has been giving the Liberal newspapers 'some pieces of advice. He has spoken plainly and perhaps has gone a little further than he intended to go. But turn about is fair play. The papers offer a good deal of advice to politicians and to other people so scribes cannot find much fault if the tables are turned once in a while.

One trouble with a great many politicians is that they are too apt to think that their word is law with the newspapers of their party. No self-respecting newspaper will allow any politician to interfere in its affairs but there are men in public life—for the most part, men of this stamp have not been prominent long—who do not realize this. Hon. Mr. Murphy, perhaps, has not fully realized it yet. Still, his recent speech will not hurt the papers very much in fact, its delivery has broken the monotony a bit and the advice-giving is no longer one-sided.

LAYMEN'S MISSIONARY CAMPAIGN.

District Conference to Be Held in Ontario and Through the West—Preliminary Visit by Representatives of Canadian Council.

The Canadian Council of the Laymen's Missionary Movement have announced as their policy for the coming fall and winter a series of district conferences in central cities throughout the Dominion. These are primarily for the study of the best methods for introducing and continuing the work of the Laymen's Movement in the different congregations, and one important feature of practically all the conferences will be a study of the problem of "How to Bring a Church to Its Highest Missionary Efficiency."

The meetings in Ontario will be held at different times through the entire winter, the first one being at Galt September 23 and 24, with a programme given elsewhere in this issue, which is to be more or less a model for all of the meetings through the season.

A campaign of western cities is to be held beginning at Winnipeg October 22, and the Winnipeg Executive Committee is co-operating and planning meetings through Manitoba and part of Saskatchewan.

The delegation of speakers will be made up of a few prominent laymen from Toronto, Ottawa, Montreal and Winnipeg. Board Secretaries, returned Missionaries, and Secretaries of the Laymen's Movement, who expect to remain in the west until about the 1st of December.

Messrs. A. E. Armstrong, of the Presbyterian Board of Foreign Missions, and R. W. Allin, Secretary of the Anglican Church Laymen's Movement, left Toronto September 11th, to visit most of the cities where meetings will be held, to make preliminary arrangements.

The Evangelical Association church es have divided into districts, and will organize the Laymen's Movement among the men, the first meeting being at Waterloo on the 14th for the district, with Berlin as its center

ADVERTISE IN THE TIMES.

TACTFUL CHAPERONS.

How They Should Dispose of Undesirable Young Men.

The perfect chaperon is born, not made, because to be at her best she must be constantly on guard without the appearance of watching her charges, and that means a poise and self control and an ability for self effacement that the average woman does not possess. And because of this lack of sufficiency chaperons are frequently maligned either by parents or young folk, for if she is too strict the latter are annoyed, and if not sufficiently so parents are displeased.

The most difficult problem that a chaperon has to manage is what to do when men whom she considers undesirable talk to her charges. To give them the cut direct is rude and places her in a most unfortunate position.

To show her displeasure quietly is not apt to be effective, for girls are likely to champion those whom they deem downtrodden, and, if the men have the least charm of manner or know how to make themselves agreeable, to snub only makes them more interesting to the average young girl. While no chaperon is so silly as to think that every man who meets her charge wishes to marry her, the older woman has nevertheless to remember that he may be a possible husband, and it is imperative that the girl should be guarded from undesirable associates. Probably the best way of managing such a situation is for the chaperon to be constantly in the foreground, without the appearance of being so, not giving the man any opportunity to develop the acquaintance beyond most formal lines.

Her greatest tact lies in so managing her charges that she can retain the girl's confidence, for so long as she has it she will know the situation. Once let her lose it, and she works in the dark, not being certain what the day may bring forth. As to how much liberty a girl may be given by her chaperon in summer, one can only say it depends greatly upon the girl and her associates. If they are reliable and she is sensible there is no need of her having a protector all the time, for her own good sense is enough. Girls are always given more freedom in summer than in winter, and with a man whom she has known intimately and is known to be a gentleman in the fullest sense of the word there is no reason why she should not drive, call and walk unchaperoned.

NEEDLEWORK NOTES.

Among the dainty baby slips are those made with a Dutch neck for summer wear. They are decidedly attractive.

In stitching a pocket on the outside of a garment run the stitching half an inch above the edge of the pocket. This keeps the garment from tearing.

In pressing a plaited skirt one will gain time and have more satisfactory results if the plaits are basted before the pressing is done. Clean the skirt and brush it on the inside as well as the outside. Next baste the seams, cover with a damp cloth and press on the right side with a medium warm iron. Dampen the cloth when necessary and press until the cloth is dry.

Plain coarse chain stitching that looks much like the kind that children use to decorate their dolls' clothes is the latest freak of fashion, not only for gowns, but for shirt waists. Gowns are worked in the simple stitch in braid patterns and usually in self colors. Shirt waists stamped with braid patterns are outlined with the loose chain stitch. Stems with coarse, solid work are also made in this way.

The clever girl who makes laundry books for presents selects a neat rice paper for the leaves and cuts the double cover from red paper of a heavy variety, then ties the leaves together with red baby ribbon. Between the leaves of white paper are blue carbon paper slips, so that a duplicate copy is made when one marks off her laundry. This makes a handy booklet and one that would be appreciated by any woman who must send a list of laundry to her laundress and keep one herself.

Candlesticks Again in Favor.

The woman whose aim is to reveal a touch of the artist in her home just at present is interested in the old fashioned candlestick. It is a revival as happy in its way as that of the return to favor of Sheffield or pewter ware. The candle held its own against the oil lamp, but lost its popularity when gas came in, and it was practically outlawed when electricity came into general use. Now, however, many women of society are using candles extensively. One society leader, in fact, has gone to the extreme of having electric fixtures removed from several rooms, relying entirely upon candles for lighting. These candles she displays in antique candlesticks of beaten brass. Tall Russian candlesticks now are seen on many library tables, and tall silver colonial sticks are on many dressing tables. New candlesticks are shown in pottery and wrought iron, but antiques are first in favor. The prices of old brass candlesticks have advanced greatly in the last few weeks, and few now are to be found in the antique shops.

To Clean Chamois Skin.

An excellent way to restore chamois skins that have become stiff and soiled is to rub them through a strong solution of cold water and household ammonia, later rinsing thoroughly in clear cold water to soften. Pin to the line to dry in the sun and rub through the hand slightly.

A clever, popular Candy Cold Cure Tablet—called Preventics—is being dispensed by druggists everywhere. In a few hours, Preventics are said to break any cold completely. And Preventics, being so safe and toothsome, are very fine for children. No Quinine, no laxative, nothing harsh nor sickening. Box of 48—25c. Sold by all dealers.

VISCOUNT KITCHENER.

A Brief Biography of Soldier Who May Visit Canada.

General Horatio Herbert, first Viscount Kitchener of Khartoum—who has just completed the great work he undertook in 1902 of reorganizing the British Indian Army—was born on Midsummer Day at Ballylongford, in the County Kerry.

During his exceptionally brilliant military career the retiring Indian commander has asserted himself with characteristic confidence and unbending will, and Lord Kitchener must be accounted one of the most strenuous soldiers that the British Empire has ever possessed.

Coming of a military family, Lord Kitchener passed thirty-eight years ago from Woolwich into the Royal Engineers. Since then his career has been one of scintillating brilliance for "K. of K."—as he is now often called "for short"—has been to the fore in many expeditions and campaigns, and has "built himself an everlasting name" for thoroughness in the profession of arms.

A veritable "glutton for work," he assisted in the Palestine survey in 1874-78 and that of Cyprus of 1878-82.

Then he was sent to Egypt, and entrusted with the command of the Khedive's cavalry and the remodelling of the native army. Having effected this to his own exacting desiring, he, as Sirdar, conducted a vigorous opposition to the forces of the Khalifa. He found it necessary to build a railway to Omdurman before he finally broke the power of the prophet, annihilating the Khalifa's army in 1898.

By this time he had reached the rank of major-general and been made a K.C.B., and he came home covered with Egyptian honors, to receive the thanks of the British Parliament, a peerage, and a grant of £30,000.

In the year following, when matters seemed to be going wrong with our forces engaged against the Boers in South Africa, Lord Kitchener was sent out as Chief of Staff to Lord Roberts. Here, again, he distinguished himself for determination and dash in combination; and when Cronje had been circumvented at Paardeberg and the British flag hoisted in Pretoria, he was promoted to the commandership of the forces in South Africa on Lord Roberts' return to England.

Kitchener brought the long campaign to a close. Again the gallant fighter and fine organizer was thanked by Parliament, given a further £50,000 from the country's public purse, and raised in the peerage to a viscounty.

As a full general he was sent out in 1902 to India as Commander-in-Chief with practically a free hand to reform the army of our great Empire of the Orient. His ideals of duty brooking no civilian interference in matters military, Viscount Kitchener soon came into conflict with the then Viceroy, Lord Curson, and the friction ensued in the resignation of that able statesman in 1905.

Since then Lord Kitchener has practically been permitted to have his own way at headquarters in India; and on the completion of his task in the Orient, he is credited by some with hankering after overthrowing the influence of the non-military element in the War Office for good and all.

Barrister's First Brief.

My first brief I have the best of reasons for remembering particularly clearly. I was engaged for the defence in a case of robbery. Two men, the prisoners, had seized the prosecutor on the platform of Shrewsbury Station, and while one of them held his arms the other quietly rifled his pockets.

They were caught red-handed, and I had a brief to defend the prisoner who had held the prosecutor by the arms. I made the obvious defence I urged that it was vindictive to sacrifice two victims to justice when one would suffice, that the distinction between the two prisoners was manifest, and as the one I defended had not taken any money at all it was impossible to pretend that he was as guilty as his companion.

To the amazement of everybody, not excepting the chairman—who had been careful in his summing up to sweep away my sophistries—the jury made the distinction I suggested to them, and returned a verdict of "Not guilty" against my prisoner.—"Reminiscences of Mr. A. C. Plowden," in The Strand Magazine.

A Pageant of Priests.

Pageants have so far illustrated the history of a single town or city, but the one held recently in the grounds of Fulham Palace, London, was unique. It depicted the growth and history of the Church of England.

It was split up into a number of episodes, and, beginning with the publication of the Edict of Emperor Constantine, came right down through the ages to the acquittal of the Seven Bishops in 1688. A final tableau, representing the church "throughout the world," concluded the gigantic spectacle.

The grounds of Fulham Palace, lent by the Bishop of London, were well fitted for such a purpose.

The spectators were housed in a grand stand, 324 feet in length, 80 feet in depth, and covering an acre of ground. In addition to a large royal box, there was seating accommodation for 6,750. His Grace the Archbishop of Canterbury performed the opening ceremony.

An Amiable Violinist.

Robert Browning and Joachim met one evening at a friendly gathering in London. The violinist had "obliged" without satisfying certain ladies, who entreated the poet to obtain from him another solo. Browning, feeling the deficacy of his task, discharged it diplomatically and spoke, as some times he wrote, so as to conceal his thoughts, while the violinist, not understanding, bowed and smiled and did not play.

"Oh," said the poet, "I wanted you to give us some more music."

"Then, why did you not come and say, 'Joe, old boy, give us another tune?'" returned the amiable violinist

THE ROSEDALE LOCK.

The work on the Rosedale lock and canal is progressing nicely, says the Lindsay Warder. The contractor expects to have all the concrete work completed this week and the gates for the locks are almost completed and will be finished on the arrival of some hardware necessary for the job. The Lindsay lock gates will be put in at Rosedale on the completion of the gates now in hand. It is expected that the dredge will remove the small quantity of earth that is keeping the water from the locks as soon as the gates are put in place.

Don't Risk even a penny—until health returns. And I mean just exactly that.

I am the one physician who says to the sick, "I will, out of my own pocket, pay for your medicine if it fails to bring you help!"

And for 20 years Dr. Shoop's medicines have been used and recommended in every city and hamlet in America. They are positively standard in every community—and everywhere.

Get Health

Then why pay the cash, and at your risk, for other unwarranted and uncertain medicines? Thousands upon thousands have in the past successfully used Dr. Shoop's Restorative.

When the stomach is ill, or the heart nerves fail, you know how Dr. Shoop's Restorative will bring them back to health again. But best of all, they positively take no money risk whatever.

First

They know that when health fails to return Dr. Shoop will himself gladly pay the druggist for that test. And for that test a full 30 day treatment is freely granted.

But write me first for an order.

This will save delay and disappointment.

All druggists sell Dr. Shoop's Restorative and Dr. Shoop's Rheumatic Remedy, but we prefer to have you get the first direct from us. Then all are spared the disappointment of having to accept substitutes. Simply write me, and an honest and responsible druggist in almost every community, every where, so long my "no pay, no pay," medicines to the sick.

Then

Tell me also which book you need.

The books below will surely open up new and helpful ideas to those who are not well. Besides if you are perfectly free to consult me just as you would your home physician. My advice and the book below are yours—and without cost.

Pay

Perhaps a word or two from me will clear up some perplexing ailment I have helped thousands upon thousands by my private prescription or personal advice plan. My best effort is surely worth your simple request. So write now while you have it fresh in mind, for tomorrow never comes. Dr. Shoop, Box 12, Racine, Wis.

"Then, why did you not come and say, 'Joe, old boy, give us another tune!'" returned the amiable violinist.

To Acquire Pink Cheeks.

If for some special occasion—a dance or party, for instance—you wish to have pink cheeks, Miss Palefrace, try this method and see if it doesn't draw the blood to your soft cheeks and leave them a delicate pink for three or four hours: Rub cold cream into the face with a rotary movement and then wipe the superfluous cream off; rub more cream in and then rub what is left of that off. Now wash the face in warm water and then rinse it in cold water, dashing it over the face repeatedly with the hands. Now, to obtain the fresh pink color take a small piece of ice and cover it with the corner of the towel and rub it repeatedly over the cheeks. This will give a fine color which will last for hours.

As a rule, every girl who has a white complexion with but little color to the cheeks longs for a rosy complexion, and in nine cases out of ten if she cannot increase the color in her cheeks by some natural method she will end by using a rouge, which, ten chances to one, is harmful. As a matter of fact, it is vastly more becoming to some people to be pale than to have pink cheeks, and if they have a healthy, transparent skin they should feel proud to think that they have what few people can have—a white complexion that is white or cream, but not yellow.

Pretty Summer Rugs.

Effective rugs for the summer cottage or bungalow or for porch use come in blue and white, old rose and white, green and white, with landscape border in Japanese style.

The border consists of several guarded old trees or of wave effects in contrasting color woven into a white background. The rugs are very inexpensive.

JUNE'S BUILDING BOOM.

Canadian Cities Are Going Ahead In Construction Work.

"Construction," the organ of the building trade, has just issued a review of the building statistics for the month of June. From these it appears that the month was one of universal gains and no decreases. Extraordinarily high percentages were attained in all sections of the country, and the average increase for the month, 103 per cent, as based on the comparative figures supplied by seventeen of the twenty cities reporting, exceeds any of the big excessive gains made heretofore this year, and is probably the greatest advance ever recorded in the building history of the Dominion. Two cities exceeded the two million mark, another had over half that amount, and ten additional places registered totals varying from one to six hundred thousand dollars, for permits issued during the month.

Winnipeg shows the largest volume of new work undertaken, her total being $2,041,645, as against $802,200 for the previous June. Toronto is second in this respect and Montreal next, their figures being $2,011,545 and $1,170,790, in order named, as compared with $1,055,405 and $559,972, for the corresponding period of last year; the relative increase in all three cases being 154 per cent., 90 per cent. and 109 per cent., respectively. The largest increase per cent. for the month has been recorded by Moosejaw, which comes to the crest of the wave with a striking gain of 1,056 per cent. The second largest increase for the month is noted in the case of Brandon. Reports from various centres throughout Ontario indicate plainly that building operations are going on at a tremendous rate. In addition to Toronto's increase, Fort William reclaimed herself from her decrease of 5 per cent. in May, by a gain of 94 per cent. Peterboro made an increase of 119 per cent., London 106, Berlin 56, and Hamilton 5 per cent. Windsor's total investment for the month was $48,550, while the value of the permits of Port Arthur amounted to $17,600. Fort William's aggregate total for the first six months of this year, that of $3,000,000, is one-third gain as great as she recorded for the whole of 1908, and equally as good a showing has been made in several of the other cities of the province.

RACING FOR THE PASS

YELLOWHEAD ROUTE DISCOVERED MANY YEARS AGO.

Viscount Milton and Dr. Cheadle in 1863 Spent Three Months Going From Edmonton to Kamloops Through the Narrow Cleft in the Mountains—Severe Privations and Laborious Travel.

From time to time there come out of the west reports regarding a race now going on between two great railway systems, the goal of which is the Yellowhead Pass. Each, it is said, is straining every nerve to be the first to locate and build its line through that famous passage across the Rocky Mountains. In that passage there is ample room and about facilities for both so that the result of the race is not of paramount importance. The important thing is that here two transcontinental railway systems propose crossing the Rocky Mountains and striking the Pacific coast at points far north of the existing British Columbia ports. This means not only new railways, but new areas opened to development and settlement.

The Yellowhead Pass is not now engaging for the first time the attention of railway builders. Thirty years ago the Canadian Government caused a preliminary survey of the pass to be made, the intention then being to build through the pass the Government railway which had been promised British Columbia upon its entrance into Confederation. A few years later the railway project was turned over to the present Canadian Pacific Co., and the latter, having selected Vancouver as its western terminus, naturally looked for a more southerly passage through the Rocky Mountains. Kicking Horse Pass, the one in use to-day, was selected, and the Yellowhead Pass was left to enjoy a third of a century more of solitude. But its solitude has at length been broken upon. The engineers have come and taken their levels and driven their stakes. Close on their heels will follow the construction gangs. They will carry the highway of steel through the mountains, and soon these valleys and gorges will be resounding with the whistle of the locomotive.

The pass is heavily wooded, and the shadow of the forest and still deeper shadow of mountain gorges hang over the greater part of its extent. It has changed very little since that summer, forty-six years ago, when two adventurous young Englishman, Viscount Milton and Dr. Cheadle, accompanied by an Indian guide and his wife and a very eccentric camp-follower, journeyed from Edmonton to the Pacific slope by way of the Yellowhead Pass.

It was a remarkable journey, during which the little party, toiling through dense forests, wallowing in almost impenetrable swamps and crossing on rafts turbulent rivers, endured great suffering and encountered grave dangers. Their supply of food became exhausted and it was only by killing and eating their miserable horses that they were able to sustain life until an Indian camp on the Thompson River was reached. By a very narrow margin indeed did they escape a miserable death from starvation. The two Englishmen wrote a graphic account of their journey and from its fascinating pages can here and there be gleaned descriptions of the Yellowhead Pass—especially interesting now that the pass is soon to become one of the thoroughfares of the Dominion.

It was on June 3, 1863, that Milton and Cheadle set out from Fort Edmonton for the Yellowhead Pass, their plan being to cross the Rockies, enter upper British Columbia and then follow one of the rivers down to the coast.

After days of weary travel they came in sight of the Rockies. "The prospect was a most glorious one," wrote the travelers, "and most exhilirating to us, who had lived so long in level country, and for the past three weeks had been buried in dense forests, which shut out every prospect, and almost the light of day.

Ranges of pine-clad hills, running nearly north and south, rose in higher and higher succession towards the west, and in the further distance we could see parallel to them a range of rugged, rocky peaks, backed by the snow-clad summits of some giants which towered up beyond. The snow which crowned the loftier peaks, and still lingered in the hollows of the lower hills, glittered in the brilliant sunlight through the soft blue haze which mellowed the scene, and brought the far-distant mountains seemingly close before us. A cleft in the ridge, cut clean as if with a knife, showed us what we supposed to be the opening of the gorge through which we were to pass. The singular rock on the left or eastern side of this gateway, somewhat like the half of a sponge-cake cut vertically, we knew must be the one of which we had heard as La Roche a Myette, close to Jasper House.

Coming to Jasper House, which stood at the eastern entrance to the pass, they found it "a neat, white building surrounded by a palisade, standing in a perfect garden of wild flowers." It was a noted trading post in its day, and one of the principal avenues of the Edmonton of the present time is named after it.

It was after leaving the pass that the travelers suffered the most threatening dangers. Between the pass and the Thompson river were miles of forest labyrinth through which they had to cut their way. Their progress was slow and their supply of provisions now about exhausted. Starvation stared them in the face. They killed their pack-horses and managed to subsist on the flesh until they reached an Indian camp, where food was procured. They were now passing out of the forest, greater progress was made and soon after they came to a district where were many Indian camps from which fish and game were obtained. It was late in August when they reached Kamloops, the journey from Edmonton having occupied almost three months.

LUCK OF AN M.P.P.

How Bob Shillington of Temiskaming Got More Than His Share.

'Tis a lucky man has a pull with the cook. Mr Robert T. Shillington, newly-elected member of the Ontario Legislature for the riding of Temiskaming, has not been long in politics, but has seen enough of life to appreciate the truth of the maxim. This summer he spent a holiday fishing in Temagami. Now, Shillington, M.P.P., erstwhile of Sparks street, Ottawa, may be a good fisher of men, and most lovers of Canada's National game know what he can do in front of a lacrosse net. But he proved a very poor fisher of fish on this occasion. He fished all day, and all he caught was one miserable little minnow-like specimen barely up to the regulation length.

It is the custom at the Temagami Inn, of which Dan O'Connor, locally known as the "King of Temagami," is proprietor, for successful fishermen guests to carry their trophies around to the back door and there deliver them into the hands of the obliging cook. Then they await, with what patience may be theirs, the moment when the finny delicacy, all dressed and brown, shall be laid before them on the table.

Now, it so happened that there were other Nimrods besides Shillington at the Inn that day, and all the fish caught were not minnows. Some few minutes before the district's Parliamentary representative arrived at the back door, two young fellows had also sought the portal of culinary bliss and delivered up a couple of beautiful black bass that were almost as large and weighty as the ones that figure in "got-off-the-line" stories.

These young men, with appetites as long as their lines, entering the dining-room and awaited the bringing on of the steaming repast. At last a waiter set before them a platter containing a square inch or so of fish. Swallowing the morsel, they declared the sample excellent, and asked that the rest of the fish be brought on at once.

"The rest of the fish?" said the waiter. "There is no rest."

And then a row ensued. The successful fishermen were good talkers, and they fired some hot shot. They swore it was a put-up job—a swindle, and finally demanded an investigation.

Then it came to light that, by mistake, the two big fish had been served to Bob Shillington, M.P.P., but by that time he had eaten them both.

In the Senate.

The Senators of Canada are variously distinguished. Boucher de Boucherville, from Quebec, is the oldest, though only 87, a mere infant compared with some of his confreres, recently deceased. Hon. Hewitt Bostock, from British Columbia, is the youngest, just 45, almost too young for the company he keeps. There are also the wittiest—Domville, of New Brunswick, is our choice — and the wealthiest; and though all are wise, there must be one wiser than the rest.

W. Dell Perley, from Saskatchewan, whose death last week still further reduced the rapidly-thinning ranks of the Conservatives in the Upper House, was the biggest physically. Originally, a St. John River farmer, he went west in the first boom days of Manitoba, ignoring the maxim that a man is a fool who moves after forty. His first attempt at prairie farming was unsuccessful and he decided to return to New Brunswick. In a crowded shack at Brandon, which did duty for a hotel, on a cold, wet October night, he met Dr. Silas Alward from St. John, who talked Mr. Perley out of his fit of homesickness, and he returned to Assiniboia to prosper beyond his most sanguine hopes, and to become eventually member of Parliament and Senator for his adopted home.

Sir Wilfrid and Family Prayer.

The death of Rev. Dr. Williams of Montreal, recently, recalls a circumstance that concerns Sir Wilfrid Laurier, and that is vouched for by a prominent public man of Toronto, says a religious exchange.

Mrs. Williams was a daughter of Mr. Murray of Quebec, one of the old Puritan stock. Up to the age of eighteen Wilfrid Laurier could not speak a word of English, and he went to live in the home of Mr. Murray for the purpose of learning English. It was Mr. Murray's habit to read a portion of Scripture and have family prayer every morning, and the French-Canadian boy was told that he might remain during these devotions if he wished to. He did so, and was a member of the family circle for about four years.

After he had become distinguished in the public affairs of the Dominion, a friend who knew of his association with the family of Mr. Murray, asked him what effect it had on him, and his answer was at once an honest appreciation of good living and a tribute to principle. Said Sir Wilfrid:

"The sterling integrity of character and uprightness of life displayed in the home of Mr. Murray made such an impression upon me that I will never shake it off as long as I live."

In Search of Coal.

A party of prospectors has left Prince Albert on a six months' trip to the country lying between Ile la Crosse and Athabasca Lake. They have been sent out by the Lands branch of the Canadian Department of the Interior, and will work their way across to Fort McMurray by water, and return by dog trains. The object of the expedition is to discover definitely what coal deposits are in the north, and to find further outcrops which the Indians report to have found from time to time.

Indian Skeleton Found.

While workmen were digging clay in a brickyard in St. Boniface Man., the other day they unearthed a skeleton of an old Indian in perfect condition. Upon his breast was a peculiarly-shaped little cup, which had been filled with hazel nuts.

Conundrums.

Why are tallest people the laziest? Because they are always longer in bed than others.

Why was Job always cold in bed? Because he had such miserable comforters.

What is the proper length for ladies' skirts? A little above two feet.

Why is a dyer's life an enigma? Because he lives when he dyes and dyes when he lives.

What is the greatest affair of the heart known to science? The circulation of the blood.

FADS OF CRIMINALS.

Murderers Who Were Particular as to Personal Appearance.

Oscar Slater, who murdered Miss Gilchrist in her Glasgow flat, proved himself a typical dandy even in the condemned cell and also a stickler for the proprieties. He insisted, for instance, from the very beginning in being called "Mr." Slater, and each morning he changed his linen, varied his neckwear and demanded polished boots.

Similar exhibitions of strutting peacock vanity are not uncommon on the part of men doomed to die on the gallows. Wainwright on the day preceding his execution absolutely refused to dress because his clean linen had not arrived from the laundry, and a new shirt and collar had to be bought for him. When the evening arrived—his last on earth—he craved a smoke. A pipe and tobacco were brought to him, but he rejected them with disdain. He would have a cigar. And he got it.

Lefroy, who murdered poor old Mr. Gold in a railway carriage on the way to Brighton, wore an evening dress suit during the whole of the period that elapsed between his condemnation and his execution; also he was greatly upset at the refusal of the authorities to allow him to be hanged in a new silk hat presented to him in court.

As a rule, however, the thoughts of the condemned turn mostly toward food. Rush, the Stansfield Hall murderer, was an educated man. "I want my slippers and The Times," were his first words on returning to jail after his conviction. But a little later he called for pen and paper and wrote out an order for his next day's dinner, 'Pig and plenty of apple sauce."

In those days it was the custom to give capital convicts whatever they asked for in the way of food. But the rule was abolished soon afterward, one of the first delinquents to come under the new regulations being a certain Jeffrey, who murdered his six-year-old child by hanging him in a cellar in Seven Dials. He was unaware of the alteration and called for a roast duck directly he entered the condemned cell, and when it was refused him he behaved so violently that he had to be put in a straitjacket.—Pearson's Weekly.

The Genesis of the Cravat.

Cravats date from the incursion of the Croats into French territory during the Thirty Years' War. The French termed these invaders "Cravates," and a freak of fashion made their somewhat clumsy neckgear popular about 1636. The fancy must have spread very rapidly, for we find lace cravats with broad ends hanging in front replacing the wide collars of the cavaliers during the earlier stages of the civil war in England. Charles II. made white cravats a part of the uniform of his life and dragoon guards. The palmy period of the cravat was early in the eighteenth century, when these articles were made of the very finest lace and were so expensive that even the richest of fashionable young men could not afford to have more than two of them in their wardrobes.

A Rare Opportunity.

When the circus came to Bushby the large attendance was a surprise to Squire Hemis and he said so to William Hamlin, the postmaster.

"It is natural that men and children should wish to go," remarked the squire in his formal tone, "but I must confess to a feeling of amazement on hearing that the ladies of the town had flocked to see wild beasts and that young woman who leaps from one wire to another, with no regard for her personal safety."

"Tell you just how 'tis, square," said Mr. Hamlin confidentially. "I don't think many of the women folks planned to go till Jed Potter came in here one mail time and told Miss Emma Sollee he understood the show was enough to scare anybody out of ten years' growth.

"Miss Emma's getting on, and you couldn't expect her to let a chance like that go—nor any of the other women, now, could ye?"

Keep Your Temper.

Which of all the domestic virtues is most essential to a happy married life? The ability to keep one's temper, beyond all question.

There is nothing which leads more to misery, not only for its possessor, but also for those about him, than an ungovernable and unreasonable temper. No one is worse to live with than an ill tempered man, except perhaps an ill tempered woman.

Bad tempered people consciously spoil the lives of those who associate with them. The feeling of strain is ever present. One never knows just when the storm will break, although apparently the weather, metaphorically, is "set fair." Life in these circumstances becomes a burden almost beyond bearing.

Caught Her.

"I am looking for something nice for a young man," said the young and pretty shopper.

"Why don't you look in the mirror?" asked the gallant clerk.

And she was so flustered that he managed to sell her four different things that she did not want before she knew what she was doing.

MAN'S ENEMIES.

The Small Foes Are the Most Deadly and Destructive.

In one of Herbert Wells' brilliant stories the terribly scientific and practically invincible Martians who have invaded the earth and conquered England are stopped in the midst of their victories and utterly destroyed by the attacks of microscopic foes. Infinitely small organisms, germs of diseases to which man has become in some degree immune, slay the wonderful warriors of a planet never invaded by these earth foes. What the greatest battleships and the heaviest guns could not do the unseen and unknown living seeds of death accomplish.

More clearly every day the world understands that in the life and affairs of mankind the most deadly and destructive foes are extremely small. All of the fierce mammals and poisonous serpents of Africa do not kill as many human beings in ten years as the horse fly slays in one. The tigers and cobras of India kill their thousands every year, but the rats which spread the germs of the bubonic plague destroy their tens of thousands. In this country the common housefly undoubtedly causes more deaths than all the venomous snakes, wild beasts and dogs, runaway horses and ill tempered bulls ten times over. The actual proportion is probably much higher than ten to one.

MAN AND MONKEY.

Difference Between the Human and Animal Method of Thought.

The difference between the animal and the human idea of what constitutes "knowing" comes out nicely in a piece of work done at Clark university—A. J. Kinnman's study of rhesus monkeys, the Bandar-log of the "Jungle Book."

The monkey, following the usual procedure, learned to get his food from a box, the lid of which fastened with a key. The key, however, could not be withdrawn from the lock. After the monkey had become familiar with the device and could operate it as readily as a man could do the experimenter took the key out of the lock and laid it on the floor in front of the box. The monkey picked up the key, played with it, but made no attempt to use it. Then the experimenter took up the key, and, fifty times in succession, with the monkey two feet away watching every motion, he unlocked the box. The monkey would have starved before he imitated that simple act. He had learned to open the box by making certain movements. He had no idea of the key as an instrument in the process. We sometimes think instruments and means and causes. The animal thinks largely nothing.—E. L. Bronston in McClure's Magazine.

GRAND OPERA HOUSE.

The Burgomaster, Pixley & Luder's musical masterpiece, was the opening attraction at the Grand Opera House last night. That the Burgomaster took well was evidenced by the enthusiastic applause from the very large audience present. Harry Hermsen and his big company made a decided hit. The Kangaro chorus was a favorite and if the Grand can produce plays of that standard all season there will always be a big house.

The opera house has been completely overhauled since last season. The interior has been redecorated and the prevailing colors are two shades of green with trimming in colors. The woodwork is all white with stripe of gold. Over the six boxes have been hung canopies with curtains of beautiful and rich appearance. On the whole the Grand Opera House presents a very pleasing and attractive appearance, and bears evidence of the energy of the proprietors, Messrs J. J. Turner & Sons, and their desire to please their patrons.

INWARD CLEANING.

Assures Outward Beauty.

No greater mistake than to imagine that regularity is a sign of good health—it is an advantage, but if your skin is murky and your spirits dull, it is the surest sign that nature is lagging a little. Now by lagging is meant that the liver is a little lazy—the kidneys weak—the stomach failing just a little in its work. It may be a little of all three.

Just one remedy—inward cleansing with Dr. Hamilton's Pills. This removes, so to speak, a cobweb here and there, a visible sign of careless inward house-cleaning.

Dr. Hamilton's Pills insure beauty give a dainty complexion, act upon the skin, upon your spirits. Some will ask, How do Dr. Hamilton's Pills act? Why mildly, of course, but very effectively upon that great trio of health, the stomach, liver and kidneys.

To get that robust, hearty health, to have the sparkle of vigor, to look and feel always at your best, tone and regulate your system with Dr. Hamilton's Pills. Thousands find this advice good—so will you—refuse a substitute for Dr. Hamilton's Pills of Mandrake and Butternut. 25c per box, all dealers, or The Catarrhozone Co., Kingston, Canada.

PRESSED HARD.

Coffee's Weight on Old Age.

When prominent men realize the injurious effects of coffee and the change in health that Postum can bring, they are glad to lend their testimony for the benefit of others.

A superintendent of public schools in North Carolina, says:

"My mother, since her early childhood, was an inveterate coffee drinker and had been troubled with her heart for a number of years, and complained of that 'weak all over' feeling and sick stomach.

"Some time ago, I was making an official visit to a distant part of the country and took dinner with one of the merchants of the place. I noticed a somewhat peculiar flavour of the coffee, and asked him concerning it. He replied that it was Postum.

"I was so pleased with it, that after the meal was over, I bought a package to carry home with me, and had wife prepare some for the next meal. The whole family liked it so well that we discontinued coffee and used Postum entirely.

"I had really been at times very anxious concerning my mother's condition, but we noticed that after using Postum for a short time, she felt so much better than she did prior to its use, and had little trouble with her heart and no sick stomach; that the headaches were not so frequent, and her general condition much improved. This continued until she was as well and hearty as the rest of us.

"I know Postum has benefited myself and the other members of the family, but not in so marked a degree as in the case of my mother, as she was a victim of long standing." "

A WELSH FESTIVAL.

Eisteddfod is Opened by Musicians in London.

In a pretty glade in Kensington Gardens, in London, near the Serpentine, the Welsh bards celebrated recently the ritual of the Gorsedd which marks the opening of the national eisteddfod.

According to the ancient tradition, the rites must be performed "in the face of the sun, the eye of light," and though the somber skies made it impossible to carry out the letter of the law, it was fulfilled sufficiently in the spirit by the performance of the rites in a druidical circle erected in the open air.

The circle consists of unhewn stones, outside of which three other stones are placed. In the centre of the circle is the Maen Llog, a large stone supported on three others.

A trumpeter, standing upon this stone, sounded the Corn Gwlad, thus formally opening the Gorsedd, and the prayer of the Gorsedd was recited in Welsh.

The bards, in their blue, green and white robes, presented a striking spectacle, and the insignia of his office rendered Dyfed, the archdruid, a notable figure. With his flowing white robe, oakleaf crown, and golden torque of horseshoe shape, he was impressive indeed as he mounted the Maen Llog and cried aloud thrice in a voice of thunder the formal challenge, "A oes Heddwch?" (Is it Peace?).

"Heddwch!" the assembly shouted, and Dyfed sheathed again the eight-foot sword which, in symbolic rite, he had half drawn from its scabbard.

Breech-making in Welsh followed, and then the bards and onlookers trooped off to the Albert Hall, where the eisteddfod met.

The proceedings at the hall during the morning were disappointing in a great many ways, and there appeared to be a deplorable lack of organization.

The best singing was heard in the chief choral competition, in which the first prize went to the Carnarvon Choral Society, and the second to the Llanelly Choral Society.

At the afternoon meeting Mr. Balfour made a most interesting speech in praise of music.

"Music has ever been one of the great arts in which Welshmen have excelled," he stated. "There cannot be a gift which carries with it higher pleasures—pleasures more easy of attainment, pleasures which leave no after-sting, no after-taste of evil, but which raise and must raise the whole level of civilised pleasures among the people who practice them.

"Music knows no national barrier; music is not subject to the limitations which unhappily beset language. Music speaks to men of all races and of all tongues."

Costly Pennies.

Who was Wigla? Numismatists know, and gave £440 for two of his silver pennies at Sotheby's. Wiglaf, or Withlafe, as his name is sometimes spelt in the old chronicles, was that King of Mercia tributary to Egbert, first King of England, and held nominal sway between 825 and 839. His silver penny, without bust, with a cross in centre and a pellet in each angle within a beaded centre on the obverse, and lunettes and pellets on the reverse, caused exciting bidding, which reached £276 (Spink). Only one other of this particular type is known, and it is fortunately in the British Museum. Another Wiglaf penny, with a rude head in a circle and a cross-crosslet in centre of reverse, realised £174 (Lincoln). This was found at Dorking in 1817. The sale was that of the famous Rashleigh collection. A penny of Egberht (765-791)—not to be confounded with Ecgberht, son of Offa of Mercia, but the King of Kent mentioned in old charters—without a bust, but with the King's name, made £153 (Lincoln). Only three other coins of this type are known, two being in the Hunter Museum, Glasgow. An East Anglian penny of Eadvald, 810-827, realised £58 (Lincoln), and one of Jaenberht, who was Archbishop of Canterbury between 796 and 190, £33. This was discovered near Netley Abbey, and wears the names of Offa and the Archbishop. In the digging of the foundation for the Martyrs' Memorial at Oxford, another of this prelate's pennies was found, and this fetched £20. A penny with the diademed bust of Cynethryth, who was Offa's Queen, made £30 (Spink).

Lord Balcarres as a Walker.

It was Lord Balcarres, a trustee of the National Portrait Gallery, who announced the saving to England of Holbein's picture, "The Duchess of Milan." His lordship has crowded much good work into his thirty-seven years of life. Not only has he distinguished himself in the cause of art and architecture — he is a trained architect—but he has also served the state in the House of Commons as one of the Unionist Whips. A notable characteristic is his rapid walk. "Barns' gallop is nowhere in it with Balcarres' walk," growled a recalcitrant member on one occasion after being fetched back to the neverending divisions while trying to escape. "It's no good unless you see streaks ahead."

Helping the Enemy.

A coal heaver was getting in a load of coal in the suburbs of London. He was shoveling in the coal at a good rate when he was startled by a terrific yell from the house adjoining.

"Wot the dickens is the matter?" queried the coal man, starting up.

A dishevelled looking individual made his appearance at the door.

"Matter, you thickhead!" shouted the man, frantically endeavoring to pull his hair up in clots by the roots. "You are putting the coal down the wrong hole. My wife's people live there!"—London Tit-Bits.

Election Protest.

A motion was made by Mr. J. Grayson Smith, on behalf of the Hon. J. R. Stratton, before the Hon. Justice Magee at Osgoode Hall, in the city of Toronto, Wednesday afternoon, for an order to commit Mr. J. Hamilton Burnham for contempt of Court, or else to attend at his own expense and answer the questions that were submitted to him on his examination on the 16th inst. and to produce letters and papers and documents called for. It is alleged that by certain alleged detectives in the employ of the petitioner trying to get evidence against Mr. Burnham and others on his behalf as to alleged detectives, notwithstanding that he was being examined under the Cross Petition, in which it is alleged that these detectives were really working for Burnham as canvassers in his election, and were treating and bribing voters. An affidavit was filed upon the motion showing that one of these alleged detectives admitted that he had received several hundred dollars from Mr. J. H. Burnham and his official agent, Mr. James Kenny, and others, to work for Mr. Burnham during his election and he further admitted that he spoke to electors in Mr. Burnham's interest, and that he spent considerable money in treating electors.

Mr. J. A. Jones of Toronto, represented Mr. Burnham on the motion. After a lengthy argument lasting several hours, Mr. Justice Magee ordered Mr. Burnham to attend and answer all questions regarding his dealings and transactions with the alleged detectives, and to attend for examination forthwith at his own expense. The costs of the motion were directed to be paid by Mr. Burnham in any event.

PETERBOROUGH'S BIG FAIR BREAKING ALL RECORDS FOR ATTENDANCE

Holland Boy Won a Sensational Race Great Sport at Fair

Peterborough never saw better horse races than the two put on yesterday afternoon at the fair. In the 2.40 class there were seven starters and in the 2.20 class six horses faced the judges. Every heat was a race and every heat was driven right up to the mark. The 2.40 class was a sensational race. The green horses went out and trotted in .24¼ and they were driven to it. Lou Keswick took the race in three heats but she had to go 'her fastest.

The horses which started were:

Lulu Chimes	3	3	4
Sparkle	4	5	3
Indiana Boy	5	4	5
Queen Bourbon	6	6	6
Herklan	7	7	da

Time—2.24¼, 2.24¼, 2.26.

HOLLAND'S BOY'S RACE.

Old Holland Boy was the crowd's favorite in the 2.22 class, and he won on his merits and carried off the honors with head up, tail out, and stepping high. The old bay is the gamest old horse on the Canadian turf. He is 24 years of age and he travels in less than 2.22 without the use of a whip. He is a real race horse and one that would r ather race than eat oats. There is not a horse on the continent today the age of Holland Boy that can go the clip he does. The way he finishes and wins what looks like a hopeless heat is marvelous. You can almost see him smile as he sticks his nose under the wire first. He travels without a boot or a hobble and there is not a scratch or a blemish on him. When he is not racing he is taking the doctor all over the country, and at all hours of the night and over all kinds of roads. When Holland Boy won the fourth heat the crowd cheered enthusiastically, but the old fellow had to go for Silver Tail leb all the way and looked like a winner until the last few yards.

The 2.22 class was one of the best races ever run over the Peterborfor the money, and the horses were ough track. Thedrivers were all out out for a time.

The result was:

Holland Boy 2	1	1	1
Fourbon Brooks 1	3	5	4
Silver Tail	6	5	2
Planet	3	2	3
Patterson	4	4	4
Lady Gothard 5	6	6	6

Time—2.21 3-5, 2.21¼, 2.21¼, 2.21¼.

Dr. Sinclair, Cannington, starter; Jas. O'Neil, Cobourg, judge; Dr. King and C. H. Saul, timers.

Some Special Exhibits at Peterboro' Fair

By no means are the exhibits of those competing for prizes the only feature of the fair. The exhibits of the local merchants and manufacturers and outside manufacturers are a big thing. Many people are interested in these lines of goods and the exhibits are visited by hundreds if not thousands and a lot of business is done on the grounds by the merchants and salesmen. A Times reporter in walking around saw the following displays which it will pay all to see:

Fitzgerald & Company's Carriages and Buggies.

One of the most attractive exhibits on the grounds are the six or more buggies and runabouts made by Fitzgerald & Co., at the Peterborough Carriage Factory. The steel tired rubber rigs are guaranteed for two years and the rubber tired rigs are guaranteed for one year. They are $75 and $100 respectively. They are all hand made from Florida hickory, imported direct from Florida. There is no bought wood in them. This means that the Fitzgerald beggy is the best on the market and it cannot be beaten for durability, strength and finish. The exhibit is in the tent just west of the main hall. Don't miss seeing this display.

Premier Cream Separator— A. B. Downer, Agent.

The Premier Cream Separator is made in Toronto, and is sold in this district by Mr. A. B. Downer. It is one of the best seperators yet put on the market as a great many farmers in this district can testify. Mr. Vickers of Toronto, is in charge of the display and he is meeting a great many prospective buyers. The Premier Separator will go up against any machine of its kind and win out.

White & Gillespie's Dairy Exhibit.

The majority of the dairy farmers of this district have or will visit White & Gillespie's tent just outside the main hall. This reliable firm handles the Simplex cream Separator, the Eureka Sanitary Churns and the Eureka Root Cutters, Wyandotte Cleaner and Cleaner, International Stock and Poultry Food. Their goods are found all over this district. Everybody knows them and do not hesitate to purchase their goods. The exhibit is in charge of Mr. R. A. Peters and all visitors are welcome to call and Mr. Peters will give them all the information desired.

The G. W. Green's Exhibit of Improved Mill Machinery.

With commendable enterprise, the G. Walter Green Company, Limited, of McDonel street, west, have erected on the grounds the whole of their mill machinery exhibit which was shown at the Toronto Fair. It required the services of a large number of the firm's expert machinists and laborers, all day Thursday and Friday forenoon, in setting up the machinery under the direction of Mr. Maud, the company's experienced superintendent.

Singer Sewing Machines.

A stocking darner and a linen mender is a new feature shown by the Singer Sewing Machine Company whose local agency is managed by Mr. J. W. Stuart. This is a very valuable attachmentto a machine. It will fit any locker machine. The company also puts up darning cotton in all shades and on spools. In the sewing machine line the new thing is the weathered oak wood work. It is taking well with the people and promises to be a winner.

From the Roy Studio.

The Roy studio again occupies its regular space in the main building, with a large exhibit of unusual interest. All that is new, all that is good and belongs to legitimate modern photography is represented There is a noticeable absence of what may be termed "freak photography." It has always been the endeavor of this studio to make portraits that will live, that will become more valuable as the years pass by, that will not simply attract favorable comment at the time they are produced. A glance at this collection would convince the most sceptical that in this they have succeeded. The ease of position and expression, the innocence of the childish faces portrayed with the strength and virility in the men's portraits are truly remarkable. Prominent in the exhibit are numerous out-of-town faces demonstrating the wide reputation this firm has won.

J. J. TURNER & SONS.

The Toronto exhibit which Messrs J. J. Turner & Sons had at the great National Exhibition was shown at the Peterborough, and it was one of the chief attractions on the Midway. It was visited by thousands of people who took more than a passing look. The main tent was a collapsable folding cottage. The handsome summer home was fitted with a board floor, fine wire screen made the canvas and a green canvas top. The inside was divided into three sections—two bedrooms and a living room and the partitions were formed by curtains and the living room was fitted with chairs and a table and the rug on the floor. It was an ideal summer home. The exhibit also included a prospector's tent, the tuberculosis window, besides horse blankets, rugs etc. Messrs. Turner & Sons also erected a large flag pole and have streamers floating over their exhibit while an advertising kite flew over the grounds all day. This firm is one of the most energetic in the city and are doing their share to advertise Peterborough.

THE PEDLAR PEOPLE.

Something that is rather newer in Peterborough than its merits warrant it should be, is shown in a striking exhibit made by the Pedlar People of Oshawa, the largest manufacturers of metal building material in America. Mr. Bishop has the exhibit in charge and is glad to explain the merits of the different lines shown to all who are interested. His principal article in the Oshawa, which is a four lock style, and all nails covered It is made of galvanized steel, will not rust and is guaranteed for 25 years. Another noticeable item is the expanded metal lath which has decided advantage over the old wooden material generally used, and the cost when put on is just about the same thing. Its use allows of considerable less plaster being used, the lessening being so much easier to put through the steel lath than the wooden style. It also makes a fire proof wall, which also applies to the metal ceiling made and a better insurance rate as the result Many other effects are shown from the long list turned out by the Oshawa factory, not the least being the Pedlar Culvert, metal walls and ceilings can be bought either direct from the factory or the trade. The new mill lately put up by the Peterborough Lumber Co., is covered by the Oshawa Shingles. The Pedlar People have offices in Japan, China, Montreal, Que.; Ottawa, Ont. Toronto, Ont.; London, Ont.; Chatham, Ont.; Quebec, Que.; St. John, N.B.; Halifax, N.S.; Regina, Sask.; Edmonton, Alta.; Vancouver, B.C., and Victoria, B.C.

Thousands of People Took in the Exhibition Yesterday

Many Came by Special Train from Outside Points—Splendid Display of Poultry, Horses, Sheep and Swine—Great Show in the Hall

Peterborough's Fair is truly greater and better than ever. The advance notices were not at all extravagant. The show itself never was so good. The exhibits in every class are of the best and in every class the records of other years have been broken, except in cattle.

The crowdswere far beyond the most sanguine expectations. The immense grounds were covered with people and with rigs. It was a great crowd; a regular fall fair crowd. Everyone was happy, and all were satisfied with the show. The gate keepers and ticket sellers had their hands full all afternoon. The railway company took immense crowds down and hundreds walked and drove.

The weather was ideal. The sun was never under a cloud, fast and it shone brightly and its warm rays with the refreshing breeze made man and beast at the best. Another good day is promised for today. The weather should be like yesterday and if it is the Peterborough Fair of 1909 will be the banner fair and the directors will have a fine surplus.

The poultry tent in which are several hundred valuable birds is situated in the main entrance and is the first place visited by the thousands of visitors. The tent is large and the birds are afforded plenty of air, while the people have lots of room to move about. There never was such a display of feathers and handsome birds as is to be seen this year. The light breeds are in the majority. The fanciers in this district seem to take to them better and the fowl are bred to a high standard. But for a picturesque bird, and one for the table and for the man who wants only a few birds as pets the heavy breeds such as the Brahma and Couchin families have them all beat. There are some beautiful Couchins, Brahamas and Langshans to be seen there.

Then the swine exhibit is an exceptional one. All the pens are filled and extra ones had to be provided. Mr. T. F. Matthews was an interested spectator. There was keen competition for his special prizes and he said that there was as fine a lot of swine on exhibition as he ever saw.

The sheep had their admirers and not a few either for no one can see a flock of good sheep without feeling kindly towards them. The sheep at Peterborough's Fair are worth seeing.

The cattle are not up to the ...ark in numbers although in quality they will equal gaything seen in the district. The herds are small.

Horses is where the exhibition excels itself. This show has always been noted for the great display of horse flesh and the fair of 1909 is far in advance of all others. Every class of light, general purpose and heavy horses shown in the halter, was well filled and the judges had their work cut out for them. There was no class that could be judged by an amateur.

The harness horsewere the best ever. They were shown on the track in front of the grand stand, where thousands of people admired the sleek, fleet-footed, high stepping and spirited animals. If it's good horse and a fancy rig you like to see there is no place where your wishes can be better gratified than at the Peterborough Fair.

In the hall in where every one spends a portion of their time. The exhibits include vegetables, field and garden, grains, fruits of all kinds, bread, butter, cheese, flowers fancy works of every description and samples of sewing. There are many pieces of fine arts and the photography display is unexcelled anywhere.

In front of the grand stand the special attractions were seen to advantage and the crowds in the stand and in the neighborhood was really wonderful. They were there in all sizes and at all ages. The troup of Arabian Acrobats gave a splendid exhibition of tumbling and feats of strength. One would almost refuse to believe one man could possess such strength.

Mlle. Celina de Leo's grand performing animals were wonderful. The dogs seemed to possess almost human intelligence, while the monkeys were as funny as ever and the crowds could watch them all day.

The cheese and butter exhibit was a feature of the exhibits in the hall, and a very high compliment was paid to the exhibitors by Mr. Publow, the greatest judge of dairy produce, in Canada, United States or Great Britain. There were 16 entries in one class of dairy butter, and ten in the other andthe judge stated that it was the finest lot of dairy butter he had ever judged. The cheese exhibit was very fine. The scores were close and the prize winners were as near a like as two peas in a pod. The dairy branch of the fair is picking up and next year should see a very large showing.

The directors were busy all day. President R. H. Leary was all over the grounds extending the glad hand and superintending everything. He is the right man in the right place. Secretary Hall said nothing but sawed wood. He was the busiest man about the place, unless the Ocean Wave man could beat him.

The directors, judges and press had dinner together in the president tent and they got a good meal too. The big dining tent adjoining did a big business all day.

The Midway attractions and exhibits are all good in fact they are ahead of last year. A great many tents have been erected and they are all filled with refreshments, manufactured goods, games, eats and all were well patronized. The Ocean Wave was loaded all afternoon and evening.

The 57thRegiment Band was on the grounds early and after dinner took up a position on the west end of the grand stand where they kept the air filled with sweet strains. Their program was an exceptionally good one. Mr. Jos. Halpany rendered a fine vocal solo and he received the applause of the crowds.

Wm. Yelland's dog race was one of the funniest things of the day. The excitement of the small boys and the old men is only rivalled by the excitement of the dogs themselves. There were five entries and five barking, yelping, and jumping dogs. The first start was a false one but three of the boys went away and went all the way around the track. Then they had to go again and Romeyn Stevenson won. Clare Stuart was second and Geo. Mongraw was third. Another heat of the same race will be run this after noon.

Indian Deliberately Shot and Killed Girl

Kenora, Sept. 17.—It is stated by some Indians that a murder has been committed at a point fifty miles south of here, an Indian having shot and instantly killed a young girl belonging to his tribe, saying afterwards that he mistook her for a bear. This assertion, however, is altogether disproved by the remainder of the tribe, who say that it was deliberate murder actuated by jealousy. The Indian who did the shooting bears a bad reputation. The local police have gone after the Indian, and it is expected he will put up a hard fight before he is captured. The place where the affair took place is very desolate and wild.

NEW STEEL BRIDGE

Over Indian River was Tested on Thursday.

Mr. John E. Belcher, C.E., county engineer, accompanied by Mr. J. Fife, chairman of the Bridge Committee of the County Council visited the new steel bridge and abutments in the township of Otonabee over the Indian River. They carefully inspected and tested the structure, having had driven over it an eight-ton traction engine accompanied by a three-ton threshing machine without it having shown the slightest deflection. The span is 80 feet. The superstructure was erected by the Hamilton Bridge Company, the abutments of concrete by Mr. John Dinsdale & Son, mason, contractor, all from the design of Mr. Belcher.

EASY FOOD.

Ready for Instant Use Without Cooking.

Almost everyone likes a cereal food of some kind at breakfast and supper but the ordinary way of cooking cereals results in a pasty mass that is hard to digest and if not properly digested, the raw mass goes down into the intestinal tract where gas is generated and trouble follows.

Everyone knows that good food properly digested keeps the body well while poor food, or even food of good quality, that is properly prepared and not digested, is sure to bring to bring on some kind of disease.

The easiest food to digest in this line is Grape-Nuts, made from wheat and barley, and cooked thoroughly at the factory, some 12 to 16 hours being consumed in the different processes of preparation. The food, therefore, is ready for instant service and the starch has been changed to a form of sugar, so that it is predigested and ready for almost immediate absorption.

A Chicago young lady writes that she suffered for years from indigestion and dyspepsia from the use of food that was not suitable to her powers of digestion. She says:

"I began using Grape-Nuts, and I confess to having a prejudice at first, and was repeatedly urged before I finally decided to try the food, but I have not known what indigestion is since using it, and have never been stronger or in better health. I have increased in weight from 109 to 124 pounds.

People can be well, practically without cost, if they will adopt scientific food and leave off the indigestible sort.

"There's a Reason."

Grape-Nuts food is crisp and delicious to the taste. It should be served exactly as it comes from the package, without cooking, except in cases where it is made up into puddings and other desserts.—Book of delicious recipes, and "The Road to Wellville," in pkgs.

Ever read the above letter? A new one appears from time to time. They are genuine, true, and full of human interest.

Big Crowd at Night Performance at Fair

It was a huge success which greeted the directors of the Peterborough Industrial at last night's performance. The show itself was wonderfully interesting from beginning to the end. Everything worked together for the directors. The weather was ideal. It was clear and cool and starlight. The crowd was an immense one for the night entertainment. There were easily four thousand people on the grounds and the grand stand never held before so many people. The ticket sellers had to stop selling tickets early in the evening as the stand then was overcrowded. The rest of the people blocked the track and lined the fences, and a great many who could not get near the performance returned to the Midway, the Crystal palace and the poultry exhibit.

The entertainment provided for the visitors was of the highest order. The military manouvers were exceptionally good and brought forth enthusistic applause from the masses. The wrestling match on horseback caused a lot of excitement. The people cheered for the different competitors until they were hoarse. The Red Cross ride was exciting. It represents an abandoned gun with the wounded soldiers lying around it and the battery riding and rescuing their comrades under heavy fire by the enemy's infantry which is in ambush. Dummy infantry is used for the occasion and the local Field Battery got away with their men in good style, although it is a most difficult feat to perform. The spectators were greatly interested in all the games and applauded the men enthusiastically.

The troup of Arabian acrobats were a great feature. They put on several feats that were different from the afternoon performance and they won fresh laurels. Then Mlle. Calina de Leo's performing animals caused a lot of interest and amusement as well as amazement at the great intelligence of dumb animals. The performance of the dogs was particularly good.

One of the attractions of the fair and one which caused the hearts of all true citizens to swell was the parade of the fire brigade. In the afternoon as well as night the brigade arrived at the fair grounds in full force and sharp on time. Chief Howard led the procession and the fire engine brought up the rear. The parade included a march past of five rigs and on the return a dash for a half mile in the afternoon and a quarter mile at night. The people were all greatly interested and demonstrated their appreciationf

About ten o'clock the night performance was over. The 57th Band which had rendered lots of classy music, played God save the King, and the crowds dispersed, all glad they had been there.

NASTY ACCIDENT.

Because a Driver Did Not Keep to the Right Side.

A nasty accident occurred at the Exhibition yesterday afternoon just because one of the men driving a fancy horse and rig did not know how to drive. It was in the 15 and under class and there were several classy outfits but the driver of one of the handsomest turnouts on the grounds tried to take the left side instead of keeping to the right. As a result there was a collision. Mr. Chas. Stapleton driving Mr. Deene's outfit turned to the left and ran into Jos. Staples' outfit from Ida. Both were showing in the 15 and under carriage class. Mr. Deene's horse caught Mr. Staples' outfit just in front of the front wheels. The horse reared and came down on the shafts breaking them and also the off wheel. Fortunately no one was hurt and willing hands prevented the horses doing any damage except to Mr. Staples rig. It should be a lesson to all drivers to keep to the right at all times.

NEW GYMNASIUM

In South End Will Be Thoroughly Equipped.

The P.A.C. rooms will be opened for the winter session Friday, October 1st. The club bids fair to fill a long felt want in the south end of the city. The popular pastor of Park street Baptist church, Rev. W. C. Riddiford, has been busy of late, getting some apparatus for gymnasium apparatus, which when fitted up, will add very much to the use of the roams, as a quiet, and a proper place of recreation. There is plenty of room for basketball, and the club intend to give the local Y.M.C.A. artists all that's coming to them in that direction. All men will be made welcome in the rooms, and the physical work will be under the directions of several good and competent men.

At a meeting held last night the following officers were elected

Hon. Pres.—Rev. W. C. Riddiford.
President—Mr. Jack Pilling.
Vice Pres.—Charlie Green.
Sec.-Treas.—Herb. Reid.

It was decided that the following low rates for membership would be charged, which it is hoped will cover the running expenses of the club.

Senior membership, $2.25 a year.
Junior membership, $1.25 a year.

Full information regarding the the club can be obtained from Mr. Herb. Reid, 143 Perry, street.

It is the intention of the committee of arrangements for the opening to try and gets good program of sports, music, etc., which will appear later.

SOUR RISINGS FROM STOMACH.

Those Who Experience Fulness and Pain After Meals Stomach Disorders and Indigestion Should Read Below.

"When I was working around the farm last winter I had an attack of inflammation," writes Mr. E. P. Dawkins, of Port Richmond. "I was weak for a long time, but well enough to work until spring. But some thing went wrong with my bowels, for I had to use salts or physic all the time. My stomach kept sour, and always after eating there was pain and fulness and all the symptoms of intestinal indigestion. Nothing helped me until I used Dr. Hamilton's Pills. Instead of hurting, like other pills, they acted very mildly and seemed to heal the bowels. I did not require large doses to get results with Dr. Hamilton's Pills, and feel so glad that I have found a mild yet certain remedy. Today I am well—no pain, no sour stomach, a good appetite, able to digest anything. This is a whole lot of good for one medicine to do, and I can say Dr. Hamilton's Pills are the best pills, and my letter, I am sure, proves it."

Drive Rheumatism out of the blood with Dr. Shoop's Rheumatic Remedy and see how quickly pain will depart. Rub ons never did reach the real disease. Rheumatism it's constitutional. Getting rid of the pain, is after all what counts. That is why Dr. Shoop's Rheumatic Remedy goes by word of mouth from one to another. And proves lies the popularity of this remedy. It is winning defenders everywhere. Tablets or Liquid. Sold by all dealers.

A Harmless Wanderer

Toronto, Sept. 17.—With the features and bearing of Old Father Time, Edward Colby, an eccentric gentleman, with hair and beard as white as snow, was brought before the court, but on no very serious charge. He was a harmless wanderer, having left Lakefield, near Peterborough, on a sight-seeing jaunt.

"Your age?"

"Eighty-eight."

"What do you intend to do?"

"Go home, if I can."

The court placed no obstacle in the way, and as his worship instructed an officer to see him on the train for Peterborough with transportation provided, the old man's daughter and son-in-law stepped forward and took him in their care.

Not a minute should be lost when a child shows symptoms of croup. Chamberlain's Cough Remedy given as soon as the child becomes hoarse or even after the croupy cough appears, will prevent the attack. 12

THE WEATHER.

Fine and cooler.

Sciatica

EXPECTED DEATH ANY DAY.

Another Case Where Life Was Saved and Health Restored By "Nerviline."

We have all read and heard of the agonies of Sciatica, but only those who have been tortured by this dread malady can fully appreciate what it must mean to be cured after years of suffering.

It is because he feels it his solemn duty to tell to the world his faith in Nerviline that Victor P. Hires makes the following declaration. "For three years I was in the Royal Mail service, and in all kinds of weather had to meet the night trains. Dampness, cold and exposure brought on sciatica that affected my left side. Sometimes an attack would come on that made me powerless to work. I was so nearly a complete cripple that I had to give up my job. I was in despair, completely cast down because the money I spent on trying to my chemist one day, and he recommended "Nerviline." I had this good liniment rubbed on several times a day and got relief. In order to build up my general health and CURED and improve my blood I used Ferrozone, one SIX tablet with each meal. I continued this treatment YEARS four months and was cured. I have used all kinds of liniments, and can truthfully say that Nerviline is far stronger, more penetrating, and infinitely better than anything else for relieving pain. I urge everyone with lumbago, neuralgia, rheumatism or sciatica to use Nerviline. I know it will cure them."

There isn't a more highly-esteemed citizen in Westchester than Mr. Hires. What he says can be relied upon. For six years since being cured he hasn't had a single relapse. Don't accept anything from your dealer but "Nerviline." 25 cents per bottle or five for $1.00; sold everywhere, or The Catarrhozone, Co., Kingston, Ont. 1

THE HAY FIELD.

With slender arms outstretching in the sun
The grass lies dead;
The wind falls tenderly, and stirs no one
Frail, fallen head.

Of baby creepings through the April day
Where streamlets wend,
Of childlike dancing on the breeze of May,
Thus is the end.

No more these tiny forms are bathed in dew,
No more they reach
To hold with leaves that shade them from the blue
A whispered speech.

No more they part their arms, and wreathe them close
Again to shield
Some love-full little nest—a dainty house
Hid in a field.

For them no more the splendor of the storm,
The fair delights
Of moon and star shine, glimmering faint and warm
On summer nights.

Their little lives they yield in summer death,
And frequently
Across the field bereaved their dying breath
Is brought to me.
—Ethelwyn Wetherald.

Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy is today the best known medicine in use for the relief and cure of bowel complaints. It cures griping, diarrhoea, dysentery, and should be taken at the first unnatural looseness of the bowels. It is equally valuable for children and adults. It always cures! 11

Only Coppers Minted.

At the royal mint at Ottawa only copper coinage is being turned out at present. In fact, no silver coin have been struck this year. The reason is that there is no demand on the part of the bankers.

The usual run of copper coinage is half a ton per day, but last week only one and a half tons went through.

The mint authorities say that if the Canadian public would refuse to accept U. S. coins the necessity for more Canadian coinage would be at once felt at the mint.

There is $300,000 worth of silver coinage in reserve for any sudden demand. From time to time English sovereigns are being manufactured but no Canadian $5 pieces have been struck yet.

Experimenting With Lobsters.

RAIN SPOILS PAGEANT

FIRST DAY OF CHURCH SPECTACLE PROVES RIDICULOUS.

Bad Weather Mars Effect of Great Historic Object Lesson in London—Mud Bedraggled Saints and Monks Make Scene of Reverence Almost Comical—Retrospect of Church is Given by Huge Company.

After many months of hard work, of enduring enthusiasm, and of those little troubles which are inevitable in a great assembly of amateur actors, the English Church Pageant a few days ago gave its opening performance.

Alas! the elements were not propitious. The day was the worst we have had this summer—cold, rainy, utterly dismal. It was most unfortunate, because the pageant depended so much on the weather, not only for the comfort of actors and audience, but for its propriety.

The colors wanted the sun to bring out their richness and harmonies. All the colors on the field were dimmed and drabbled by the dank, dull atmosphere which clung about the actors. Instead of the joyousness and gaiety of those living pictures of medieval crowds on the green field, with its encompassing trees in heavy foliage, there were rather somber effects of poor people in unfamiliar garments, bedraggled in the heavy rain, and moving through the mist. This somber tone was deepened as the afternoon wore on and the light failed.

Then, too, the weather robbed the pageant of some of its revenue and dignity. It made some of the scenes fall from the sublime very near to the ridiculous, because the sympathy of one's imagination was shocked a little by the sight of saints and monks paddling about the soddened field, and getting into position at the wings of the open-air stage under the shelter of umbrellas. Roars of laughter greeted an episode in which British virgins were chased by savage Saxons with long spears, when, on the slippery, slushy ground, "Jill fell down, and Jack came tumbling after."

The great choir, gowned and hooded in mediæval garb, were bound to abandon the dignity of history, and to commit wilful anchronisms in the full sight of the audience, and they sang the old litanies and dirges under a very forest of umbrellas.

In many ways the pageant itself, in spite of the bad weather, which tried hard to spoil it, was full of interest and supremely successful. The huge stand, with accommodation for many thousands of people, was packed to the last seat, and the enthusiasm of the audience, among whom were hundreds of clergy, was not to be damped. And the pageant pictures in the field rewarded them. Undoubtedly there was an appeal to the imagination, to the eye, and to one's sense of reverence, in this pictorial drama representing by living figures in vivid scenes the history of the old Church of England. The very field on which this drama was played is historic ground. The moat of Lambeth Palace was dug out many centuries ago, and on the field which it surrounds many great scenes, many most vital episodes in the history of our church and country, have been really enacted by men strong in spirit, whose flesh has long since gone to dust.

Thinking of that and of old things half forgotten, it seemed to me that the people on the pageant ground yesterday, vague as they were in the dank mist, were the ghosts of those who once played their parts and went their way to death and bequeathed their ideals and purpose to those who followed on this soil of England.

The prelude, with St. George in the silver-shining armor, and with the early British saints, Alban and Ninian, David and Patrick, stirred in one's memories of the dream-stories of the dawn of Christian faith in Britain—legends made true only by tradition and by a few old stories here and there.

The first scene of "The Publication in Britain of the Edict of Constantine. 313," is not recorded in history, but at least it was a reminder of the Roman occupation of Britain and of the little bodies of Christians, scattered outposts of the Faith, who lived beneath the rule of the Roman gods and of the Druid nature-worship, and to whom a liberal emperor granted freedom of religion as to all citizens of the empire. That was all a ghost-story yesterday, but one which took one's imagination back to the dim half-light of the early world.

And so as the scenes followed—the visit of St. Germain of Auxerre to the British Christians who had fallen into heresy, the founding of Iona by St. Columba, the coming of St. Augustine to the Saxons, who had driven the British to the West and destroyed the Christian outposts, the conversion of those Saxon people who were truly the first of the English, and the strong and real foundation of the Church in England—one had before one on the field a drama, full of color, in which one saw, as on an illuminated scroll of history, the foundation of the faith of our fathers.

One was shown the influence of monasticism in England before and after the Conquest, and the martyrdom of Becket reminded one of the long struggle between the Church and State—marked not once or twice only by brutal injustice and bloody tragedies, inevitable, perhaps, in a conflict between the spiritual and the temporal power, each seeking to break down the other's prerogatives, each claiming perhaps more than was due.

The episode of Magna Charta was to prove that the old Church was sometimes, if not always, on the side of liberty. The later episode of the suppression of the monasteries and the establishment of the Reformed Faith proved one thing to one man and one thing to another, according to his religious convictions and his knowledge of history.

A PERFECT DREAM CITY.

The following pretty description of a sunshiny day in London appeared recently in an English publication:

London was yesterday a city of gold and green and white. Golden sunshine in the streets and parks, green foliage on every tree upon which the sun shone down, white buildings newly built or newly painted, with clear outlines under a sky of Oriental blue. What dream-city could be more perfect than London on such a day?

Truly it was an unforgettable day—a day on which it is good to be alive, very good to be young when the spring calls to the blood and when perfume steals into the senses; good even to be old and to sun oneself in the memory of other spring days as golden as this.

The London season is beginning. Good words to those who have the leisure and means to play the game, the merry game of the social whirligig, good even to those who are merely lookers-on.

Yesterday the fun had begun. The King was in town, the court was in the capital the servants of society had pulled up the window blinds of town houses and the sun was shining.

So the streets were very full of life at its best and brightest. Down Bond street and Piccadilly the highways of the lucky ones there was an endless file of carriages, and the sun gleamed upon brightly polished panellings, flashed fire from the brass head lamps and metal work of magnificent motor cars, and glistened on the smooth flanks of good horses, which went dashing by as proudly as though there were no such thing as petrol.

Women were in the carriages and walking on the shady side, and one man sighed because he could not wear salmon pink, or Madonna blue, or walk in lilac beauty like these ladies who were the flowers of the London streets. Flowers, literally because all their hats were in full blossom, brought out by this brilliant sunshine, and from the top of an omnibus one looked down upon moving bouquets of roses and daisies and forget-me-nots, as though all the flowers in Kensington Gardens had been plucked as the garlands of England's fair women.

Yet the men did their poor best, yesterday, to do credit to the divine day. Old Bucks had put on white waistcoats, and young bloods in new silk hats bright and beautiful things—had put yellow gloves upon their hands. The Green Park was a paradise, into which had slunk many poor devils, against whom the gates of this paradise were not closed. These Weary Willies had come out of the slums, for spring called to them also, and they lay, in lazy happiness and seedy clothes, like corpses on the emerald greensward, which was a carpet worthy of Kings.

A Cool Deadhead.

Mr. Oscar Asche, the London actor, who, with his wife, Miss Lily Brayton, is on his way to Australia his native land—which he left eighteen years ago, remarked just before he set sail, apropos of the slump in theatres, that the deadhead is a destroyer of drama. "Once give a man a free seat for a play," he said, "and you will have a difficulty ever after to make him 'pay to go in.' While I was touring with a certain highly respected manager, we were playing at a long-famous old playhouse in an ancient town. We had billed 'Macbeth' for the Friday night, but during that day the theatre was burnt down. For our next week there our chief contrived to borrow a playhouse a little way out of the district. On reaching there to rehearse on the Monday the manager received a letter saying that the writer had been given two dress-circle orders for the performance of 'Macbeth,' but as that play was not performed owing to the destruction of the theatre, the writer surmised that the manager would remit the money value of those orders."

Clever People Who Can't See.

The history of the past assures us that there are few, if any, departments of human knowledge in which the blind have not distinguished themselves, says The War Cry.

Two of the world's greatest poets—Homer and Milton—were sightless; while Dr. Saunderson, once professor of mathematics in the University of Cambridge, lost his eyesight when twelve months old, but, although his parents were poor, he advanced so greatly in knowledge that he became an expert Greek scholar.

Then, John Metcalfe, of Knaresborough, another blind man, became a decision swimmer a musician, and an engineer, who distinguished himself in building bridges and making roads.

There still exists, we believe, a monument to the memory of Dr. Hugh James, the blind physician of Carlisle; while in Birmingham there is a blind man who cleans and repairs clocks, and has even constructed new ones.

Queen Victoria's Journals.

Lord Esher has been giving some interesting particulars of Queen Victoria's journals. There are said to be over 100 volumes of them, all written closely in a small running hand. The last entry is dictated and was added just ten days before the Queen died. The journals, it is said, will never be seen hereafter in their complete form.

Bernard Shaw's Next Play.

Bernard Shaw has written another play since "The Showing Up of Blanco Posnet," says The Nation. It is entitled "Press Cutting. Compiled From the Correspondence and Editorial Columns of the Daily Press," and consists of an ironical discussion of woman's suffrage and universal military service.

England's Oldest Barber Dead.

Allen Batchelor of Guildford, England, who was reputed to be England's oldest barber, died recently at the age of 96. He claimed to have been patronized by kings, dukes bishops, judges, policemen, politicians, publicans, "and sinners in end."

THE ROSEDALE LOCK.

The work on the Rosedale lock and canal is progressing nicely, says the Lindsay Warder. The contractor expects to have all the concrete work completed this week and the gates for the locks are almost completed and will be finished on the arrival of some hardware necessary to the job. The Lindsay lock gates will be built at Rosedale on the completion of the gates now in hand. It is expected that the dredge will remove the small quantity of earth that is keeping the water from the locks as soon as the gates are put in place.

IF SICK--WHY PAY

Unless Health First Returns.

Here is what should and can be done!

Now you would not willingly pay for bad drink was worthless—would you?

Then why pay for medicine until that medicine first proves to you its actual worth?

Positively knowing what Dr. Shoop's Restorative can do for the sick, I say to all "don't pay unless health first returns." And I back my Restorative with a signed and sealed 30 day "No Risk, No Pay" contract.

I positively pledge to the sick, every where that "Dr. Shoop's Restorative is absolutely free if it fails". Let others do the same or else pass their prescriptions by.

If you need more strength, more vitality, more vigor or more vim, use my Restorative a few days and note the immediate improvement.

When the Stomach, Heart, or Kidneys are wrong, then use Dr. Shoop's Restorative. I do not treat the Stomach nor stimulate the Heart or Kidneys, for that is wrong. Years ago I cast away that notion when I took in service. The books below will best tell you how I am succeeding.

These books also tell of a tiny hidden "inside nerve," no larger than a silken thread. They tell how that nerve, until it fails, actually gives to the Heart its power, its tone, its never-ceasing motion or impulse.

These books will open up new and helpful ideas to those who are not well. They tell how the Stomach, and Kidneys each have their "inside" or power nerves. They tell how the Restorative was especially made to reach and revitalize these weak or failing inside nerves. All of these facts tell why I am able to say, "It is free if it fails".

This is why I say "take no chance on a medicine whose maker dare not back it just as I do by this remarkable offer".

So write me today for the order.

I have appointed honest and responsible druggists in nearly every community to issue my medicine to the sick.

But write me first for the order.

All druggists sell Dr. Shoop's Restorative, but all are not authorized to give the 30 day test. So long use a fine pleasure and that save disappointment and delays. Tell me also which book you need.

A postal will do.

Besides, you are free to consult me as you would your home physician. My advice and the book below are yours, and without cost.

Perhaps a word or two from me will clear up some seeming ailment. I have helped thousands upon thousands by my private prescription or personal advice plan. My best effort is surely worth your simple request. So write now while you have it fresh in mind, for tomorrow never comes. Dr. Shoop, Box 12, Racine, Wis.

A SUNGLASS TRICK.

How to Sever a Thread Inclosed in a Glass Bottle.

This is a trick which can only be performed when the sun shines, but it is a good one. Procure a clear glass bottle and stick a pin in the lower end of the cork. Attach a thread to the pin and tie a small weight to the end of the thread so it will hang inside the bottle when the cork is in place. Inform your audience that you will sever the thread and cause the weight to drop without removing the cork.

All that is required to perform the feat is to hold a magnifying glass so as to direct the sun's rays on the thread. The thread will quickly burn and the weight fall.—Popular Mechanics.

WITH CORK AND BOTTLE.

An Experiment That Illustrates the Nature of Compressed Air.

Something of the nature of compressed air may be learned from the following experiment:

Take a small cork and ask some one to blow it into a fairly large sized bottle that has a neck.

This seems to be an easy matter.

The one who tries it will probably blow as hard as possible upon the little cork, but instead of going into the bottle, as expected, it will simply fall down.

The harder the puffs or blows the more obstinate the cork will appear to be, and even if the effect of blowing gently be tried it will be of no use the cork will not go into the bottle, much to the amusement of those who are watching.

The reason why the cork will not go in is this:

The bottle being already filled with air, when the cork is blown more air will be forced into the bottle, and consequently the air inside will be greatly compressed and will simply force the cork back.

The following is a simple way of overcoming the difficulty:

Instead of trying to force the cork through the compressed air in the bottle, just the contrary should be tried—that is, some of the air should be sucked out of the bottle. This being done the bottle will become partly emptied, and when the outside air rushes in to fill up the empty space it will carry the cork with it to the bottom of the bottle.—Chicago News.

The Elephant and the Puppy.

A British officer who was enjoying some sport in India had with him a tiny fox terrier puppy which had been given to him. The little animal, though only just big enough to walk, was full of spirits and always getting into mischief. The officer was one day in the jungle hunting when he heard an angry trumpeting at a little distance, followed by a squeaky sort of noise which he could not at first understand. He made his way cautiously to the spot from which the sound proceeded and there saw a strange sight. The puppy, which had strayed from the Englishman's camp, was standing in a little open space barking furiously at a huge wild elephant a few feet away. The elephant was enraged, but did not seem to understand the little creature. After more loud trumpetings the great animal stood uncertainly for a few moments and then turned and made off hurriedly.

SIR CHARLES RIVERS WILSON.

Something About the Man Who Superintended Sir Henry Tyler.

There have been, at least, seven really dramatic moments in the history of Anglo-Canadian finance (says the Canadian Gazette, of London, England). One of them gave Canada, for weal or woe, her state-owned railway, the Intercolonial. Another dramatic moment set the Canadian Pacific Railway Co. upon the road of financial rectitude, as interpreted by British standards, and of prosperity. And among the other dramatic moments must be placed that which drove Sir Henry Tyler from the presidency of the Grand Trunk Railway Co. to make way for Sir Charles Rivers Wilson. That was in 1880; and Grand Trunk shareholders and the Canadian traveling and trading public know how to appreciate the benefits accruing to them in the succeeding years. And it is under the stimulus of these later successes that the Grand Trunk is moving forward to the conquest of new fields through the instrumentality of its Grand Trunk Pacific enterprise. Born in London in 1831, Sir Charles Rivers Wilson was educated at Eton and Balliol and began business life as a clerk in the Treasury Department of the British Civil Service. For five years he was private secretary to the Earl of Beaconsfield, and subsequently became Comptroller-General of the Office for the Reduction of the National Debt and Finance Minister of Egypt. His wife, whom he married in 1895, was the Hon. Beatrice Violet Mary Mostyn, sister of the seventh Baron Vaux, of Harrowden. In addition to his presidency of the Grand Trunk, Sir Charles is a director of the Alliance Assurance Co., Limited; chairman of the British Electric Traction Co., Limited; director of the Grand Trunk Pacific Railway Co., and chairman of the International Syndicate, Limited.

A Newspaperman's Secret.

The late William Jarvis was one of the oldest and best known survivors in Montreal of the journalism of a generation ago. He had in his time been connected in one way or another with a number of the men and events which have made the history of Montreal and Eastern Canada. His remarkable memory preserved all these experiences, and he was thus able to make very interesting a "Thirty Years Ago" column on one of the Montreal dailies. In this connection it may be said that he had been a bosom friend of the late Fred Perry, who came into prominence at the time of the burning of the Parliament Buildings in Montreal. And, though he never countenanced the report, it is said that William Jarvis was one of the last of those who knew the real story of the famous destruction of these buildings in the forties.

IN STUDENT DAYS.

Tale of Eric Armour and the Bottle of Poison.

They tell a good story about the days when Eric Armour, law partner of Edmund Bristol, M.P., for Centre Toronto, was in his senior year at Varsity. The old residence was still in full swing and "Count" Armour and another senior shared a room in what is now the Undergraduate Club.

Some kindly person, one day in the fall term, thinking to lighten the arduous monotony of Armour's days at the university, made him a present of a sturdy little earthenware jug of Scotch whiskey of a famous brew. Now the popularity of Count Armour, which is a bye-word to this day, was in its full bloom at that time and his room was headquarters for those of the students who turned to find relaxation from their books. Scotch whiskey was no thing to leave exposed upon one's dresser among such company. So the room-mates hastened to a drug store, secured a plain business-like bottle, had it liberally swathed in poison labels and garnished with death's heads. Into this they poured the precious liquid and hid it away upon a high shelf, to await a fitting occasion for so gorgeous a libation.

One bitter night in late December such an occasion came. Varsity won a hockey match and as the chilled rooters made their way back to residence Armour and his room-mate determined to celebrate with a toddy. So every room in Second House that night yielded up its two men and two glasses who sat about in awed silence while, like priests at sacrament, Count and his partner labored with the lemons, nutmeg and boiling water.

Presently the great moment came when Count Armour strode majestically to the cupboard and took down the bottle. It felt strangely light. With a sinking heart he carried it under the gas jet. Whiskey there was not but under the most fearsome of the skulls Armour read in a fine script which he knew for that of "Rex" King, now of Detroit:

"Goodbye, Count; I have committed suicide."

The Experience Is Great.

The men who are going to make the most money out of this country are not the men who are doing the pioneer work. I know many good, honest, hard working fellows, who are working themselves ragged and hungry because they are not in right. At the outset all were jubilant. Money jingled in their pockets; equipments were complete; wives and families at home were content to see them go away for a while to the Land of Promise; stories of men as green as they in the bush experience having made their pile were continually on their minds. The moment of their disenchantment is at hand.

It takes a great deal of money to ascertain what most mining propositions are worth. Companies or syndicates must be formed to develop and mine, and usually after the formation of these Mr. Prospector, after receiving his one-fifth share of the five or ten thousand dollars that his backer received from the syndicate, either proceeds to blow in the result of his season's work or goes back and locates somewhere else. I don't want to discourage anyone from coming in, nor do I feel like being too optimistic over their coming. Quartz mining is essentially a rich man's game. Prospecting is everybody's. The experience is great.—Gowganda Tribune.

NEWCOMB A CANADIAN.

Washington Professor, Who Died Recently, Was Born In Nova Scotia.

The death of the illustrious astronomer, Prof. Simon Newcomb, at Washington, a few days ago, has attracted very little attention, most Canadians being apparently unaware that he was a fellow countryman of theirs. In truth he was one of the many Canadians who have drifted to the United States and shed lustre on their adopted country. He, it is said, had more degrees than any man in the world. Sixteen universities had honored him. Dr. James Bryce, British Ambassador at Washington, comes next with thirteen degrees, and Dr. Elliot, president emeritus of Harvard, third with nine. His career was a most unusual one. He was born in Wallace, Nova Scotia, in 1835, and in 1853 drifted to the United States and became a school teacher in Maryland, working himself through college by this means and early manifesting a phenomenal genius for the study of astronomy.

But his boyhood career before he became a school teacher was romantic. He early ran away from home and became a penniless lad the apprentice of a quack doctor wandering through the settlements of New Brunswick. Perhaps it was this experience that turned his mind toward the mystery of the universe which he made it his life work to explore. His most herculean task is that of having accurately determined the elements of the solar system, and it would require an expert to define all that he did for his beloved science.

During his lifetime he had been voted into membership in almost every scientific society on earth. Toronto University was among those which had bestowed an honorary degree upon him and others included Princeton, Yale, Harvard, Johns Hopkins, Glasgow, Heidelburg, Padua, Christiania, Leyden, Dublin, Edinburgh, not to mention Oxford and Cambridge. His services to mariners were enormous, as fitting in a man who sprang from a sea-faring community and this gained him the honor of becoming an Associate of the Institute of France, the only English-speaking native of this continent to be so honored except Benjamin Franklin. Last summer he was entertained by the Kaiser at one of his palaces. Thus did the boy who wandered through the wilds of the Maritime provinces as a quack's assistant end his life as the guest of princes.

Drinking More Beer.

The people of Canada are drinking less spirits than they used to do, but at the same time the consumption of beer per capita is increasing.

This is the purport of a statement prepared by the Inland Revenue Department as to the consumption of articles which pay excise duty. For instance, while the per capita consumption of spirits in 1906 was .851, it was only .806 in the last fiscal year. On the other hand, the consumption of beer, which was 5.255 gallons per head in 1906, rose last year to 5.348 gallons. The consumption of wine also shows a decrease from .091 in 1906 to .085 las year.

Tobacco, however, continues to grow in popularity. In 1906 the consumption was 2.777 lbs. per head. Last year it was 2.910 lbs. But a further examination shows that the falling away was largely due to the necessity for economy which was enforced upon the people of Canada in 1907-8. The same was true of the consumption of beer. The year before last it rose to 5.812 gallons, as compared with 5.255 in 1906, and with 5.348 last year. The drinking of wine reached its highwater mark in 1907-8, when the figure was .096, as against .091 in 1906, and .075 in 1908-9.

The short fiscal year of 1906-7 holds the record for the consumption of tobacco. In that period it was 2.953 lbs. per head, and it fell to 2.898 when the depression struck the continent.

A New Railway Centre.

Kamloops, the thriving town at the junction of the Fraser and Thompson Rivers in British Columbia, is at present the scene of great railroad activity, and all the indications point to its becoming a divisional point on three railway systems—the Canadian Northern and the Grand Trunk Pacific, as well as the Canadian Pacific. For the engineers on the Canadian Northern and Grand Trunk Pacific are discovering what Sir Sandford Fleming discovered thirty years ago—namely, that the natural connection between the Edmonton district and Vancouver via the Yellowhead Pass is through the Thompson Valley. The chief engineering difficulties are not between Kamloops and the Yellowhead, but between the Yellowhead and Edmonton, where 200 miles of muskeg country are baffling the graders, and may hold back transcontinental construction in this direction for some years to come.

Needs of Labrador.

Enterprises for seamen along the lines of the Rowton Houses are quite as sorely needed elsewhere for a solution of the ever-recurring liquor problem, writes Dr. Grenfell from his Labrador mission. For this reason we set about raising the sum of $80,000 (mostly in the United States) to afford just such a provision as we think we should like made for ourselves were we in the places of our sailors and obliged to come in after a long voyage on the Labrador coast or on the Grand Banks—a place to play, a place to rest, to get your kit and yourself washed and mended. The plans for this building are finished, and the work just about to begin on it, and it is greatly hoped the prophylactic results may save the need for subsequent treatment either judicial or medical.

Canada's Forest Products.

During 1908 Canada exported forest products to the value of $49,168,588. Of this total, the unmanufactured products made up over $44,000,000, and the manufactured less than $5,000,000. Unmanufactured products consist of sawn lumber in all forms, cordwood, and railway ties. During the same year the Dominion imported wood and manufactures to the value of $13,279,000.

It's a pity when sick ones drug the stomach or stimulate the heart and Kidneys. That is all wrong! A weak Stomach means weak Stomach nerves, always. And this is also true of the Heart and Kidneys. The weak nerves are instead crying out for help. This explains why Dr. Agnew's Restorative is promptly helping the Stomach, Heart and Kidney ailments. The Restorative reaches out for the actual cause of these ailments—the failing "inside nerves." Anyway test the Restorative 48 hours. It won't cure so soon as that, but you will surely know that help is coming. Sold by all dealers.

HE CAST IT OUT.

W. Allward's Prescription For Rheumatism Discovered by Accident.

A story about Mr. Walter S. Allward, the noted Toronto sculptor, told by his friends, is too good to be missed even though in publishing it one runs the risk of involving him in trouble with the Ontario Medical Council.

Some years ago Mr. Allward was working on a certain statue, and engaged as a model an Irishman who was a very fine specimen of physical manhood, but who suffered to some extent from rheumatism. His malady was his constant thought and theme of conversation, for, being exceptionally healthy and strong otherwise, he made much of an affliction which other men might have thought little about. One day Mr. Allward was taking a cast of the Irishman's neck, and in putting on the plaster either he or his assistant overlooked the customary preliminary of a coating of grease. They did not notice the omission of this precaution until they came to take the plaster off; but on attempting to remove it they found that it had hardened, apparently to stay until worn out, on the model's neck. Then ensued an unpleasant experience for the Irishman, as with jack-knives and other instruments Mr. Allward and his helper cut and hammered away at the cast, having particular difficulty in getting it free of the lower part of the man's hair. Finally the task was successfully performed, and the Irishman was able to laugh with the others at his rather unenviable experience, but he did not forget it.

One day, quite a long time after, Mr. Allward ran across him, after losing track of him entirely.

"Well, well," said the sculptor, "and how are you anyway? Do you remember the day we got that cast on your neck and had such a picnic getting it off?"

"Do Oi remember it?" said the Irishman; "Faith an' Oi do. 'Twas a terrible time, wasn't it? But Oi've been long wantin' to tell ye that 'twas the grand t'ing for me afther all; for b'dad, Oi've niver had the rheumatics since."—Saturday Night.

POINTS ABOUT NEWFOUNDLAND

Island Colony Has Some Wonderful Agricultural River Valleys.

Newfoundland is a big country, a third larger than Ireland and twenty-one times the size of Prince Edward Island, and when one considers the smallness of the population — only about 225,000, and nearly all fishermen — the returns from agriculture are considerable, says Edwin Smith, in the July Canadian Magazine. Over a million and a half dollars' worth of farm produce is raised annually on a fraction of cultivated land, which bears no appreciable relation whatever to its tributary soil uncultivated as yet, but which can and will be cultivated in the years to come. Instead of importing $600,000 worth of farm produce each year from Canada Newfoundland ought to aim at raising it at home, and the present depression will not be without some benefit if it helps the people to see more clearly the logic and the wisdom of the governor's motto "back to the land."

During an extended visit to the colony last summer, the writer saw enough to convince him that, although Newfoundland does not compare with England or Manitoba as an agricultural country, it has nevertheless large tracts of the very finest farming lands, in its many river valleys and by the margins of its innumerable lakes. In the Humber Valley there is an interval twelve miles long and six miles wide, with a deep fertile soil, capable of raising large crops of hay, vegetables and grain, and which is still waiting the hand of the husbandman. It is the Annapolis Valley over again, only in scenery richer and more luxuriant. And what is true of the Humber is true to a greater extent of the Codroy, Exploits, Terra Nova, Gander, and many smaller rivers.

A Family Problem.

A noted Toronto educationist tells this story on himself. He has been twice married and has a numerous family. One morning at breakfast one of the girls of the younger family, who had just begun the study of vulgar fractions, was unusually silent. She was engaged in trying to work out in actual life the axiom that two halves equal the whole, for presently she propounded this question:

"Mary is my half-sister. Now if mother was to die, and father married again, his children would be my half sisters and brothers, but would they be any relation to Mary?"

How the educationist would have answered this mathematical and sociological question will never be known, for the five-year-old son settled it in a way that left no room for doubt as to the fairness of his solution, or his belief in his father's determination to play the game fairly. He stopped absorbing oatmeal long enough to remark:

A Mushroom Town.

Three months ago the new townsite of Stirling, Alta., consisted of the railroad station and two elevators. Today there are signs of lengthy streets of broad western width, new buildings, stores, hotels and dwellings are fast filling in the landscape. Ten or fifteen stores and homes have already been completed. Most of the newcomers are from Winnipeg and from Northern Alberta, although there are a good number of Ontario people already located and several Toronto and London families who purchased property in Stirling are now on their way west. This fall will see in Stirling one of the busiest towns in the west. There will be three elevators then in working order.

Canadians at Pageant.

At the opening of the Bath pageant the Duke and Duchess of Connaught received with special cordiality Miss Brenda Taylor of Bath, N.B., and Miss Powell of Bath, Ont., who came to pay homage to the mother city.

The Reindeer Herd.

The latest news from Labrador indicates that Dr. Wilfred Grenfell's community of reindeer is a splendid success. The number of the herd has increased to seven hundred, and all the animals are in the best of health.

In the training and domestication of the deer the doctor's staff has made astonishing progress, and for traction purposes they are rapidly superseding the fierce and treacherous sledge-dogs, and in time will take their place altogether. In addition to this the deer give milk of exceptional quality, which affords excellent subsistence for children.

THE GAS STOVE.

Cooking Utensil Should Be Chosen With an Eye to Economy.

In using a gas stove the flame should be turned out as soon as it is not needed and should not be lighted until necessary. Matches are cheaper than gas. If there is air noticeable, turn off the key and relight. There is no greater waster of gas.

After anything comes to a boil turn down the flame until the cooking is finished. It will keep at boiling point as well as if gas were burning full head.

More gas is wasted in the oven than elsewhere. Often one burner will suffice after the oven has been well heated. It is better to run one burner than to turn two low, as they frequently blow out.

Should there be too strong a pressure of gas it can be turned partially off in the cellar, with corresponding reduction in bills.

Knowing how to arrange cooking is probably the best way to reduce bills. On baking day, for instance, when the oven must be lighted, plan to have baked macaroni, pudding and baked potatoes for dinner. ——— should also be chosen with an eye to gas economy. Pots in tiers or arranged in triplicate will mean the use of one burner instead of three.

When using the teakettle, which takes a fixed time to come to a boil and must be kept heated a long time, economize by having made for it a flat lid perforated with holes on the top. Thus supplied, another dish can be kept hot, or things like rhubarb and milk can be cooked on top while water is boiling.

Another important item in gas saving is absolute cleanliness of the parts of the stove. Where the burners are clogged with grease and dirt more pressure is needed to get results, not to mention the slovenly housekeeping.

USES OF CLIPPINGS.

Brilliant Stunts That Can Be Worked With Them.

Did you ever think of the pleasure you can give with clippings and the brilliant stunts that can be worked with them? If one is not original a clever bluff can be made at it by utilizing the brains of others.

There are few happenings in life where the clipping practice will not come into play. One of the most cherished gifts made to a recent bride on her return from the honeymoon was a dainty book made of sheets of unruled Irish linen paper 8 by 11 with pasteboard backs covered in white moire, with the monogram of the bride done in delicate ribbon embroidery.

Inside were clippings from newspapers of everything that had been printed about the girl or her fiance from the time the engagement was announced. Photographs were carefully cut from the newspapers and added to the clippings. As portraits of most of her bridal party had appeared at different times the collection was doubly interesting.

A close friend of a man who died several weeks ago has just sent his widow pasted sheets containing notices of his death and funeral from many different papers and magazines; also resolutions on his death drawn by various organizations. Many of them had not been seen by the family, who were touched and delighted at the thought.

A girl who had badly sprained her ankle was amused and delighted to receive from a friend a sheet of paper with a drawing at the top of a dejected young woman with one foot enormously bound resting on a chair in front of her. Underneath was the title, "Clipped Comfort For the Cripple."

Personal Daintiness.

There is many a man or woman who would be horrified to be told that he or she falls short of cleanliness, yet such is the case even when one prides oneself on personal daintiness.

You cannot be clean if you do not take at least one bath each day. If that seems like a harsh judgment try going for two days without a bath, then wipe off the skin with cold cream. The condition of that cloth is an unpleasant revelation.

The daily bath need not be in a tub, but it should be more than the British cold sponge that with many does duty for cleanliness. Cold water, no matter how invigorating, does not remove soil.

A bath to be cleansing should consist of plenty of hot water—soft, if possible—a pure soap and a scrubbing brush and plenty of friction in drying. Cold water may be used later as a spray or tonic, but the warm bath is essential.

It is doubly necessary if one lives in cities that care be paid to bathing. The grime of the big town is not only disfiguring, but is germ laden, and every effort should be made to keep free of it.

In addition to the daily bath one should be particular to wash the face, ears and neck and under the arms each time one dresses. The hands, as most of us know to our sorrow, need scrubbing a dozen times a day.

It is folly, as is so often done, to point to our ancestors' weekly bath and superb strength. Times have changed, and so have ideals of cleanliness, and the person who takes but two baths a week these days is ashamed to have it found out.

Had It Lowered.

Sir Augustus Harris once settled the pitch question in his own offhand fashion. A famous prima donna of his opera company came to him complaining that the piano used for vocal rehearsals was too high and asking that it might be lowered.

"Certainly," replied Drurioiasses, with a bow. "Here, Forsyth, have a couple of inches sawed—" the legs of this piano."

Mr. Herb. McCreais confined to the Nicholls Hospital with typhoid fever. His friends will regret to learn of his illness as he has just recovered from an operation for appendicitis.

Australian Woman Becomes Hindu.

A remarkable ceremony took place at Lucknow, India, when Miss Thomson, a pretty young Australian woman, who is to be married to a Bengali barrister, formally renounced Christianity and embraced Hinduism as practiced by the Ayra Samajists.

The ceremony took place in the courtyard of the rajah of Vizianagram's residence, and was watched by a large crowd of natives.

Miss Thomson wore native costume, with a pale blue "sari," bespangled with gold, and heavy gold bangles on her arms. At the conclusion of the ceremony, which lasted more than an hour, she almost fainted.

The convert's reception by the Ayra Samajists was the customary "purification" by fire and water. Miss Thomson answered the questions of the Hindu priest in a low voice, ceremonially washed her hands and head and poured a spoonful of oil on a sandal-wood fire. She then received a Hindu name.

Too Many Novels.

Mrs. Humphrey Ward, in an address read for her at the opening of a free library at Kendal, said that people who read nothing else but novels never properly appreciated them. Novels were the jam of literature, and all properly conducted persons should begin their meal with bread and butter. Writers of novels wanted readers to be a little hungry for them—not to bring to them a mind full of the debris of a thousand plots—and be proof against their little arts. In the interests of her own craft, she urged all who might use the new library to venture out on the broad seas of literature, to be hardy and courageous, full of curiosity and sympathy, and ready to take trouble with a tough subject and a long book.

The Lost Repeater.

When monsieur—the first monsieur at the court of Louis XIV.—discovered at his levee that his watch had been stolen, presumably by one of his valets, he finished dressing hastily and, addressing them all, said: "Gentlemen, the watch strikes. Let us separate as quickly as we can. What a tact and finish were here!"

The spirit of monsieur was admirably caught by the French gentleman of the time who, attacked by robbers at five o'clock in the afternoon, simply observed, "Sirs, you have opened very early to-day."—Cornhill Magazine.

Gen. W. H. Parsons.

Gen. W. H. Parsons is ex-State Senator and ex-Special Judge of the Supreme Court of Texas, also Brigadier General in Confederate Army. In a recent letter from 925 H St., N. W., Washington, D. C., this prominent gentleman says:

"Upon the recommendation of personal friends and many strong testimonials as to the efficacy of Peruna in the treatment of the numerous symptoms of the la grippe with which I have been afflicted for four months past, I have been induced to undergo a treatment with this justly celebrated formula. I feel a decided change for the better after using it only one week. It is especially good in toning up the stomach and has had a decided effect upon my appetite. I therefore feel much encouraged that I am on the road to complete restoration.

"My numerous friends in Texas, where I have had the honor to command a brigade of her Veteran Cavalry in a four years' war, may accept this voluntary testimonial to the merits of Peruna as a sense of obligation on my part for its wonderful efficacy."

Col. Wm. Bailey.

William Bailey, 58 I St., N. E., Washington, D. C., Past Col. Enc. No. 60, Union Veteran Legion, and prominently identified with many of the great labor protective associations in Chicago and New York, and Secretary of one of the largest associations in the former city, had for nearly thirty years been afflicted with kidney troubles.

Within a short period he has been persuaded to try Peruna, and his present healthy condition is attributed to his judicious use of that great remedy. Washington climate is notoriously bad for kidney and liver troubles, yet by a judicious use of the remedy he is now quite cured and in excellent physical condition.

This brief statement of facts, without exaggeration or hyperbole, appears to tell the whole story, which the Peruna Company is authorized to use, if it so chooses, believing, as I do, that by so doing it will be for the general good.—Wm. Bailey.

Col. C. L. Patten, 509 T St., N. W., Washington, D. C., a Lieutenant in the Old Guard, an exclusive organization composed of soldiers of distinction who fought in the civil war, and a Thirty-second degree Mason, writes as follows:

Clothing Caught Fire

Mrs. McMullen, who boards at 251 George street, had a very painful experience while at the fair on Saturday afternoon. It was about four o'clock in the afternoon while she was walking from the main building that some one threw a burning match or a cigar stub into the grass near her. The grass took fire and soon her under clothing became ignited. Her friendsassisted her at once and soon had the fire out, but not before the woman was badly burned Dr. Gray was not far away at the time and he attended to the burns, and had the sufferer removed to her home. At first it was thought the burns would prove very serious if not fatal, but last night the doctor said she was resting easier and that there was no reason to expect anything serious.

Mr. McMullen is one of the Prudential Life Insurance Company's men in the city and they have not been here long.

Brinton Carpet Co. are Enlarging Their Works The Exhibit at the Fair

The Brinton Carpet Co., have been compelled to enlarge their factory in otder to handle the rapidly increasing business. Orders from firms are being received all the time and nearly all send repeat orders so that thegrowth of the business is permanent and exceedingly satisfactory. The latest addition is a solid brick building 60 feet square, one storey high with a fourteen inch wall. This will be used as a shipping,finishing and sewing room. It is under course of construction now and when completed that aprt of the original factory used for the above purpose will be filled with new looms. For a long time the looms have been running night and day and there are three times the number of employees this fall that there were last fall.

This speaks volumes for one of Peterborough's newest, yet most important factories. The success however,is not to be wondered at. The many thousands of people who have visited the fair last week saw the Brinton Carpet Co.'s exhibit of the high grade carpets and rugs which they are making.

The exhibit was a presentation of the idea the firm is endeavoring to suggest to the public, viz., simple forms of decorations which can be carried out with artistic effect and at a moderate cost. The exhibit showed three grades of rugs, cheap medium, and expensive, and each represented, quality, finish and value. By using a rug or carpet of the leading colors one can secure curtains, draperies, stenceled fringes for the walls, etc., to harmonize with it and the whole gives a most pleasing effect. It is often, or in fact generally supposed that to finish a room or a house in a complete way is the most expensive.The Brinton propie are demonstrating that such is not tne case. and the exhibition of their scheme attracted much favarable comment.

The Brinton carpets are carried in Peterborough by the three leading carpet houses, viz., R. Hall & Son, A. W. Cressman & Co., R.Fair & Co. The goodsare also sold from Halifax toVancouver. Some of the big work the factory has done is supplying the carpets for the Prince George Hotel, Toronto, the Ontario Club, Toronto; the Windsor Hotel, Ottawa, and the Peterborough Club, Peterborough, through R. Hall & Son., the Normal schools at Peterborough and North Bay, and the new Collegiate Institute here.

Visitors will also be made welcome at the factory and the management will gladly show anyone through. The only condition imposed is that you first make an appointment by telephone.

Kinrades Return and will Live in Old Home

Hamilton, Sept.18.—T. L. and Mrs. Kinrade, and their youngest daughter, Miss Gertrude, have returned to Hamilton, and will take up their residence here, but not for a time at least, at 105 Herkimer St., the scene of the murder of Miss Ethel Kinrade.

Mr. Kinrade, who looked like a nervous wreck, and a broken down old man, for some weeks after the tragedy, looks like a new man now, and is ,beginning to take on fleshi He, with his wife and daughter, visited the grave of the murdered girl yesterday, and appeared to be greatly affected. Mrs. Kinrade was weeping bitterly.

Mrs. Montrose Wright, who was Florence Kinrade, and her husband, have not returned but are continuing their extended honeymoon trip through the United States.

Mr. Kinrade resigned his position as principal of the Cannon street school some time ago but will not feel the loss of his salary of $1300 a year, as he has valuable real estate interests that will bring him in very much more than that sum.

PETERBOROUGH EXHIBITION HAS NEVER BEFORE BEEN EQUALLED

Exhibits were Better, Entries were Larger, Crowds were the Biggest—The Races were Almost Perfect and the Monetary Side was Entirely Satisfactory

Nearly 15000 people saw Peterborough's Fair this year. All previous records have been broken and new ones established to be broken next year. The people are with the fair Association now. The exhibitors are with them and the horsemen are with them. The weather iman is also on his good behavior. As a result President Leary and all his directors are smiling broadly. As one man said;—"I don't mind losing the time from my business so long as the fair is a success."

Saturday the third and last day of the show was an ideal one for the exhibition. The weather was as near perfect as it could be and about four or five thousand people went down to the grounds for the afternoon. The first couple of hours were spent among the exhibits and then the people flocked to the grand stand to see the horse races, and the attractions put on by the Imported talent. The special features were the same as given Friday afternoon and evening.

The horse racing, however, was different. They were just as exciting and just as fast as on Friday,but by entirely different horses. The 2.30 class brought out six starters, and they all finished in a bunch each heat. Lou Keswick won in three straights, but she had to go so fast that there was no time to eat grass. Jennie Hal chased her home every time, and the other horses were right on the hind wheel of the first two sulkies. The best time was 2.24 1-4, and that is going some for 30 class horses.

The free-for-all was an exciting race all the way around the track, and all the drivers tried to get a piece of the money. Wallace W took three straights, Planet got second the first two heats and the last heat Patterson made a dash for the pole and stepped his best race of the day and finished second, giving him third money. The best time was 2.19¼.

The races at the fair were the best this city ever saw. Better races could not be seen anywhere, although faster time has been made. But on both days the speedy ones were bunched throughout the race, and the thousands of spectators were kept at a high pitch of excitement. Another feature of the races was that everything was run off without a hitch. Not a complaint was made to the judges and all the drivers and horsemen were satisfied. Long whips, spurs and chain whips were barred. No driver was given the slightest advantage. It is this kind of sport that will go a long way to build up the fair and get large fields and fast horses here.

The results were:

2.30 CLASS.

DOG RACE

The second and deciding heat of Mr. Yelland's dog race was run off and caused the usual amount of excitement and fun. The start on Saturday was much better than the one on Friday and there was an exciting finish. Stevenson and Mongraw fought it out for first place, and after awhile Clare Stewart and another boy came up the track for third, both using the whip freely and Stewart was in a fair way to lose had not his dog fought the other and thus gained an advantage.

Stevenson won both races and first money. Geo. Mongraw and Clare Stewart will divide second and third money.

The judging of harness horses was continued in front of the grand stand during Saturday afternoon and a big lot of very fine horses were shown especially in the single carriage and roadster classes. The lady riders brought out three young ladies all well mounted.

On the whole the performances in front of the grand stand was never before equalled. There was something doing all the time and the delays were remarkably short.

SPECIAL EXHIBITS.

T. Barrie & Co.

Delightful as the weather has been since the opening of the exhibition the cool spells that have already visited this section of the country have turned the people's thoughts to warmer wear for the days that are to come and the fine exhibit of T. Barrie & Co., furriers, attracted a great deal of attention. One of the central spaces was filled with a magnificent display of the richest furs, made up in the newest designs for all kinds of purposes and wear. A new thing in furs is the Persian lamb semi-fit, long coat for the ladies, which is shown on a form and catches the ladies' eyes at once Suggestions of what to wear this season are plentiful, such as Persian lamb muffs and ties, mink muff and ties, etc.

The space was luxuriously floored with fur rugs and the walls hung with rugs and coat linings, the whole comprising one of the most costly exhibits on the grounds. Mr. W. W. Armstrong was in charge and gave enquirers and sightseers courteous attention.

PRESBYTERY MEETING.

On Tuesday Afternoon in St. Paul's —Prof. Kilpatrick to be Here.

The Presbytery of Peterborough will meet Tuesday in St. Paul's church. The meeting is a very important one. Reports from visitors to the different mission fields will be considered and reports of committees will be presented.

In the afternoon at 2.30 Prof. Kilpatrick of Knox College will deliver an address on evangelism and all who are interested in this work are invited to attend.

A SMALL FIRE

Under the Grand Stand at the Fair Friday Afternoon.

A small fire was discovered under the grand stand on Friday afternoon while the fair was in progress and while the stand was packed with people. A cigar stub or a match started a blaze in the grass and it soon caught onto a board of the stand. Fortunately Ald. Buller noticed it early in the game and stamped it out before itgotunder way. So quicklydid the chairman of the Fire, Water & Light Committee act and so quietly that no one in the stand knew of the danger and the show went on without interuption. It is a good thing no one gave an alarm as the stampede which would have followed would have been horrible.

COOK AT NEW YORK.

Hopes to Reach There Before Peary —People Believe Cook.

New York, Sept. 18.—All the passengers are impressed by the sincerity of Dr. Cook's talks to them of his discovery of the pole. He says that the Danes with whom he lived for several months, are acquainted with the whole story of his exploits that he has also provided the Danish Government with the fullest proofs of his achievements and now is prepared to lay them before a competent body in America.

He expressed astonishment that the news of the discovery of the pole has created such a sensation, and is anxious to learn what specific declarations Commander Peary has made to minimize his exploit in order that he may formulate replies to them. He says that he could have reached civilization at the end of August, but was occupied with his writing. It is his hope that he will arrive in New York before Commander Peary gets there.

A NEW ORCHESTRA.

Leads the Music at Murray Street Sunday School.

A new feature was introduced at the Murray street Baptist Sunday school, yesterday afternoon when the seven-piece orchestra under the leadership of Mr. F. W. Miller, appeared for the first time. The orchestra is a big improvement and was thoroughly appreciated. The singing of the school was much better and good results are looked for. The attendance of scholars and teachers was very large and the prospect for the school this winter is very bright

FARMER TELLS INTERESTING STORY.

Whether Sick or Well, In Good Weather or in Stormy. He is Obliged to Work Always.

Market people complain about prices they have to pay for farm produce. They forget that rain or shine warm or cold, the farmer must keep at it or else the narrow profit, his bare living, will be lost to him.

A well-known Haldimand farmer, Mr. J. P. Pelletier, writes: "For nearly three years I was in poor health. A drenching storm caught me in the fields and wet me to the skin. I got home only to find I was threatened with inflammation of the bowels. I never got over it and felt weak and heavy and my system never worked quite right. But a farmer has to work—and I found myself going down hill with stomach, liver and kidney troubles. Failure seemed to follow everything. I remained wretched and sick until advised to use Dr. Hamilton's Pills. It is not easy to describe the sort of feeling a sick man gets when he strikes a medicine that he can see is doing him a lot of good. I was overjoyed—Hamilton's Pills put new life into me and everything worked right. Since cured with Dr. Hamilton's Pills I haven't had a single symptom of stomach, liver or kidney trouble. I am free from headaches, languor and weakness, as strong, robust as a man could be." No better medicine for general family use than Dr. Hamilton's Pills. They are mild., healthful and certain to cure. Sold in yellow 25c boxes, all dealers, or The Catarrhozone Co., Kingston, Ont.

T. A. S. are Champions of the City League

The T.A.S. are champions of the City Baseball League having easilly defeated the West Ends on Saturday afternoon in the final game of the season. The score was 19—4. It was the T.A.S. all the way, and they played their usual snappy ball. The crowd was small as most of the people wereat the fair grounds.

The City League has been a success this year and has furnished a lot of sport for lovers of baseball. There was a little wrangling a few weeks ago but that has blown over and the best team in the league won. The champions are now the holders of the Stratton Spaulding trophy

Havelock Won the Hall Cup Saturday

Havelock won the R. R. Hall trophy atthe football game at the Exhibition on Saturday afternoon. They acceptedthe challenge of the Brinton Carpet Co.'s team to play for the Midland championship. The game started about 4.30 o'clock and owing to a number of the carpet weavers' men being mixed up on the hour play was to start, they did not show up on time, consequently the team was handicapped. The Havelock boys were down with a strong bunch of kickers and they carried off the trophy. The score was 3—0. The game was watched by a big crowd of spectators.

There was a big meeting of the Rugby Association in the armories on Saturday night when it was definitely decided to place a senior team in the O.R.F.U. this year.This will make four teams in the senior and the probability is that the three western teams will be grouped and Peterborough will get a bye and not have to play until the second round. This will enable the local boys to get the senior city league nearly finished before any of the boys are called upon for the O. R.F.U. games.

There will also be a junior O.R.F.U. team which will be picked from the junior city league. Peterborough and Lindsay will likely compose one group.

The latest team to join the senior city league will likely be one from the regiment. Those interested will hold a meeting this week and make arrangements. There is a lot of good material in the 57th and some look to see the red coats win out if they enter.

A short practice of the senior O. R.F.U. team was held Saturday afternoon. This week will see a lot of good hard work done on the field and especially after the lights are installed.

S.S. RALLY DAY.

At St. Andrew's When the Whole Day Was Devoted to Children.

Rally Day proved to be very successful in St. Andrew's yesterday. All three services were devoted to the work among the young people. In the morning the pastor, Rev. J. G. Potter addressed the congregation on the "Churches' Duty to the Young People," and in the evening he spoke to the young people on "What Young People Owe to the Church." His text was 2 Tim., 1-6, "Stir up the gift of God that is in thee". Special music was rendered by the choir with orchestra accompaniment. Miss Olive Howell, Miss Winslow of Toronto, and Mr. Gordon Wright sang. The service was very bright and helpful.

In the afternoon the printed service supplied by the Central Committee was used. There was very large attendance of young people. The beautiful floral offerings were last night distributed to the hospitals in the city.

FALL RACE MEET.

Fair Directors are Considering the Advisability for Holding One.

The races were so good at the Peterborough Exhibition and the people took to them so well that the directors have decided to hold regular race meets on the grounds at intervals. The fair association controls the track now and they may hold a meet this fall. good by the Peterborough people, and with the management as good as the directors provided the game would soon be very popular here. It is to be hoped that the fair management will succeeded with their new undertaking.

A SURPLUS.

Fair Directors Will Have Over $1,-000 for the Treasury.

There was a big gate receipt this year. The two days of the fair brought in over $2500 in cash besides a large sum of money from entrance fees. President Leary said last night that they were in no position yet to make a statement as they had not had time to fix up the books and see where they were at. The receipts all along the line were however away ahead of last year and there will be a surplus of at least $1000.

It must be remembered that the prize list was increased $300 or more but this will likely be evened up by the increase in live stock entries for which there is a fee. At any rate the directors will have a good sum to put towardnew buildings.

COMPLAINT COMMITTEE.

To Make Suggestions to the Exhibition Directors.

As a suggestion to the Peterborough Exhibition directors it might be mentioned that a complaint committee would be a good thing in connection with the fair. The duties of that body would be to look around and see what is lacking and what can be provided for next year to improve the fair. For instance the illuminations at night were not up to the mark; a bigger grand stand with two or three entrances is needed. A band stand east of the judges' stand would be an improvement, etc., etc.

The directors might also take the opportunity this fall and wait upon the council in reference to permanent grounds. If the matter is delayed it will be too late.

WOMEN FIGHT DUEL.

Both Dead as result of the Scrap.

Chicago, September 19.— Mrs. Julia Tripp, and her sister-in-law, Mrs. Jacob Silvers, of New York, are dead, as the result of a pistol and knife duel between the two women in Mrs. Tripp's apartments in a fashionable residential district of this city. There were ten bullet wounds and one cut on the body of Mrs.Tripp while Mrs. Silvers received a bullet wound in the chest and several knife slashes. Only one revolver was fired in the apartments, but eight empty shells and two cartridges were found indicating thgt the revolver was emptied and reloaded during the struggle The furnishings of the apartments were in disorder and in every room there were evidences of a desperate struggle. Mrs. Silvers was alive when found and rallied sufficiently to state that she killed her sister-in-law and then shot herself.

Mrs. Tripp was fully dressed, but Mrs. Silvers was in her under-clothing. Mrs. Silvers had been staying at the Tripp home for about a month and the two women are said to have had frequent quarrels, principally over the division of household duties. It has been Mrs. Silvers' custom to take a nap in the afternoon, and it is evident she had prepared for this as usual.

Shortly after 3 o'clock in the afternoon Mrs. Tripp appeared in the hallway in front of her apartments, screaming for help. "I am being murdered in here," she shouted to a neighbor, and immediately closed the door.

At almost the same time Mrs. Silvers appeared in a bloodstreaked nightgown at the rear entrance of the apartment and cried to the janitor: "Come quick and save me; I am being killed."

When the apartment was entered blood was found on the parlor curtains, and several pictures had been broken and chairs overturned. In a bedroom off the parlor Mrs. Tripp was found lying on the floor fully dressed. Her face and waist were covered with blood and a pool had formed beneath her. She was dead.

Mrs. Silvers lay on the bed in an adjoining room, and her nightgown and bedclothes were covered with blood. Blood was gushing from a deep cut in her forehead. She was unconscious. At her side was a revolver, and on the floor were a number of empty shells. Several bullets had passed through Mrs. Silvers' body, making wounds both in front and back. Search of the rooms failed to disclose the knife with which the cuts had been made. Mrs. Tripp had four children, all of which were at school when the tragedy occurred.

Ontario Government Stands with the People for The Cheaper Power

The Ontario Government Shows Its Courage in the Fight With Cheap Power Enemies.

DID NOT GRANT FIAT

The Power Scheme Will Now Go on Uninterruptedly and Rapidly to Completion.

Toronto, Sept. 18.—"I have decided not to grant a fiat to Major John A. Murray."

This was the statement Hon. J. J. Foy made to the Sunday World J. Foy, attorney-general, made to the Sunday World Saturday afternoon.

Last week Thos. P. Galt, counsel for Major Murray, made an extended appeal to the attorney-general to grant a fiat to enable his client to move for a permanent injunction restraining the hydro-electric power commission from carrying out its contract with the Ontario Power Company on the ground that the Ontario Power Company is taking water from the Niagara River without authority from the Dominion Government.

The fact is now assured that the attorney-general, who is responsible for the law of the province is determined that no case of this kind will be allowed to interfere with the expressed purpose of the people in favor of cheap power.

Sir James Whitney and his colleagues have been exposed to no small amount of vilification from quarters seen and unseen. The attorney-general's decision once and for all clears the atmosphere, and the power scheme will now go on uninterruptedly and rapidly to completion.

THE WEATHER.

Fine and cool.

Montreal Won from Shamrocks Saturday

Montreal, Sept. 19.—All records for N. L. U. games were swept away at the M.A.A.A. grounds this afternoon, when 12,000 people turned out to see the local lacrosse Derby, Montreal v. Shamrocks. The teams were:

Shamrocks—Goal,Muir, point, Howard; cover, Dillon; defence field, Kavanagh, Rochford, Mellwaine, center, Tobin; home field, Mundy, O'Reilly, Hyland; outside, J. Brennan, inside, J. Hogan.

Referee, Dr. Cousineau; judge of play, Cattarinich.

Shamrocks set a hurry-up pace from the start, and rushing in from the face off, Brennan opened the score in 40 seconds. A terrific shout went up from the Shamrock crowd as they saw their forwards making such an auspicious start, but in less than four minutes—3.25 to be exact, Henry Scott evened up. Montreal 1, Shamrocks 1.

Within the first five minutes, three Shamrocks had been sent to the fence, Hogan, Dillon and Mundy each getting five minutes. For a while after Montreal had scored play went along fairly lively. Montreal failed to take all the advantages that were given them by the absence of the three Shamrock men and had not increased their lead when all the penalities were up. Henry Scott missed a couple of chances that looked easy, but checking was close and hard by the Irish and the light home of the winged wheelers seldom got a chance. Dillon got a second penalty of five minutes. As the game went on the Montreals settled down to a steady attack and nothing but sensational work by Shamrocks prevented a score. Eventually, taking a big chance, F. Scott went right in, beat the defence and put Montreal in the lead in 13 mintes Montreal 2, Shamrocks 1.

JEAN FRANCIS MORRISON.

Much sympathy will be felt for Mr. and Mrs. Jos. F. Morrison, 270 Reid street, who lost their seven-year-old daughter, Jean Francis, who passed away yesterday afternoon. The funeral will be held this afternoon at two o'clock and interment will take place at Little Lake cemetery.

PREPARE FOR LUMBAGO

If You Have "Nerviline" Handy One Rubbing Will Cure the Pain.

THOUSANDS USE "NERVILINE."

The "strike" of lumbago is like a bolt of lightning—you never know when it is coming or where it is going to strike. Probably the one certain thing about lumbago is the fact that it can be cured by Nerviline—the only liniment that penetrates deeply enough to reach the congested chords and muscles.

LETTER No. 4875.

"Years ago I strained my back and suffered considerably with weakness over the spine," writes Darius P. Millan, a well known farmer, residing near Kingsville. "Then lumbago attacked the weak spot, and for days at a time I would have to lie up in bed, unable to move or turn. Liniments, poultices and hot applications failed to bring the desired relief, and I was in despair of ever getting really well again. I at last decided to test "Nerviline". I got five bottles from the drug store and had it rubbed on three times a day. The stiffness and pain left my back quickly, and by continuing Nerviline I was completely cured of Lumbago."

This is similar testimony to that of nearly five thousand Canadians who have written unstinted words of praise to the manufacturers of Nerviline. For the cure of lumbago, sciatica, neuralgia and rheumatism there is no liniment with one-fifth the pain relieving power of nerviline.

Refuse any substitute. Large 25c. bottles of Nerviline, or five for $1.00 at all dealers, or The Catarrhozone Co., Kingston, Ont. 2

DUMONT PLATE

MONDAY, SEPTEMBER 20, 1909.

ONTARIO'S WONDERFUL CLAY BELT.

The subject of home work for pupils is one that is certainly coming up for discussion in educational circles. Its abolition in the public schools of Stratford three or four years ago, except for those in the third and fourth books, has not, the Beacon observes, resulted in any apparent injury. It has not heard that either teachers or parents are anxious to return to it. The latest discussion on the subject was by the Galt teachers, which is thus reported in the Reformer:

Principal Linton was in favor of home-work as long as too much was not given. He did not think that children were physically injured by home-work, but some pupils do not get enough and are permanently injured by being on the streets and attending cheap shows. In regard to the time which should be spent at home-work he thought from fifteen minutes for junior classes to one hour for senior classes would be about right. He did not believe in difficult work, but work such as memorization, reading of history, etc., and he also was in favor of some written work, which he thought should be done by the smaller children with the lead pencil. Parents will be more interested in their children if they have home-work. It is not a crime for parents to help children. It creates a bond of sympathy between parent and teacher. Home-work shows the parents the progress of their children.

Mr. Alexander was not in favor of home-work. He thought that the pupils received enough of mental education, but they do not receive enough of physical development. Why do these large municipalities spend enormous sums of money on municipal playgrounds for the children to go to after school. It is a crime morally for a parent to do a child's work and then the next day the pupil puts in the work as his own. If the teacher does not interest the public in six hours, what is the benefit of home-work, where there is no supervision?

Chairman Wilkinson of the school board said the question of home-work needed great preparation. He had received complaints about home-work from parents, but never any requests to do away with it. The question was whether home-work was abused. Too much was not good and neither was so difficult work that help was needed. A reasonable amount of home-work placed with good judgment was all right for the pupil. The whole injury is the abuse of it.

Chairman Tebbutt said leaving a difficult subject out of home-work means more time spent in school and it gives good results. History was a good and interesting subject for the pupil at home.

It will be seen, says the Beacon, from the drift of the discussion, that none of the teachers favored subjects for homework which are not memorized. This is in harmony with the Stratford practice of late such subjects as arithmetic and grammar being excluded from home-work for those to whom it is given, and a limit of one hour being set.

HOME WORK IN SCHOOLS.

New Ontario signifies something more than Cobalt. The lure of the gold mines and the attractions of the Canadian West have diverted attention from the northern clay belt, now being, opened up by the two great railway projects—the National Transcontinental and the Temiskaming and Northern Ontario. The country has been a revelation to some of the Provincial legislators who are now touring it for the first time. It is believed to be on the eve of a sensational development.

The extent of the clay belt is variously estimated, says the London Advertiser, at from sixteen to twenty million acres of what is declared to be the richest soil on the continent. The sandy loam subsoil retains the moisture, and the plow encounters no stones or boulders. This season's grain yield was exceptionally large, and included wheat, oats, barley and flax. With the most fertile of pasture lands, dairying is already becoming a profitable industry butter selling at 35 cents per pound.

Of course, the land has first to be cleared. There is, however, no sap root to the growing timber, nor is there any growing timber, nor is there any firmly-embedded white pine, the woods consisting solely of spruces and jack and red pine. Roots are extracted with little difficulty. Timber, pulpwood and cordwood are easily disposed of at profitable prices, the railway pucking up cargoes left along the tracks by settlers.

The experience of some of the settlers has been as remarkable as anything in the West. On May 10 last one of them purchased his farm in Glackmeyer Township—a stretch of primeval forest. With the assistance of a lad of 19, he constructed a log cabin and proceeded to develop the land. The two of them cleared three acres the first three weeks, but did much better afterwards. The tree roots were removed by block and tackle, and the soil was tilled, no fertilizing being necessary. Today this settler has sixty-five acres under cultivation, has built barns and stables, owns four cows, two horses, a score or more hogs, besides a large number of chicken all told for. He is now marketing a fine crop of roots and vegetables, and is able to make a fine display of the same at the Englehart Fair. His clearing was done too late to permit of the sowing of grain this season, but the timber alone more than paid double for the work. Two brothers of this settler, who intended going out to Saskatchewan, have decided to join him in this most promising country.

Another settler who purchased 170 acres a couple of years ago for $700 has refused $5,000 for the property, and still another is considering an offer of $1,100 for land for which he paid $125 last spring, and which he has since taken a profitable crop.

A vigorous propaganda for the settlement of the clay belt should follow the visit of the legislators.

Lady Morell Mackenzie, widow of Sir Morell Mackenzie, wrote in her will :— When I die, I hope my children will wear as little black as possible. White or mauve I like, but not black. And I hope they will not shut themselves up, but go out among their friends, and to places of amusement. I am not afraid of them forgetting me, and I want them to be happy." To which our esteemed contemporary The Bobcaygeon Independent adds: An eminently wise woman. Those hideous trappings of mourning are the remnants of heathenism. They are a fraud, for they represent a condition of mind that cannot be sustained. Even if it were possible for grief to be continuous, no person has any right to impose their woe on the brightness, cheerfulness, and happyness of others. The wish of the departed would naturally be that their friends be frank, honest, and happy.

WOMAN HAS RAILROAD JOB.

Secures Grading Contract and Hires Rest of Family.

Regina, Sask., Sept 19.—Saskatchewan has a real, live woman railroad contractor. She is at present grading a few miles east of this city.

She is Mrs. Bennet, formerly of Chippewa Falls, Wis. For the past two years she has been taking small grading contracts, but this is the first railroad work of importance she has undertaken. The work in hand is an important section of the Maryfield-Blenfait branch of the Canadian Northern and she has her whole family at the work, her husband also aiding her.

Mrs. Bennet, whose maiden name was Theresa Rice, was born at Chippewa Falls and graduated from the normal school at LaCrosse, Wis. Two years ago doctors advised an outdoor life and a dry climate. She handles with equal facility a scraper or a plow and talks about "six-foot grades," dumps, scoops, fills and cubic yards of earth as glibly as do most women about sewing or needle work. Mr. and Mrs. Bennet alternately take a day off each week to bake the supply of bread.

MARRIAGE IN MOROCCO.

Negotiations by the Parents—Fortune Telling Made Easy.

Negotiations for the marriage of, say, Ali Mahmoud are now in progress. The parents are arranging the whole affair. Probably Ali will not see his future bride until after the ceremony. The wild, passionate stories of the east do not occur in Morocco. A Moor says that "a woman is, like unto your shadow—run away from it and it will always follow you; run after it and you never catch it."

Ali Mahmoud's indifference to the personal appearance of his intended spouse is not shared by the young lady. Zaida is just fourteen years of age and, following the usual custom, has recourse to magic to gain an idea of the appearance of her future lord and master. The marabout, whose services at this juncture are indispensable, is now requisitioned. This saintly person finds it an easy matter to practice on the ignorant superstitious females.

Without any difficulty he ascertains the identity of the bridegroom and carefully studies his personal appearance. He then repairs to the residence of the bride on the day appointed. A Thursday is set apart for these seances. The prospective bride smears the left side of her face with khol and rouge and prepares a huge plate of couscous with her left hand. Then she pays successive visits throughout the city to seven baths, seven mills, seven bakeries and to the banks of seven streams to invite the genii to supper.

At midnight the females of the house assemble at the gate of the house and in total darkness go through the prescribed formula of welcome to the ghostly visitants. The couscous is already set out for the delectation of the supernatural guest. When a reasonable time has elapsed for the supposed genii to finish their meal all present ascend to the housetop.

Fires are lighted, and the marabout, with great solemnity, throws small pellets of various drugs upon them on behalf of the girl for whom the oracle is to be interrogated. By the various forms assumed by the flames and smoke the marabout then professes to describe the future husband of the girl. The ceremony concluded, he takes his departure with a substantial reward and a further enhancement of his reputation as a magician and holy man.

A few days later Zaida receives a present from her future father-in-law, and the contract of marriage is definitely arranged.

A deputation of the bridegroom's relations now come to fetch her, and the procession is formed to lead her to her new home.

Ali Mahmoud and Zaida eyed each other curiously, for it is the first time they have met. The long and tedious ceremonies and the six days of feasting over, they take up their quarters in his father's house until such time as he can afford to set up an establishment of his own. Zaida is relegated to the monotonous indoor life of the Mohammedan women. She is never allowed to leave the house. Like most of her class, she has very little culture. She can neither read nor write, while she is denied the solace of prayer from sheer ignorance of the prescribed. Her prime is passed in trivial household duties until such time as her husband can afford to buy a negress slave. Her amusements consist of futile embroidery and long hours at eventide spent on the terraces reserved for the women.

A New Railway Centre.

Kamloops, the thriving town at the junction of the Fraser and Thompson Rivers in British Columbia, is at present the scene of great railroad activity, and all the indications point to its becoming a divisional point on three railway systems—the Canadian Northern and the Grand Trunk Pacific, as well as the Canadian Pacific. For the engineers on the Canadian Northern and Grand Trunk Pacific are discovering what Sir Sandford Fleming discovered thirty years ago—namely, that the natural connection between the Edmonton district and Vancouver via the Yellowhead Pass is through the Thompson Valley. The chief engineering difficulties are not between Kamloops and the Yellowhead, but between the Yellowhead and Edmonton, where 200 miles of muskeg country are baffling the graders, and may hold back transcontinental construction in this direction for some years to come.

Summer In Greenland.

Among the interesting observations made by the Danish northeast Greenland expedition is one on the sudden oncoming of summer in that land of ice and fiords. The change is described as sudden. Gradually the temperature of the snow had risen to the freezing point, and then in one day it all melted. "The rivers were rushing along, flowers were budding forth, and in the air the butterflies were fluttering." The birds came nearly all on the same day, and most of them even at the same hour. One day there were only the ordinary ptarmigan and the raven; the next there were the sanderling, the ring plover, the goose, the eider duck and many others.

A Bisley Story.

Stories of Lord Roberts are perhaps more numerous than authentic. Here is one which may or may not be authentic, but is certainly amusing. The Commander-in-Chief was watching the firing at Bisley, and noticed two or three mistakes on the part of the markers. So he went to the telephone and rang up the officer in charge. "The marking is very bad," he observed. "It's the best you'll get," retorted the officer. "Do you know who I am?" sternly demanded Lord Roberts. "No, I don't." "I'm Lord Roberts." "Well, I'm Lord Wolseley." Lord Roberts loves a joke, but how he took this one history does not record.

Delicately Put.

"The first day out was perfectly lovely," said the young lady just back from abroad. "The water was as smooth as glass, and it was simply gorgeous. But the second day was rough and—er—decidedly disgorgeous."

A clever, pops.ar Candy Cold Cure Tablet—called Preventics—is being dispensed by druggists everywhere. In a few hours Preventics are said to break any cold—completely. AMONG THE CANNIBALS.

British Force Goes Into Wilds of Northern Nigeria.

Details of the expedition lately concluded by the southern Nigerian Government, by which some 5,000 square miles of hitherto unknown and unadministered country in the north and on the borders of Northern Nigeria have been brought under effective control, have been received by Reuter's Agency.

These operations, which were carried out among tribes who for the most part had never previously seen a white man, proved entirely successful, and were so managed that there was practically no serious fighting. They began early in November last, and only concluded in the middle of April.

The British force consisted of 700 men of the southern Nigeria Regiment, under the command of Colonel Trenchard, who had with him thirty officers, six Maxims and 700 carriers.

The Yala people, in whose country the columns remained for a month, gave a good deal of trouble. When their villages were entered they were found to be deserted, the women and live stock having been removed. The men meanwhile had formed bush camps in the open yam fields, where they could see the approach of the British, and had also hidden in the branches of trees scouts, whose duty it was to fire signal guns.

The people then took to their heels and encamped elsewhere, but fired on the column when they were in what they regarded as a tight corner. This tribe, like most of those encountered, was armed with flint locks and carried poisoned arrows, but, fortunately, the country was fairly open and the aim not very accurate.

After some weeks of this kind of thing the Yala came in, but declined to give up their arms.

In places the natives, hearing of the approach of a large force, dug pits and planted stakes to prevent their progress. What little hostility there was occurred during the earlier part of the operations in the Okpoto country and among the northern Ibo tribes.

Colonel Trenchard's force started in two columns—one from the Niger and one from the Cross River—with instructions to make for an unknown spot marked X, the two afterward joining at Ikem, where the first base camp was formed. From this base small columns were sent out in various directions, each being responsible for a definite district, which was to be mapped, and where the officers' duty was to get into touch with the natives and to show them how to make good roads.

In each case the commanding officer of the column summoned the local chief and explained the Government terms, emphasizing the fact that all human sacrifices must stop, that good roads must be made, and that a British commissioner would beappointed, who would settle all disputes.

On these occasions there were impressive gatherings of thousands of natives, in many cases cannibals, and for the most part naked, or practically so. They did not show undue delight at the advent of the British, and, as a rule, silently listened to the recital of the Government terms, and then slowly dispersed.

The various columns report that they found far less human sacrifice and juju rites in the hitherto unknown north than among the tribes of the delta, and, on the whole, the people were of a better physical type. Several juju places were seen, and a big centre was destroyed. It was impossible to discover the nature of the juju rites practiced, but in the vicinity of one big juju house discovered in a bush clearing there was found a good deal of blood—whether human or not was not ascertained.

EASINESS OF DEATH.

The Last Moments Rarely Witness Real Physical Suffering.

It is as natural to die as it is to live—and as easy. Practically all the distress witnessed as taking place in the act of dying is the automatic tissue struggle against dissolution and is not recognized by the individual who seems to be acutely suffering. Occasionally in the delirium of fever, in uraemia and other intoxications, in certain of the brain degenerations witnessed in old age, there is an exhilaration or happy, peaceful calm that pervades the final scene.

I remember one dear lady, a Swedenborgian, who believed that after death one would follow the occupation that had been most congenial in the present life. This lady was especially fond of babies, fondling them and giving them personal care. When she came to die of a lingering, mucal pulmonal illness, at the final moment a beatific smile pervaded her countenance, she beamed in gentle ecstasy and murmured: "Now I see the heavenly light. I see a baby."

Yet nature is not often so lavish with her kindness. Usually everything is dulled, blunted, so that at the border line between life and death it is often difficult, even impossible for a certain time, to say whether the soul has fled or not. It was long debated in medical circles whether or not there was a reliable test for death. Indeed, the tissues always survive the departure of the vital spark for a longer or shorter time. A muscle will contract to the electric current for a considerable time after the eye is dull, the intellect a closed book, the soul on its way. The hair grows palpably after death.

Of course there are some exceptions, and once in awhile—so I read and so I am told—some one dies really in conscious terror and protest, but I have not seen such a taking off, and I can state candidly that of the many scores of deaths that I have witnessed, in hospital and out, among the very poor and very wealthy, the young and the old, the pious and the blasphemer, some of which have been very painful to behold, in nearly all of them the main actor at the last moment was not conscious of what was going on. The occasional examples of conscious cheerfulness are the exception and still more so instances of terminal torture.—E. L. Keyes, M. D., in Harper's Magazine.

Reward of the Faithful Servant.

The merchant prince had sent for the faithful clerk, who confronted his master tremblingly.

"Jenkins," said the merchant prince, "you have been in my employ for twenty-five years."

"Yes, sir," faltered the faithful clerk.

"Twenty-five years to-day, is it not?"

"Yes, sir. Thank you, sir, for remembering it."

"Tut! Tut! You have been an honor to the house."

"Thank you again, sir."

"You have proved yourself worthy of my confidence."

"Oh, sir!"

"You have grown gray in my service."

"Yes, sir."

"Jenkins, as a slight token of my recognition of this fact I have a present for you. Pray accept this bottle of hair dye!"

Jules Verne's Methods.

Jules Verne, author of "Twenty Thousand Leagues Under the Sea," required no legislative enactment to make him get up early. He rose at 4 in the morning in the summer and climbed up a sort of watch-tower which dominated his house in the Boulevard de Longueville, Amiens, where his study was situated. He called this room his "cabin." There he used to work until 10 o'clock. In the winter when he awoke he would await daylight either reading in bed or evolving scenes for his novels. After lunch it was his practice to walk along the boulevards, which form a beautiful green cincture around the old Picardy town. Then he would make for his club and read the newspapers and study the scientific reviews, from which he derived great aid in the composition of his books.

The Salt In the Sea.

The saline elements of ocean water may be in part derived from geological formations which consisted largely of like matter, but it is generally considered that the saltness of the sea is sufficiently accounted for by the deposition of soluble salts from the rivers. Salts of various kinds form part of the constituent ingredients of the earth's soil everywhere. They are washed out by springs and rivulets and carried to the sea by large streams, and as the evaporation which feeds the streams carries none of the dissolved matters back again the tendency is for the salts to accumulate in the sea. The principal saline ingredients found in ocean water are chloride of sodium, or common salt, and salts of magnesia and lime.

Earnings of Novelists.

I do not believe (writes Mr. Edgar Jepson in T.P.'s Weekly) that there are 20 novelists in England to-day making $5,000 a year out of their novels, and I have been collecting facts—cold, sad facts—about the rewards of fiction for a long time. The sincere novelist is the worst off of all. There are just four sincere novelists in England to-day who are making over $5,000 a year, and they make it by their other qualities, not their sincerity. The rest of the sincere novelists—the novelists who are doing sincere, valuable work—are not making $5,000 a year, and they never will.

Curate and Cotton Spinner.

Mr. George Harwood, M.P. for Bolton, mentioned recently at a meeting of the Churchmen's Union, that for some years he worked as a curate in Manchester, and at the same time attended to his business as a cotton spinner. He frequently attended the Manchester Exchange, and went from there to preach, returning to the Exchange to sell his yarns. Mr. Harwood has also been called to the bar, and as lawyer and legislator alike he has done good service to his old love, the Church.

Surprise Party.

With a deftness acquired by long and patient practice the pickpocket extracted an old but well filled wallet from the hip pocket of the unsuspecting old gentleman with the beaming countenance against whom he had carelessly brushed, when leaving the street car, and on reaching a secluded place he opened it.

The contents had been wrapped with great care in numerous thicknesses of blank paper. Removing the wrappings one by one he found in the centre of the package a card with this inscription upon it:

An Expert Lady Linguist.

Miss Martcina Kramers, of Rotterdam, has a wonderful command of language, and ranks among the first lady linguists. She can read and speak thirteen languages, and there are few men in the world who can equal that record. Besides, she had sufficient knowledge of seven other languages to converse in them, and she has planned to add a new language to her list every six months for several years.

MAYBUILD LINE.

The Lindsay Warder says:— Mr. S. Anderson, who is now operating 40 miles of electric railway and represents large interests, is looking into the possibility of a street railway system from Fenelon Falls to Bobcaygeon passing through Sturgeon Point, and it has been suggested that a large hotel and pavilion may be erected on the beach at the east end during the coming winter. This would materially increase the earnings of the railway, and also make Sturgeon Point one of the most popular resorts in Canada.

KIPLING SEES DISASTER.

Predicts Trouble as a Result of Present Social Tendencies.

National disaster from present-day tendencies of the National Government is prophesied in a long poem by Rudyard Kipling, which the Morning Post prints.

Describing the citizens of an imaginary state, "The City of Brass," he tells how they started to "decree a new earth at a birth without labor or sorrow."

Their administrative ideas are thus described:

They said: "Who has hate in the soul?
Who has envied his neighbor?
Let him arise and control both that man and his labor."
They said: "Who is eaten by sloth?
Whose unthrift has destroyed him?
He shall levy a tribute from all because none have employed him."
They say: "Who has toiled? Who hath striven and gathered possession?
Let him be spoiled; he hath given full proof of transgression."

They raised their ramparts to convert them into pleasure grounds, encouraged rebellion in their colonies, flung away the Imperial possessions their forefathers gained, scouted faith and endeavor, and derided the idea of restraint.

Nemesis comes when they are steeped in self-satisfaction in the form of a hostile host, and the poem concludes:

The eaters of other men's bread, the exempted from hardship,
For the hate they had taught through the State brought the State no defender,
And it passed from the roll of the nations in headlong surrender."

A Fading Art.

The art of carving is disappearing among the Maoris of New Zealand. There is no demand for war canoes now, except from world's fairs and Paris expositions. In the olden days, the chief's house, the storehouse, and the posts of the village stockade were ornamented with carved figures. But the rainy climate of the country and other causes have been fatal to these monuments. One must go to the museums to see specimens of this fading art.

The "haka" is the war dance or call to arms of old Maoriland. Stripped to the waist, the men arrange themselves in two files and begin to chant in a low tone, a woman giving them the time. They turn right and left, stamping and waving their arms, till they work themselves up to a prodigious pitch of fury expressed by rolling eyeballs and deafening roars. Standing to one side, the woman "leader" urges them on to the climax. They give one thundering stamp, and thrust out their tongues as far as they can. This was the supreme act of defiance to the foe. In the olden days it was no light matter to attend a "haka." Then each warrior brandished a heavy greenstone club, and once heated to the pointed of battle frenzy, would hardly cool down, even at a play "haka," without clubbing somebody just to keep his hand in practice.

His Lucky Donkey.

The costermonger's love for his donkey was demonstrated recently at the People's Palace, Mile End road, London. Nearly 200 donkeys, carefully groomed, with their owners standing by them in their Sunday best, were exhibited under the auspices of Our Dumb Friends' League.

Many of the costermongers declared that they would not part with their little animals for untold gold. "Here's the foundation of all my little fortune," said William Wild, an East End coal dealer, as he stroked his sturdy prize winner, Lazy Lightning. "Five years ago I was dead broke; I borrowed 30 shillings to buy my little pal here"—patting the donkey again.

"First my donkey carried coal from street to street on a barrow; but gradually my trade grew. Now I've got three little shops, and a farm out in the country. But it was the donkey that turned my luck and put me on the right road. Out at the farm there's a nice green field, with shady trees in it. As soon as this show's over that's where my donkey's going, to end his days just doing nothing but enjoy the green grass—and rest."

Many prizes were awarded to the best-groomed donkeys. A challenge cup and a set of harness, given by the Queen, were won by Jenny, a smart little donkey that pulls the barrow of a wood and coke hawker.

Cinematograph in Central Africa.

There seems to be no limit to the ramifications of modern inventions. No sooner does anything establish itself in the favor of the public than it bobs up serenely everywhere. Who would have thought, for instance, that the cinematograph, popular and entertaining as it is, would have appealed to the wild and woolly native of Central Africa? Yet a letter from the office of Superintendent of Buildings at Zoomba, Nyassaland, assures me that this is so. The venture is successful, too. Mr. Hackett, of Frome, Somerset, is the intrepid pioneer, and the letter I have received states that "his exhibition has attracted the natives by the thousand." They call Mr. Hackett the "witch doctor," and he is still proceeding into the interior, "with a convoy of 40 Kaffirs to carry provisions, outfit, etc. —London Answers.

Historic House for Sale.

Smallfield Place, Burstow, England, which is associated with the life history of Anne Boleyn, is to be sold by auction by Messrs. Knight, Frank & Hutley. The house is considered to be the most perfect example of domestic architecture in Surrey. Smallfield was given by Lord Burghurst to John de Buratow as an acknowledgment for assistance received from him when thrown from his horse in the French war in the reign of Edward III. The "priests' hole" is still there, and the house is in a wonderful state of preservation.

Looking For Jobs.

No less than 3,500 applications were received for thirteen vacancies under the Surrey (Eng.) County Council the other day.

It's a pity when sick ones drug the stomach or stimulate the Heart and kidneys. That is all wrong! A weak Stomach, means weak Stomach nerves, always. And this is also true of the Heart and Kidneys. The weak nerves are instead crying out for help. This explains why Dr. Shopp's Restorative is promptly Making Stomach, Heart and Kidney ailments. The Restorative reaches out for the actual cause of these ailments—the failing "inside nerves." Anyway test the Restorative 48 hours. It won't save so soon as that but you will surely know that help is coming. Sold by all dealers.

NEW ZEALANDER ON ENGLAND.

Sir Robert Stout Delivers a Sharp Criticism on Old Land.

Sir Robert Stout, ex-Premier and present chief justice of New Zealand, has very definite ideas of the consequences of England's failure as a world-power. Sir Roberts knows the Antipodes as a man who has spent nearly all his life there, going out from the Shetland Islands at the age of 14, and returning to Great Britain for the first time now at the age of 65. He also knows New Zealand as one who has been chiefly concerned in building up the Island Dominion.

In an interview with the navy builder of 1886, Wm. T. Stead, he declares that England suffers chiefly from slackness and illogical views. The non-Conformists, for example, wish to disestablish the church, and at the same time establish religion in the parish school.

Laborers are very slack in their methods, and three men are needed to do the work of one. The young Englishmen are not equal to the New Zealanders and the farms are not well cultivated. There is lack of enterprise, care and energy on the part of the manufacturer. As a result Americans captured the best part of the New Zealand trade. The habit of fuddling, on which $800,000,000 a year are spent in England, is another source of national weakness noted by Sir Robert.

"We hope there will be no war," said the New Zealander, "and if war should come we hope Britain will be victor. But do not make any mistake about it. If by any disaster any foreign power were to dictate a peace in London which transferred New Zealand to the conquerer, the next day we should hoist the Stars and Stripes, the only other flag save that of the Union Jack under which New Zealanders would live."

Sir Robert should pay a visit to Canada.

Boom on Rand.

After a long interval it is once more quite "boom time" in Johannesburg.

It is generally agreed that prospects have never been so good since 1895. All classes of business are already feeling the affects of better times. Activity on the Stock Exchange is enormous, for the public have at last fairly "gone into it."

One feature of the moment is the immense amount of pegging of claims going on in the surrounding district. Thousands of claims allowed to lapse in times of depression have been taken up again, and many flotations are probable, but there are fears in some quarters that this may be overdone and produce a reaction.

The general view, however, is that the upward tendency will last. The reduced working costs on mines have made payable the working of millions of tons of reef which hitherto have not been a profitable proposition, and at the same time have immensely increased the profits of the more valuable mines.

It is regarded as a good sign that so far the improvement has not produced the mania of gambling which marked the 1895 "boom." In the commercial part of the town traders report a marked increase in trade, especially in luxuries, such as pianos, motor-cars, carriages and horses, which first felt the bad times.

There are strong hopes that the wave of prosperity will result in the opening up of new mines and that it will thus absorb the unemployed.

Two Female Quixotes.

Two women in Natal are at present engaged in fighting the whole force of the British Government. The battle waged by the Misses Colenso—two sisters—is carried on without visible signs of outward warfare, and yet it is a struggle as daring, as strenuous, and a adventurous as any real engagement. Embarked in a quixotic attempt to rescue the native chief, Dinizulu, from the coils of British diplomacy, they have spent almost every cent they had in the world. For the last five years the elder sister, Harriet, has been the guide, philosopher and friend of the native chief, and remained near him while he waited in prison until her efforts got him out, only to be tried and re-convicted on another count. The devotion of the Colenso sisters to the cause of the black chief has won the respect of even their inveterate enemies, the English foreign wire-pullers, who wish to turn the land of Dinizulu over to white explorers.

No white people in the whole of South Africa have greater knowledge and experience of the Natal natives than the two sisters. They are the daughters of the famous Bishop Colenso, first and last Bishop of Natal, who devoted his life to studying the needs and ministering to the spiritual wants of the black men.

Lady Bancroft's Lovebird.

My wife had lost a little green parrot, for the return of which I offered a reward of ten shillings, giving our address, but no name. One of the newspapers, however, had a paragraph headed, "Lady Bancroft's Lost Lovebird." It was my privilege, with others, to receive at this period our present King and Queen—then Prince and Princess of Wales—at the Botanical Gardens, when His Royal Highness produced a newspaper cutting and said, "I think I have Lady Bancroft's lost bird. One of the breed was flying about for some days in the garden at Marlborough House, and a gardener succeeded in catching it this morning. Pray go and see if it is yours, as I hope it may be; but, mind, I shall claim the reward." I replied, "Certainly, sir; it is small, but appropriate, being—half a sovereign."—From "The Bancrofts: Recollections of Sixty Years."

His Four Seasons.

An amusing story is told by Sir W. H. Holland of the answer given by a London waif to a Salvation Army captain. The zealous officer had asked the boy what work he did to provide him with food, etc., and the reply was: "I pick strawberries in the summer, I pick hops in the autumn, I pick pockets in the winter, and oakum for the rest of the year."

The Reindeer Herd.

The latest news from Labrador indicates that Dr. Wilfred Grenfell's community of reindeer is a splendid success. The number of the herd has increased to seven hundred, and all the animals are in the best of health.

In the training and domestication of the deer the doctor's staff has made astonishing progress, and for traction purposes they are rapidly superseding the fierce and treacherous sledge-dogs, and in time will take their place altogether. In addition to this the does give milk of some thirty quality, which affords excellent [illegible] for children.

Words of praise have ever prevailed in advertising "copy." That a producer should wax enthusiastic over his own wares is but human. But it's the praise of the consumer that counts—and it is to a discriminating and critical public that "Cosgrave's" refers you.

It is safe to say that no product, of any kind, enjoys a more enviable reputation than does this same Cosgrave Beer of Toronto in markets where it is offered.

Its self-evidenthonesty of purpose, purity, brilliancy, body, and every other attribute that goes to make a perfect beer are ever in evidence.

HIS FORETHOUGHT.

A Bit of Zeal That Was Not Appreciated by His Wife.

He was a very busy man, and, like all of his kind, he hated to waste time by unnecessary waiting. That was why in the midst of his correspondence along about 11 o'clock the other morning he paused and, turning to his secretary, requested him to ring up his residence on the phone.

"Jemmison," he said, "get my house on the wire and ask Mrs. Blank to come to the phone. Just tell them that I wish to speak to her."

The secretary made off, and in a few minutes the required connection was made.

"Is that you, Mary?" said Blank when he got to the phone.

"Yes," was the answer.

"Well, this is John," he said. "I have just rung you up to tell you that Barker was in here this morning with two tickets for the theatre tonight. He and Mrs. Barker have been called suddenly out of town, and he thought we might like to use the tickets. How about it?"

"Fine!" replied Mrs. Blank. "I have nothing else to do."

"All right, my dear," continued Blank. "The curtain rises at half past 8."

"Yes; I know," said Mrs. Blank.

"I thought I'd let you know in time so that directly you have had your lunch you can begin to to put your hat on," he went on. "Then we can get there before the middle of the first act. By-by, dear."

The only answer was the angry click at the other end of the wire, which seemed to indicate that another receiver was in trouble, but Mr. Blank only laughed as he returned to his work.

Shut Your Mouth.

George Catlin traveled among the North and South American Indians during the first half of the nineteenth century. He says that "the contrast between the two societies, of savage and of civil, as regards the perfection and duration of their teeth is quite equal to that of their bills of mortality, and I contend that in both cases the principal cause of the difference is exactly the same—that of respiration through the mouth during the hours of sleep. An Indian warrior sleeps and hunts and smiles with his mouth shut and with seeming reluctance opens it even to eat or speak. An Indian child is not allowed to sleep with its mouth open." He often saw red Indian mothers pressing their infants's lips together, sometimes roughly. The consequence is "while the teeth are forming and making their first appearance they meet (and constantly feel) each other and take their relative natural positions for that healthful and pleasing regularity which has secured to the American Indians perhaps the most manly and beautiful mouths in the world" and extraordinarily sound white teeth.

One of His Father's Ways.

Mr. Jefferson had not been altogether an exemplary husband and father, but he possessed certain engaging qualities which secured him many friends and made his death the cause of sincere mourning to his widow. "Mis' Jeff'son, she's done broke up over Eb'neezer's bein' took off fr'm de pneumony," said one of the neighbors.

"She sutt'nly is," said another—"mournin' around de house all de time, she goes. Why, day befo' yist'day I was thar helpin' her, an' she only stop cryin' ones, an' dat was to spank little Eben fo' takin' m'lasses out'n de jug right into his mouf when her back was turned.

"When she'd spanked him good an' set him down she says to me, 'He makes me t'ink ob his pa so much I cyant bear it!' an' bus' right out cryin' ag'in."

De Wet's Old Friend.

The placing on the retired list of Lieut.-Gen. Sir Charles Knox recalls the story of one of the most exciting chases of modern times. Gen. Knox was the hunter and Gen. De Wet was the game. Some of the references to Gen. Knox in De Wet's book are most interesting. One runs: "My old friend Gen. Knox, whose duty it had been to prevent me entering Cape Colony on a previous occasion, was again entrusted with this same task. Any person who has had dealings with this general will acknowledge that he is apt to be rather a troublesome friend, for not only does he understand the art of marching by night, but he is also rather inclined to be overbearing."

A Case For Sympathy.

Two matrons of a certain western city, whose respective matrimonial ventures did not in the first instance prove altogether satisfactory, met at a woman's club one day, when the first matron remarked:

"Hattie, I met your 'ex,' dear old Tom, the day before yesterday. We talked much of you."

"Is that so?" asked the other matron. "Did he seem sorry when you told him of my second marriage?"

"Indeed he did and said so most frankly."

"Honest?"

"Honest! He said he was extremely sorry, though, he added, he didn't know the man personally."

Hawaiian Pronunciation.

The letter "o" in Hawaiian is always given the Roman sound, as in "oh," while "i" always has the sound of "e." "Hawaii" is pronounced therefore nearly "Hah-wy-ee," with the accent on the middle syllable, or "Hah-wee," some authorities holding that "w" should always take the sound of "v." The letter "o" always has the sound as in the word "no," and the pronunciation of the name of the capital city of the territory is "Ho-nolu-lu" and not "Hon-o-lu-lu," as usually spoken by the Anglo-Saxon.

A Painter of Warships.

Mr. W. L. Wyllie, R.A., famous for his pictures of vessels of war, is in the quaint old Tower House, facing the sea and its ships, at Portsmouth. Mr. Wyllie has worked on the deck of a vessel in the Atlantic for days, trying to get the real color of the deep seas, so difficult is this to as lights and shades are always changing.

LITERARY HEROISM.

Great Works Accomplished Under the Most Adverse Circumstances.

Some of the world's most valued literary productions have been accomplished by their authors under circumstances of pain and hardship almost incredible.

Of the blind writers one immediately thinks of Milton and of our own Prescott, who, though not entirely blind, was almost so and performed prodigies in the way of historical composition while handicapped in a way calculated to disheartan the bravest.

Another great historian, John Richard Green, did his work in the midst of a hard battle against disease and pain. In 1869, when he was finally prostrated by the disease that had taken hold many years before, the doctors gave him no hope of living more than six months longer. Nevertheless Green set about the task of writing his "Short History of the English People," a task that he triumphantly carried to a conclusion notwithstanding racking pains.

We are assured on excellent authority that Elizabeth Barrett Browning wrote the greater number of her fine poems confined to a darkened room, to which, by reason of her infirmities, only her own family and most intimate friends could be admitted, while she was in great weakness and almost continuous pain.

Another brave struggle was that of the poet Heine. The last seven years of the German thinker's life were spent on what has been termed his "mattress grave" in such pain and suffering that he was obliged to consume doses of opium in quantity sufficient to have killed several men. Yet Heine not only endured all this with resignation and even cheerfulness, but managed to produce some of his most finished work, among which were "Last Poems and Thoughts" and his "Confessions."

To the list of literray heroes must be added the name of Scott. Sir Walter's manly fight against failing health and financial misfortune during the closing years of his life is too well known to need more than passing mention. When the commercial reverses came that left him staggering under a huge burden of debt, he, shattered in health, laboriously set to work "with wearied eyes and worn brain" to recoup. Painfully he toiled, sometimes as many as fourteen hours a day, until the end came, but nevertheless he succeeded in meeting every cent due by reason of the monumental indebtedness forced upon him.

Convincing.

The landed proprietor purchased a carriage horse to match one he already possessed. A day or two later he asked his groom what he thought of the new arrival.

"Weel, sir," said Sandy, "he's certainly a gran' looking horse.

"Weel, he diana seem to tak' kindly to anybody, sir. In fact, he diana like to gang intae his box to feed him yet."

"Oh," lightly responded the horse's owner, "he hasn't settled down yet, that's all. His surroundings are strange to him. I don't think there's anything wrong with his temper."

"I didna either at first, sir," remarked Sandy, "but he kicked me frae oot o' the box twice, an' when he come to think about it that's sort o' convincin'!"

Faint Praise.

A little girl taking her first ocean trip was awakened from a sound sleep one morning when the steamer was close to a strip of coast where the mountains tower sheer from the water's edge to a height of thousands of feet, presenting a majestic aspect not to be equaled in many other places. The little girl's father, carrying her to the deck, pointed to the great line of mountains and asked her:

"Well, what do you think of that?" expecting, as was natural, that she would be quite overwhelmed at the sight.

Instead she just rubbed her sleepy eyes.

"They look," she muttered dubiously, "like hills."

Whereupon she went to sleep again.

His Depresser.

He was handsome, young, talented. He had apparently everything one could wish for as a start in life, but every time he came into a room where there were mirrors he absorbed himself in contemplation of the back of his head.

"That spot is getting thinner and thinner," he complained when he called on the woman and sat down after looking at it in all the mirrors in her flat. "Don't make any difference what I do with it, it keeps on getting larger. I've tried everything, rubbing it with kerosene, with hair tonics; can't do a thing with it."

"It's just as well," she consoled him. "If you didn't have that little bald spot to keep you humiliated here'd be no associating with you."

Don't waste your money buying plasters when you can get a bottle of Chamberlain's Liniment for twenty-five cents. A piece of flannel dampened with this liniment is superior to any plaster for lame back, pains in the side and chest, and much cheaper. 14

Mr. Max Hamilton who has spent the past two years in the Lake Athabaska region in the service of the Hudson Bay Company, has returned home on a visit, the guest of his mother, Mrs. Hamilton, Auburn.

Miss Eileen Eyres of Calgary, who has spent the past two months with friends in Peterborough and Toronto, returned to ger home in the West to, returned to her home in the West Saturday.

Mrs. E. H. D. Hall and family, have returned to the city after spencing the summer at Stony Lake, will receive for the first time since her marriage on Thursday and Friday, the 23rd and 24th inst at No. 1 Fleming Place.

"Can be depended upon" is an expression we all like to hear, and when it is used in connection with Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy it means that it never fails to cure diarrhoea, dysentery or bowel complaints. It is pleasant to take and equally valuable for children and adults. 13

Mount Robinson.

Advices have been received at the Grand Trunk General Offices that Mount Robson, the highest and hitherto unassailed peak of the Rockies have been conquered by a Canadian, the Rev. Geo. Kinney, Methodist Minister of Victoria. Mr. Kinney accomplished this remarkable feat unaided on August 13th and has authentic proofs of the ascent. Mr. Kidney started three months ago to climb the mountain and met with innumerable obstacles but eventually reached the summit. Mt. Robson is on the line of the Grand Trunk Pacific Railway in the Yellowhead Pass country. It is 13,700 feet high.

Professor Coleman of Toronto University has made two attempts to climb this mountain, one in 1907 and one in 1908 but was not successful at either time.

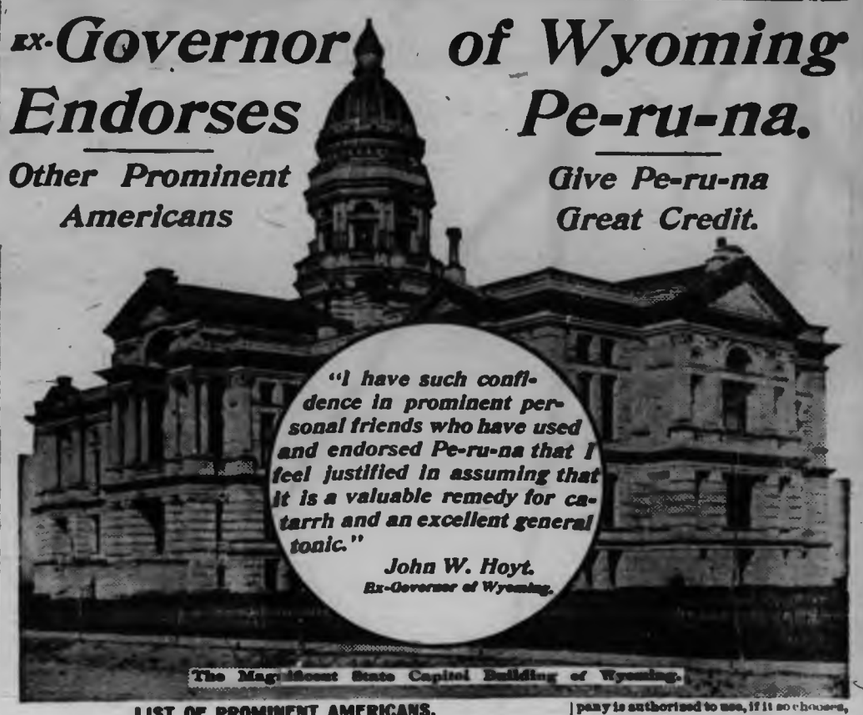
Other Prominent Americans Give Pe-ru-na Great Credit.



"I have such confidence in prominent personal friends who have used and endorsed Pe-ru-na that I feel justified in assuming that it is a valuable remedy for catarrh and an excellent general tonic."

LIST OF PROMINENT AMERICANS.

Gen. W. H. Parsons, Confederate Army, ex-State Senator, Texas.
Col. Bailey, of Washington, D. C., Labor Organizations and U. V. L.
Col. Patten, of Washington, D. C., Military and Masonic Orders.
Hon. R. S. Ryan, of Alaska, Ex-Member English House of Parliament.
Congressman Cale, of Alaska, well known on Pacific Slope.

Gen. W. H. Parsons.

Gen. W. H. Parsons is ex-State Senator and ex-Special Judge of the Supreme Court of Texas, also Brigadier General in Confederate Army. In a recent letter from 925 H St., N. W., Washington, D. C., this prominent gentleman says:

"Upon the recommendation of personal friends and many strong testimonials as to the efficacy of Peruna in the treatment of the numerous symptoms of the la grippe with which I have been afflicted for four months past, I have been induced to undergo a treatment with this justly celebrated formula. I feel a decided change for the better after using it only one week. It is especially good in toning up the stomach and has had a decided effect upon my appetite. I therefore feel much encouraged that I am on the road to complete restoration.

"My numerous friends in Texas, where I have had the honor to command a brigade of her Veteran Cavalry in a four years' war, may accept this voluntary testimonial to the merits of Peruna as a sense of obligation on my part for its wonderful efficacy."

Col. Wm. Bailey.

William Bailey, 56 I St., N. E., Washington, D. C., Past Col. Enc. No. 69, Union Veteran Legion, and prominently identified with many of the great labor protective associations in Chicago and New York, and Secretary of one of the largest associations in the former city, had for nearly thirty years been afflicted with kidney troubles.

Within a short period he has been persuaded to try Peruna, and his present healthy condition is attributed to his judicious use of that great remedy. Washington climate is notoriously bad for kidney and liver troubles, yet by a judicious use of the remedy he is now quite cured and in excellent physical condition.

This brief statement of facts, without exaggeration or hyperbole, appears to tell the whole story, which the Peruna Company is authorized to use, if it so chooses, believing, as I do, that by so doing it will be for the general good.—Wm. Bailey.

Col. C. L. Pattes.

Col. C. L. Patten, 509 T St., N. W., Washington, D. C., a Lieutenant in the Old Guard, an exclusive organization composed of soldiers of distinction who fought in the civil war, and a Thirty-second degree Mason, writes as follows:

Hon. R. S. Ryan, now residing in Nome, Alaska, was formerly a member of the English House of Parliament, and Secretary to the late Irish patriot, Charles Stewart Parnell. There were 120 in attendance at the pastor's adult Bible class and 17 in Mr. Mowatt's young men's Bible class. After the service was the roll call of the classes and scholars. Says Brandon Normal School is a Prosely-tizing Institution

Archbishop Langevin backs up Dr. Roche—Protestants are Lieing About Catholic Church in the West

Quebec, Sept. 19.—There's a scriptural saying, "By their fruits you shall know them." Personally I am not acquainted with the heads of the Brandon Normal school, and I judge of that institution only from the results it produces. From the results as I know them, I have no hesitation in saying that everything the Catholic Register has said of the Brandon Normal school is true.

The above is a statement made to the representative of the Star by Archbishop Langevin of Winnipeg, in an interview accorded him last evening in the residence of Archbishop Begin of Quebec, where his grace of Winnipeg is staying during the sessions of the first Plenary Council of the Catholic Church in Canada.

The highest cignitaries of the Church are assembled here and while they have many matters of importance to deal with, the Ruthenian question is, perhaps, the great question, and will be the source of most serious discussion at the meetings of the council.

It is certainly a live issue, so much so in fact that bishops from eastern Canada, who personally are not interested have become so through what the representatives of the Church from the West have told them.

Considerable interested was added to the discussion when their graces read the interview in Friday's Star in which Rev. Dr. E. D. MacLaren, secretary of the Home Missions of the Presbyterian Church, denied certain statements mace in the Register. The interview has been read and re-read, and when the newspaper man was accordec the interview with Archbishop Langevin, he was already thoroughly aware of what Dr. Maclaren had stated.

"As I said," continued his grace, "I have nothing to say against the heads of the Brandon institution, with whom I am not personally acquainted. I am well aware of the work that normal school is doing, as the missionary priests from all over my diocese keep me informed as to the facts. And the facts are these. Many of the young men who come out from Brandon Normal school are Socialists, and most of them are deadly opposed to the Catholic religion.

BACKS UP DR. ROCHE.

"Dr Roche, writing from the West to the Register, called that school a 'low-down proseletizing, Orange institution.' Dr. Roche is quite correct in his language, for the facts are as I have stated them.

"Dr. Maclaren may say what he likes about the scheme of Canadianizing the Ruthenians," continuing his Grace, "but it is quite certain that the Protestant ministers in the West are constantly spreading awful falsehood against the Catholic bishops and priests. As an instance they tell these poor, simple-minded Ruthenians that if they come to us if they have anything to do with the Catholic priestsathey will be compelled to pay us, that we will impose upon them the system of tithes. That system does not exist in the West as the Protestant ministers well know, and it never will exist.

"Again, theystate that we want to and will take away from them their Greek rite, which is absolutely false.

"Further, I am aware from facts, or I personally know them, and as they have been told to me by others, that in these hospitals, which have been established among the Ruthenians, much proselytizing work has been going on."

"Proselytizing is a rather serious word, is it not?" the newspaper man enquired. "It is," said his grace. "But it is the correct word to use. Clothes, medicines, positions, even money have been offered to these peopnle if they will but forsake the Church, and go over to them.

"I most certainly approve of Dr. MacLaren's idea of Canadianizing these people." Archbishop Langevin concluded. "That is the very thing we are trying to do. Weare constantly telling them of our British institutions and we are laboring constantly to make them understand these institutions, and to have them appreciated at their true worth, and abide by them. I have grave doubt, however, as to the Canadianizing influence of any band of men, whose main efforts appear to be the stirring up of an intense feeling of distrust against the Catholic Church."

Two Brothers Met Death by Drowning

Toronto, Sept. 20.—One of the saddest drowning accidents of the season occurred yesterday in the bay, a short distance from the island clubhouse of the R.C.Y.C., when Joseph Gilding, aged 31, and his brother Hunter, aged 21, were the victims claimed by the water. The most grievious feature of the affair is that the two Gildings were the last of a family of three boys, all of whom have met death by crowning.

The Gilding home which is at 67 Cecil street, is a sad one this morning. The father, who is a car cleaner by trade, told the press representative, who called, of the death of the third son. It occurred just 21 years ago on July 7th, at the foot of John street. The little fellow, five years of age, was playing with his cog and got in the water beyond his depth. He was drowned before help could be obtained.

May Buy Property for Exhibition Purposes

There is some talk among the aldermen now of the city acquiring property for the Agricultural Society. The proposition was first introduced last year, but it was too late in the season for the council to do anything. Now, however, there is plenty of time to discuss the matter and to have a bylaw prepared to submit to the people in January.

There are so far two suggestions made, viz., to get land down near Crawford's Grove, and the other is for land between the city and Lakefield. In either case the grounds would likely face the river which would be an excellent idea. Land can be secured near Crawford's Grove at a reasonable rate and it would be very suitable. The street railway would of course extend its line down. It would mean that everyone would have to take the cars or drive down.

The same would apply if the grounds were moved north but there would also be Lakefield to draw from, and no doubt that village would send a large representation down if the people could use the street cars.

The time has come when the city could profitably take over the fair grounds. A reasonable sum might be invested at considerable profit to the city. To purchase the present grounds would take too much money and in years to come they cannot be enlarged. Something like $30,000 is the price asked and the property is no doubt worth that for building purposes, but not for fair grounds. Land can be had and good buildings erected for that sum of money.

A popular idea seems to be for the city to invest the money and place the exhibition into the hands of a commission by society to be run for the city and the city to be benefitted by the profits. There is no reason in the world why it would not be a success. New grounds, a new track and new modern buildings would in itself be an attraction next year that would draw immense crowds. The people would be very likely to carry a bylaw for that purpose providing they were getting value for their money.

New Canadian Ice-Breaker was Helpless on the Atlantic

Coal Gave Out and She Had to Be Towed In—Has Been Slightly Damaged.

St. John's, Nfld., Sept. 20.—The Canadian icebreaker, Earl Grey, nineteen days from Barry, England, was towed into port yesterday morning by the tugs Ingraham and Green.

When off the Newfoundland coast coal ran out. Off Baccalieu the mate and crew went ashore to telegraph for coal. The Ingraham was immediately despatched with ten tons, but a heavy gale made the transfer impossible.

The Earl Grey is slightly damaged, some guards and the fore rigging being destroyed.

This is her maiden voyage. She replaces the Stanley between Charlottown and Pictou, and today takes 200 tons of coal, and after picking up the men at Baccalieu, who were prevented from returning owing to stormy weather, proceeds to her destination.

On her trial trip the Earl Grey made over 16 knots, so that the voyage has been very slow.

For the Propagation of Catholic Religion

Quebec, Sept. 20.—According to Archbishop Gauthier of Kingston, the object of the Plenary Council, which began yesterday is "to deliberate and legislate for the propagation of the Catholic religion in this young and prosperous country."

In the course of his sermon at the opening session yesterday Archbishop Bruschesi of Montreal, said in part:

"Last year upon these ever-celebrated plains, where our destinies were decided, we witnessed the event of the tercentenary celebration. Our fathers and our founders were summoned from their graves. They reappeared and were marshalled before us, Jacques Cartier, Champlain Marie De L'Incarnation, Laval, Montmagny. These were the glorious personages of the past. We recognized them and were grateful to them. We saluted them with our hearts overflowing with emotion and our eyes dimmed with tears. We heard them, we lived with them, we sang our admiration and our gratitude. They were days full of sunshine and gladness. Today another event is taking place here, an event which gives us an opportunity of witnessing what has happened and the marvelous progress accomplished in 300 years. Illustrious Montmorency, De Laval contemplates from the heights of heaven what is taking place here today. He sees gathered together from all parts of the immense territory he once ruled and which form as it were a halo round his tomb, the rulers of the Church in Canada. Over 300 archbishops and bishops he sees, his successors, or, rather his children. They are gathered here from the east and the west, some young, others advanced in years, and weary with their ministerial labors. They are not come, though, to discuss political questions or matters of industry. True the favor and progress of their country is dear to their hearts but they are not inventors or reformers. They will neither retrench or change, for their creed is complete and immutable. They are gathered together here for the glory of God, for the integrity of the faith, for the splendor and worship of the altar, for the salvation of man, for the discipline and instruction of the clergy, for the Christian education of youth and for the general welfare and universal concord of the people of Canada."

Ald. Turner to Resign His Seat in Council

A meeting of the City Council will be called either Wednesday or Thursday night for the purpose of finishing up the business started some time ago. Another important matter will be the resignation of Ald. J.J. Turner. It is understood the chairman of the Legal Committee has decided upon this action in the face of the proceedings taken against him by Mr. Kingscote. The grounds for the action are that Ald. Turner being a member of J. J. Turner & Sons, accepted a contract from the city to decorate the street corners on May 24th for the visit of the regiments. The amount of the contract was $25.

By Ald. Turner resigning his seat in the council the proceedings will stop and if his resignation is accepted then the candidate who received the next highest vote last January will be declared an alderman to fill the vacancy for the rest of the term.

Mr. Alex. Gibson is the man who will be eligible.

Ald. Turner has been a good man in the council. He has pursued a safe and progressive course and is looked upon as one of the best men at the board. His fellow aldermen will regret his retirement from office.

INSPECTOR OF PRISONS.

Makes Report on Peterborough's Jail and Found Things All Right.

Following is the report of the inspection of Peterborough jail:

An official visit of inspection was made to Peterborough jail on Sept. 10th, 1909, when there were 11 male prisoners in custody.

On inspection the general condition of the building, beds and bedding, corridors and cells, yards, closets, drainage, ventilation and water supply were all found satisfactory.

Among the prisoners were some old men who should be provided for in a house of refuge. It is most unfortunate that this condition has to again complained of in connection with Peterborough jail. The county has made provision for its indigents, but the City of Peterborough instead of providing a house of refuge or arranging with the county for the care of its poor permits these old men to be sent to sent to jail from time ta time although they have been guilty of no crime.

The food supplied the prisoners is in accordance with the regulations, and the quality is good. There were no complaints in regard to the dietary. The cost of rations for the past quarter was .09 per day. The supplies are obtained by cantract.

The prisoners are comfortably clothed. There were 20 suits of pris on clothing on hand.

On examining the books I found the entries correctly made and up to date.

Attention must again be called to the necessity of providing a more economical heating system for the jail and court house. The old stoves should be done away with, and a central heating plant installed. The attention of the County Council should be especially directed to this at once. The heating of Peterborough jail is most defective.

In several places the walls require painting. It is mistaken economy on the part of the County Council to allow these repairs to be neglected.

My visitof inspection impressed me favorably in regard to the discipline and management of the jail, which in every part was found clean and in good order.

TO RE-PAINT AMBULANCE.

If the Committee Has Enough Money Left.

The Dan Spence ambulance is in a very bad state of repair. It needs painting in the worst way. As a matter of fact it looks like a man who has gone for a whole day in the hot August weather without a drink. The members of the Property Committee urged the necessity of having it repainted at once but the chairman told them the money was getting short. He will however get the city treasurer to make out a statement to date of the funds and if there is enough money on hand the ambulance will be repainted.

WORKMAN FELL.

From a Ladder at the New Public Library Building.

A workman named Johnston, employed at the new Public Library building, fell off a ladder about two o'clock yesterday afternoon, but fortunately his injuries were not severe The ladder is used by theworkmen in descending to and ascending from the cellar and Johnston was about to step on the landing at the top of the ladher when the ladder tilted and he lost his footing falling on the hard ground below, a distance of about 15 feet. The Dan Spence ambulance was summoned and the injured man was taken to his apartments at the Grand Hotel.

DIVERTING CREEK.

Water Commissioners Having Creek Brought Down the River.

The small creek which empties into the river just below the water works pumphouse is now being diverted so that it will empty into the river just below where the new pump house will be erected. This is part of the original scheme and the Bishop Construction Co., are doing the work although the commissioners are supplying the pipe. A three foot pipe is being laid adistance of about 560 feet. The creek runs through farms and barnyards and for that reason is being diverted. The commissioners did not like the idea of such a creek emptying into the river just above the water work intake pipe. About 75 per cent. of the work had already been done and the balance will be finished this week.

Will People Vote on Isolation Hospital By-Law Next January?

Property Committee will Recommend to the Council That It be Submitted to the People in January

If the recommendations of the Property Committee are accepted a bylaw will be prepared to submit to the people next January re the Isolation hospital. The council has authority to spend $15,000 without going to the people but it was decided last night that it would be proper to give the people an opportunity of saying whether or not they want to spend that much money and whether or not theyare prepared to be taxed for the annual expense of maintenance which will run from $2000 upwards according to the amount of sickness there is in the city.

The committeemet last night and went over the specifications with Architect Blackwell. It took a lot of time but they are already for the now for the council to pass. Then the question of what to recommend to the council came up Ald Morgan wanted it to go to the people, claiming that was the only fair way to do. Some of the committee were content to have the work gone on with at once, but when it was pointed out that practically no work could be done this year anyway, they all agreed to Ald. Morgan's suggestion.

The council will decide the matter at the next meeting.

COOK ALSO IN SIGHT.

New York, Sept. 20.—The Danish steamer Oscar II., with Dr. Frederick A. Cook on board, was reported by wireless 65 miles east of Fire Island at 9.55 this morning. The captain of the Oscar II. was not fed by the office of the Scandinavian-American Line here to anchor off Sandy Hook all night and not to come up the harbor until tomorrow morning. The revenue cutter will leave to meet the steamer at Quarantine at 6.30 a.m. tomorrow. This will enable the plans for Dr. Cook's reception to be carried out unchanged.

SYDNEY IS EXCITED.

Sydney, Sept. 20.—All is excitement here today. It is known that Peary is nearing the city, and every one seems anxious to get the first sight of his now famous ship, the Roosevelt. The progress of the vessel is being bulletined, and long before the boat could possibly reach the harbor the docks were lined with people. All are talking of the explorer, and to see him seems the common aim. A reception committee is arranging for a formal welcome in which it is certain all citizens will join. While all these preparations are being made to do honor to the explorer, his wife is anxiously waiting to see the man who left her long months ago.

ARCTIC CLUB IN A FLURRY.

New York, Sept. 20.—The first of the two claimants of premier North Pole honors will be at the gateway of his home port this evening. The Scandinavian American steamer Oscar II., with Dr. Frederick A. Cook aboard, is now approaching New York at half speed, and the friends of the Brooklyn explorer are putting the finishing touches to the big demonstration with which they intend to show tomorrow the faith in his assertion that he was the firstmanat the "top of the earth."

There was a flurry among the members of the Arctic Club and Bushwick Club of Brooklyn, this morning, when word came that the Oscar II. was only 65 miles east of Fire Island. This position would have enabled her to reach her dock here without difficulty late this afternoon

LAYMEN'S MISSIONARY CAMPAIGN.

District Conference to Be Held in Ontario and Through the West—Preliminary Visit by Representatives of Canadian Council.

The Canadian Council of the Laymen's Missionary Movement have announced as their policy for the coming fall and winter a series of district conferences in central cities throughout the Dominion. These are primarily for the study of the best methods for introducing and continuing the work of the Laymen's Movement in the different congregations, and one important feature of practically all the conferences will be a study of the problem of "How to Bring a Church to Its Highest Missionary Efficiency."

The meetings in Ontario will be held at different times through the entire winter, the first one being at Galt September 23 and 24, with a programme given elsewhere in this issue, which is to be more or less a model for all of the meetings through the season.

A campaign of western cities is to be held beginning at Winnipeg October 22, and the Winnipeg Executive Committee is co-operating and planning meetings through Manitoba and part of Saskatchewan.

The delegation of speakers will be made up of a few prominent laymen from Toronto, Ottawa, Montreal and Winnipeg, Board Secretaries, returned Missionaries, and Secretaries of the Laymen's Movement, who expect to remain in the west until about the 1st of December.

Messrs. A. E. Armstrong, of the Presbyterian Board, of Foreign Missions, and R. W. Allin, Secretary of the Anglican Church Laymen's Movement, left Toronto September 11th, to visit most of the cities where meetings will be held, to make preliminary arrangements.

The Evangelical Association churches have divided into districts, and will organize the Laymens Movement among the men, the first meeting being at Waterloo on the 14th for the district, with Berlin as its center

A $250,000 Fire in Town of Midland

Midland, Sept. 19.—One of the most destructive fires that has visited Midland for many years took place today, when the entire stock of lumber, amounting to about 15,000,000 feet, together with slabs, edgings, lath, etc., in Chew Brothers mill yard, went up in smoke, leaving the yards an ash heap.

About nine o'clock this morning the fire was discovered in a lumber pile on the east side of the yard a few feet from the esplanade on the water front. Through heroic efforts the mill was saved, although it was on fire a number of times. The stables of the firm were consumed, and the office had a very close call. The firemen worked for seven hours, until they were very near exhausted.

The loss is a heavy one, not only to the owners of the lumber, but also to the mill firm, as tramways and everything in the yard was consumed. The water and light power house of the corporation and some dwellings in close proximity to the yard, had a close call, but were saved from injury.

The total loss is roughly estimated at a quarter of a million dollars. The lumber, which covered 15 acres, was owned by a number of firms, and was partially covered by insurance.

The Penetanguishene Fire Brigade lent valuable assistance.

CANADIANS ARE THERE.

With the Goods in a Big American Railway Deal.

El Paso, Texas, Sept. 18.—Dr. J. S. Pierson, one of the several Canadian capitalists who recently purchased the Rio Grande Sierra Mard and Pacific Railroad, and secured control of the Chihuahua and Pacific, announced last night that the two roads would be extended from an outlet at the mouth of the Rio El Paso to the Pacific Ocean with Mayo, in Sonora, the project to involve $15,000,000. Surveys will begin in thirty days.

He stated that this road would give a shorter road to the Pacific than the Southern Pacific and would give the shortest route to Central United States Points from Central and South America.

LIVER LAZINESS.

Those Who Lack Energy and are Unsuccessful Should Read This Closely.

"I am only thirty years old, yet for almost two years I have felt more like seventy-five. I have found it difficult to sleep at night and in the morning feel so depressed and weary that effort was difficult. My hands were always clammy and perspiration on slight effort would break out all over me. It was not unnatural that I should begin to brood over the chance that I should soon be unfit to do my work, and this dread made my sleepless nights perfect misery. After repeated trials of medicine and mixtures Dr. Hamilton's Pills gave me the first gleam of hope From the very first I could see they were different in action from other pills. They didn't and acted as naturally as if nature and not the pills were cleansing my clogged up system. My spirits arose, I felt much better, the sluggish action of the system gabe way to normal activity. Dizziness and headaches ceased, appetite good color and ambition to work returned and have remained. I am like a new man and I thank Dr. Hamilton's Pills for it all."

This was the experience of J. E. Parkhurst, a well-known grocery dealer in Jefferson. Follow his advice, use Dr. Hamilton's Pills for your stomach, kidneys and liver and you'll enjoy long life and robust good health. All dealers sel, Dr. Hamilton's Pills, in yellow boxes, 25c. per box, from The Catarrhozone Co. Kingston, Ont.

Tickling or dry coughs will quickly loosen when using Dr. Shoop's Cough Remedy. And it is so thoroughly harmless, that Dr. Shoop tells mothers to use nothing else, even for very young babies. The wholesome green leaves and tender stems of a lung healing mountainous shrub give the curative properties to Dr Shoop's Cough Remedy. It calms the cough and heals the sensitive bronchial membranes. No opium, no chloroform, nothing harsh used to injure or suppress. Demand Dr. Shoop's. Accept no other. Sold by all dealers.

Are You Using An Oily Liniment?

Beware of Any Thick, Greasy Liniment That Contains Acids and strong Ammonia.

No doctor would think of prescribing a greasy, thick, ammonia liniment— they can't penetrate and in consequence are unable to reach the source of pain. The best liniment for general household use is "Nerviline" which is sold under positive guarantee to cure pain.

Nerviline is sure to cure pain because it is immensely stronger than other liniments, because it is more penetrating, because it relieves the congested condition that excites pain because it restores circulation of the part. Now you understand why one person in three throughout the Dominion of Canada uses Nerviline. These people have tested it. They know how good it is, because in the hundred and one minor ailments that afflict us at odd times they found Nerviline always cured. Nerviline is an absolute antidote to pain, powerful, soothing, and certain in its action.

Nerviline is inestimably the finest remedy for pain found in the world. Not an ache or pain anywhere that Nerviline does not cure.

Try Nerviline for neuralgia, headache, sciatica, lumbago, stiffness, rheumatism — wherever there is soreness or pain, rub on Nerviline and you'll be cured. Refuse anything offered you instead of Nerviline, large 25 cts. bottles, five for $1. All dealers, or The Catarrhozone Company, Kingston, Ont. 3

THE WHIP HAND.

The Washington powers that be have decreed by the new tariff that if any Canadian province forbids the exportation of pulp-wood for use in the manufacture of wood pulp and print paper, an additional duty of one tenth of one cent a pound shall be levied on print paper valued at three cents per pound or less which comes from that province, and that a duty of one twelft of a cent per pound shall be assessed on mechanically ground wood pulp coming from such a province and which would otherwise be admitted free of duty under the general provisions of the law. This provision, of course, will affect Ontario which prohibits the exportation of pulp wood cut on its crown lands.

Under another provision the additional duty of one-tenth of a cent a pound, together with a countervailing duty amounting to about thirty five cents a ton, equivalent to the export ddty of twenty five cents, imposedby Quebec upon pulpwood, shall be added to the regular duty on print paper, which is manufactured from pulpwood cut from the crown lands in that province. The duty of one-twelfth of a cent per pound in addition to a countervailing duty of twenty-five cents a cord is placed on mechanically ground pulp wood produced from the wood cut on crown lands in Quebec. Chemical wood pulp imported from that province will be assessed with the additional countervailing duty equal to twenty five cents per pound on the wood.

But Canada has, and may easily retain, the whip hand. The United States needs Canada's pulp wood more and more every year. For a time the republic may seek to uphold its side by tariff-expedients; Canada can stand such a situation until the United States must meet fair conditions laid down by this county.

It's a pity when sick ones drug the stomach or stimulate the Heart and Kidneys. That is all wrong! A weak Stomach, means weak Stomach nerves, always. And this is also true of the Heart and Kidneys. The weak nerves are instead crying out for help. This explains why Dr. Shoop's Restorative is promptly helping Stomach, Heart and Kidney ailments. The Restorative reaches out for the actual cause of these ailments—the failing "inside nerves." Anyway test the Restorative 48 hours. It won't cure so soon as that but you will surely know that help is coming. Sold by all dealers.

THE WHEAT POSSIBILITIES.

The Canadian Northwest is celebrated lor its production of wheat, and an increase in the production is important not to Canada only but to the world at large. What, then, are the prospects? The subject was discussed by several speakers during the meetings of the British Association for the Advancement of Science at Winnipeg, and, though marked differences of opinion were noted, optimistic predictions were the general rule.

A conservative paper by Professor Mavor of Toronto directed its criticism against official estimates of acreage and yield. The writer complained that reports by the Dominion and the provincial governments did not agree, and urged that a new survey of settled and unsettled lands was the first essential for securing an accurate system of crop statistics. But he raised his own earlier estimates of the possible acreage in the Westfrom 13,750,000 to 17,000,000, and of the possible production from 254,000,000 to 317,500,000 bushels.

Major P. G. Craigie chairman of the agricultural section, proved that the predictions made by Sir William Crookes ten years ago were unduly pessimistic, that they had been outstripped. The indications were for a very large increase in the acreage, and it was fair to assume that the yield per acre would be increased because of improved methods of cultivation. In this connection an interesting appeal was made by one of the speakers, Professor Wilson of Dublin University, to the experience of Great Britain. He said that in 200 years the average wheat yield of the country had risen from eight to thirty-two bushels per acre, while the area cultivated per capita had risen from fifteen acres to forty or forty-five acres. One man raised today twelve bushels in the time and with the labor that were required by his ancestor 200 years ago to raise one bushel.

The rosiest estimates of future production would give Canada a yield equal to one-quarter of the present world production. They are not put forward with very great authority, but the more sober calculations have in them some solace for those who look with fear to a time of grossly inadequate supplies.

FAILURE OF DAYLIGHT BILL.

An adverse report has recently been made by a special committee of the English House of Commons on the proposition to enact a law requiring that the clocks be set aheac an hour on a certain day in spring and set back again on another day in autumn

As the plan would enable many persons to obtain more exercise and diversion in the daytime, the committee thinks well of it, and hopes that wherever its voluntary adoption is found to be practicable it may be carried out.

But in view of the serious inconvenience it would cause to certain industries, especially railroad transportation, legislative compulsion is strongly disapproved.

As the project originated in England and as the verdict was rendered after many changes designed to remove objections had been made, there seems to be only a slight chance that any measure of the kind will be enacted in the future by the Britishparliament.

Moreover, the decision just reached being a particularly deliberate one, will hardly be without influence elsewhere.

The line of reasoning which defeated the scheme on one side of the Atlanticwill not lack force on the other

Almost every one has heard of or knows something of The Prudential Insurance Company of America, Home Office, Newark, N. J., often called the Gibraltar life insurance company, because of its use of the Rock of Gibraltar as a trade-mark.

This big company has established a branch office in this city and is conducting business in both branches of insurance, Industrial and Ordinary

About thirty-four years ago Industrial insurance was unknown in the United States. Introduced on this continent by John F. Dryden, founder and present chief executive of The Prudential, the Industrial plan at once found favor with the public.

This life insurance is applicable to every member of the family, from one year of age to seventy.

The premiums are collected weekly from the homes of the insured and are from three cents per week upward, according to the amount insured for, thus bringing the benefits of life insurance protection within the means of the wageearning population.

Much of the thrift and economy of this same wage-earning population may be traced to Industrial insurance The habit of saving required to meet the weekly premiums unconsciously, but surely, inculcates similar habits of thrift and saving in other directions.

In the Ordinary branch all the popular forms of Life and Endowment policies are issued, in amounts from $1,000 up, and the cost is the lowest consistent with the liberal provisions of the policy and the high grade of life insurance offered. As an investment a Prudential policy offers superior advantages.

The high standing of The Prudential makes it possible to do business satisfactorily, because there can be no doubt of a Prudential promise.

The Prudential has seven and three-quarter millions of policies in force, representing nearly a billion and a half of insurance.

In extending its field of operations to this city The Prudential offers a splendid opportunity for our young men to obtain profitable employment Progress and promotion will be quick if hustle and ability are shown. Any young man desirous of making money and building up a successful future should consult The Prudential's representative here.

Prudential Agents will be glad to furnish full and complete information concerning the plans of The Prudential to any one. You should take an interest in life insurance, for it may make a big difference to your family's happiness some day.

MAGISTRATE'S SKIN DISEASE CURED

Magistrate F. Rasmussen, of 811, Marquette Street, Montreal, writes to the Zam-Buk Co. as follows:—

"Gentlemen.—For many years I was troubled with a serious eruption of the skin, which was not only unsightly, but at times very painful. I first tried various household remedies, but all these proved altogether useless.

"I then took medical advice. Not one, but several doctors in turn were consulted, but I was unable to get any permanent relief. Some time back I noticed a report from a Justice of the Peace who had been cured of a chronic skin-disease by Zam-Buk, and I determined to give this balm a trial.

"After a thoroughly fair test, I can say I am delighted with it. I have the best reasons for this conclusion; because, while everything else I tried—salves, embrocations, washes, soaps, and doctors' preparations—failed absolutely to relieve my pain and rid me of my trouble, three boxes of Zam-Buk have worked a complete cure.

"In my opinion Zam-Buk should be even more widely known than it is, and I have no objection to you publishing this letter."

For eczema, eruptions, rashes, tetter, itch, ringworm, and similar skin diseases, Zam-Buk is withoutequal. It also cures cuts, burns, scalds, piles, abscesses, chronic sores, blood-poisoning, etc. All druggists and stores at 50 cents a box, or post free for price from the Zam-Buk Co., Toronto.

SECRET WEAPONS!

Stolen by French Officer for the Germans.

Paris, Sept. 19.—although the French military authorities have denied that the improved machine gun stolen from the barracks at Chalons sur-Marine has left the country, it is now definitely established that the gun is safely in possession of the Germans.

It is stated that a deserter named Deschamps quietly took the train for Strasbourg with the machine gun, minus only its stand, wrapped up in Brown paper. At the frontier he at first told the German Custom authorities that the package contained old iron, but then called a policeman and said, "I have got a machine gun; take me straight to the police station."

This was done and Deschamps was promptly placed in communication with the German military authorities From this point all trace of Deschamps has been lost, but it is said that he has been seen in Metz. and is now living there.

A further sensation has been created at Chalons by the arrest in a cafe-chantant of an actress who is believed to have been the instigator of Deschamp's treachery. The woman is said to be a regular agent of the German espionage organization, and to have lured many other young French soldiers to commit the most terrible of crimes towards their country.

Her Method of procedure in every case was similar to that employed in the case of Deschamps. She made the soldier's acqqaintance,and once she had him in her power began to arouse his jealousy by suggesting that he had not enough money for her.

Deschamps tried by hook or by crook to satisfy her demands, and finally,when he had failed to do so, she put it to him that he might easily obtain the necessary money by selling French military information to the German authorities.Once Deschamps had started on the down grade it was comparatively easy to persuade him to go so far as to desert and steal the machine gun.

Although the grfatest secrecy is maintained, it is known at least half a dozen other soldiers at Chalons are either under arrest or are under strict surveillance, all of them being known to have been friendly with the arrested cafe-chantant artiste.

IF SICK--WHY PAY

Unless Health First Returns.

Here is what should and can be done! Now you should not willingly pay for food that was ever taken—would you?

Then why pay for medicine until that medicine first proves to you its actual worth?

Positively by reserving what Dr. Shoop's Restorative can do for the sick, I say to all: Don't pay a cent beside this remedy. And I back my Restorative with a counsel and embed it day "in the bank. No pay" guarantee.

I positively pledge to the sick everywhere that "Dr. Shoop's Restorative is absolute by free if it fails". Let others do the same or deny their prescriptions by.

If you need more strength, more vitality, more vigor or more vim, use my Restorative a few days and note the immediate improvement.

If from the Stomach, Heart, or Kidneys are wrong, then test Dr. Shoop's Restorative. I do not claim the Stomach nor stimulate the Heart or Kidneys, for that is wrong. Years ago I cast away stimulation in medicine. The books before will tell you how I am succeeding.

These books also tell of a tiny tablet "the nerve". No larger than a dime though. They tell how these nerve until it fails, assembly given to the Heart its power, its tone, its nerve-force called vagus nerve.

These books will open up new and helpful ideas to those who are not well. They tell how the stomach and Kidneys each have the same nerve power nerves. They tell how the Restorative was especially made to reach and revitalize these weak or failing inside nerves. All of these and still why I am able to say, as in hope it is true:

This is why I say: Take no chance on a medicine whose maker dare not bank it just as I do by this remarkable offer".

So write me today for the order.

I have appointed honest and responsible druggists in nearly every community to know and endorse me to the sick.

But write me first for the order.

All druggists sell Dr. Shoop's Restorative, but all are not authorized to give the 30 day test.

So drop me a line, please—and then give description and dates. Tell me also which book you need.

A postal will do.

Besides, you are free to consult me on your case, your home physician. My advice and the book I select are yours—and without cost.

Perhaps a word or two from me will show no more serious ailment. I have helped thousands upon thousands by my private prescription and personal advice plan. My best effort is ready and will do the same for you. Address Dr. Shoop, Box 73, Racine, Wis.

MOVING THE "DUKIES"

HISTORIC ENGLISH MILITARY SCHOOL IS REBUILDING.

Some of Old Soldiers Studying at Duke of York's School at Chelsea Will Go to Dover—Nine-Tenths of the Boys Go Into the Army—It Is a Training School for Non-Coms as Sandhurst Is For Officers.

Before the boys of the Duke of York's Military School broke up for the holidays the other day at Chelsea the "Last Post" was solemnly played in the parade-ground, which has known generations of "Dukies" for over a hundred years. When the school re-opens early in September, it will be in the new buildings near Dover, on the rolling slopes of the Downs overlooking the Channel.

It is interesting to note that the Duke of York's cannot be considered a charity school in the ordinary sense. It is, rather, a monument to military heroes, and a form of pension to their sons. The school was founded in 1801 with funds provided from unclaimed money belonging to officers and men killed in the Peninsular War. The boys are all the sons of soldiers of the regular army, preference being given to the sons of men who have been killed or have died on foreign service.

In the "good old days" the boys at the Duke of York's School had rather a rough time. Winter and summer, they had to scrub themselves out in the open, and their breakfast usually consisted of rice and treacle.

In the way of punishments, they were, if anything, still worse off. The sergeants could use the cane whenever they felt so inclined, and small boys often received as many as three dozen strokes with the birch. For very special naughtiness, a boy could be confined in a "black hole," with a heavy leg secured to his ankle by a chain, while still another form of punishment was solitary confinement for two or three days in a cage, where the unfortunate had to occupy himself constantly in winding a clock—a performance requiring considerable strength.

Fortunately, such days are past, and the "Dukies" of to-day are as happy as any other healthy schoolboys.

One naturally expects to find children of soldiers following in their father's footsteps, and about 90 per cent. do so by joining the army when they reach the age limit of fourteen. Only the musicians among them are privileged to remain at the school another year.

That the "Dukies" are looked up to in the army by other Tommies, and are much valued by their officers, may readily be understood when their record is examined. About the middle of 1905 there were 1,564 of them in the army, and of these thirty-four held commissions, sixty-five were warrant-officers, 605 were non-coms., while 860, including musicians, were privates. And it must be remembered that a large majority of these privates were under eighteen years of age, and will receive their non-coms. stripes in a year or so.

As a matter of fact, the Duke of York's School is now looked upon by the authorities as a training-school for non-coms., as Woolwich and Sandhurst are training-schools for officers.

To the "Dukies," the highest possible honor is to attain to commissioned rank, and their "roll of fame" includes the names of two major-generals. It is also worthy mention that the father of Sir Arthur Sullivan, of Savoy opera fame, was a "Dukie."

The organisation of the Duke of York's School is exactly similar to that of a battalion of any regiment of the line. Indeed, the boys, in their red coats, look what they are—miniature soldiers. Those boys who have gained stripes receive pay according to rank—for a lance-corporal, 1d. per week; corporal, 2d.; color-corporal, 3d.; musicians, 3d. a day. Members of the band, drummers, tailors, and pioneers—the principal duty of the last-named is to darn socks—are paid from 1-2d. to 6d. a week, according to the quality of their work.

Each year those "non-coms. in the making" are reviewed by the highest officers of the regular army, and last year they had the honor to be visited by the King and Queen. This was the first official visit the "Dukies" had received from the reigning sovereign since the days of William IV. Among over 300 old boys who were present were eighteen who had attained commissioned rank, and one man present was at the school eighty years ago, and attended a similar inspection by William IV.

Every "Dukie" is justly proud of his colors. These were first conferred in 1825 by King George IV.; but 12 years ago, the then Duke and Duchess of Cornwall, on behalf of Queen Victoria, presented new colors, the old ones being worn to rags.

It Broke Him.

A clever young woman, as resourceful as she was pretty, married a young man of rather gay habits. Yet from the start all went well. The husband soon became the village model of domesticity.

"Jim," said a girl friend to the bride, "no longer spends his evenings at the club, does he?"

"Oh, no," said the other, laughing. "I soon broke Jim of that."

"How did you do it?" asked the girl.

"Every night he went out," the matron explained, "I put two armchairs side by side before the parlor radiator, and then I'd hold a match to a cigar till the room got a faint odor of smoke."

Governor's Son as Boy Scout.

Roderick Dudley, son of the Governor-General of Australia, has joined the Boy Scouts, and has, says The British Australasian," qualified in Sydney and received his uniform. One of the rules provides that the Scouts shall record at least one good action every day, and as "cleaning up the back yard" at their homes is the popular good deed, the lad's fellow members are somewhat curious to see what good action he will report.

FIGHTING FEVERS.

Why Vigorous Measures Are Necessary In Cases of Sunstroke.

A clinical thermometer is probably as matter of course a household convenience in most families as is a stepladder or a broom, and it is well that its use and the general significance of its disclosures should be understood by those in authority, but fussiness and constant resort to it and continual discussion of temperatures are to be deplored.

The old-fashioned way of placing the hand upon the child's body and announcing that it felt feverish or had a fever without any regard to mathematical accuracy as to degrees and fractions worked just as well as, perhaps better than, the new fashioned way carried to a nervous extreme. At the same time a rise of temperature always means something, and it most decidedly means the calling in of a physician if it does not go down of itself or yield to simple remedies.

When the temperature is taken by the mouth the thermometer should register about 98.7 degrees, although this may vary at different times during the day in perfectly well people. When it registers 99 degrees or 99.5 degrees the person is said to be feverish. Anything below 98 degrees is subnormal, and anything over 105 degrees is called hyperpyrexia, or high fever.

In many cases fevers are a sort of blessing in disguise. These are the fevers caused by the toxins of bacteria, of which typhoid is a type. The whole system is then engaged in a fight against the germs, and the battle is waged to more advantage apparently when "the blood is fighting hot." This is why, although the fever can be beaten down by the application of cold and the administration of drugs, it is often poor practice to suppress it in this way. Getting the fever down may be a momentary satisfaction, but it does nothing to help cure the underlying cause. It is as if a general should insist upon silencing his own guns.

At the same time the fever must be watched and kept in check, because this sort of fight is calling for an immense outlay from the system, and a raging fever not only burns up bacteria, but it feeds upon tissue and blood and all it can find, as any one can testify who has watched or lived through a convalescence from one.

What is true of the fever of a germ disease is false altogether in the fever of sunstroke. In this case the fever is the disease. It is not a regiment of infantry, but a conflagration, and it must be put out as quickly as possible and by all the means at one's disposal—cold baths, ice packs, ice water, anything that will beat it down.

The character of a fever is a great assistance to diagnosis in many cases, and this is why a physician should always be asked to sit in judgment on it.

Five Stages of the Sword.

It may be said that the evolution of the sword has passed through five distinct stages. First came the epoch of pure carnage, when men seemed to hew and hack each other for the mere pleasure it gave them; next the era of legend, when stupendous and impossible feats of arms were said to have been accomplished. Then followed the feudal time, a curious mixture of bloodshed and religion, when the piety of the crusaders was proved by their ability to slash the equally bloodthirsty Saracens. Succeeding this period sprang the noble season of skillful fence as the sword, no longer a weapon of pure attack, became a mixed arm of offence and defence combined. Finally we see its fall, being to-day a mere military accouterment, after attaining a glory that no one dreamed of during the days of its first rude and barbarous use.

Cause for Thanksgiving.

One fine summer night the whole village was disturbed in its slumbers by the deep tones of Nasreddin giving praise and thanks unto Allah. "What hath befallen thee, O Nasreddin," they inquired, "that at this hour of the night thou doth give praise and thanks until Almighty Allah?"

"As I lay half sleeping on my divan," replied the hodja, "I looked up and suddenly beheld a white thing flapping by this window. This must be a ghost or jinn or some other evil spirit sent by Sheitan to torment true believers, methought, so I seized my bow and drove an arrow through it. I forthwith arose, and, behold it was no jinn, but my own shirt which the arrow had transfixed. Wherefore do ye see me giving just praise."

Pat's Appreciation.

An artist had finished a landscape. On looking up he beheld an Irish navvy gazing at his canvas. "Well," said the artist familiarly, "do you suppose you could make a picture like that?" The Irishman mopped his forehead a moment. "Sure, a man c'n do anything if he's druv to it," he replied.—London Telegraph.

MAYBUILD LINE.

The Lindsay Warder says:— Mr. S. Anderson, who is now operating 40 miles of electric railway and represents large interests, is looking into the possibility of a street railway system from Fenelon Falls to Bobcaygeon passing through Sturgeon Point, and it has been suggested that a large hotel and pavilion may be erected on the beach at the east end during the coming winter. This would materially increase the earnings of the railway, and also make Sturgeon Point one of the most popular resorts in Canada.

RAIN SPOILS PAGEANT

FIRST DAY OF CHURCH SPECTACLE PROVES RIDICULOUS.

Bad Weather Mars Effect of Great Historic Object Lesson in London—Mud Bedraggled Saints and Monks Make Scene of Reverence Almost Comical—Retrospect of Church is Given by Huge Company.

After many months of hard work, of enduring enthusiasm, and of those little troubles which are inevitable in a great assembly of amateur actors, the English Church Pageant a few days ago gave its opening performance.

Alas! the elements were not propitious. The day was the worst we have had this summer—cold, rainy, utterly dismal. It was most unfortunate, because the pageant depended so much on the weather, not only for the comfort of actors and audience, but for its propriety.

The colors wanted the sun to bring out their richness and harmonies. All the colors on the field were dimmed and drabbled by the dank, dull atmosphere which clung about the actors. Instead of the joyousness and gaiety of those living pictures of medieval crowds on the green field, with its encompassing trees in heavy foliage, there were rather somber effects of poor people in unfamiliar garments, bedraggled in the heavy rain, and moving through the mist. This somber tone was deepened as the afternoon wore on and the light failed.

Then, too, the weather robbed the pageant of some of its revenue and dignity. It made some of the scenes fall from the sublime very near to the ridiculous, because the sympathy of one's imagination was shocked a little by the sight of saints and monks paddling about the soddened field, and getting into position at the wings of the open-air stage under the shelter of umbrellas. Roars of laughter greeted an episode in which British virgins were chased by savage Saxons with long spears, when, on the slippery, slushy ground, "Jill fell down, and Jack came tumbling after."

The great choir, gowned and hooded in mediæval garb, were bound to abandon the dignity of history, and to commit wilful anchronisms in the full sight of the audience, and they sang the old litanies and dirges under a very forest of umbrellas.

In many ways the pageant itself, in spite of the bad weather, which tried hard to spoil it, was full of interest and supremely successful. The huge stand, with accommodation for many thousands of people, was packed to the last seat, and the enthusiasm of the audience, among whom were hundreds of clergy, was not to be damped. And the pageant pictures in the field rewarded them. Undoubtedly there was an appeal to the imagination, to the eye, and to one's sense of reverence, in this pictorial drama representing by living figures in vivid succession the history of the old Church of England. The very field on which this drama was played is historic ground. The mead of Lambeth Palace was dug out many centuries ago, and on the field which it surrounds many great scenes, many most vital episodes in the history of our church and country, have been really enacted by men strong in spirit, whose flesh has long since gone to dust.

Thinking of that and of old things half forgotten, it seemed to one that the people on the pageant ground yesterday, vague as they were in the dank mist, were the ghosts of those who once played their parts and went their way to death and bequeathed their ideals and purposes to those who followed on this soil of England.

The prelude, with St. George in the silver-shining armor, and with the early British saints, Alban and Ninian, David and Patrick, stirred in one's memories of the dream-stories of the dawn of Christian faith in Britain—legends made true only by tradition and by a few old stories here and there.

The first scene of "The Publication in Britain of the Edict of Constantine, 313," is not recorded in history, but at least it was a reminder of the Roman occupation of Britain and of the little bodies of Christians, scattered outposts of the Faith, who lived between the rule of the Roman gods and of the Druid nature-worship, and to whom a liberal emperor granted freedom of religion as to all citizens of the empire. That was all a ghost-story yesterday, but one which took one's imagination back to the dim half-light of the early world.

And so as the scenes followed—the visit of St. Germain of Auxerre to the British Christians who had fallen into heresy, the founding of Iona by St. Columba, the coming of St. Augustine to the Saxons, who had driven the British to the West and destroyed the Christian outposts, the conversion of these Saxon people who were truly the first of the English, and the strong and real foundation of the Church in England—one had before one on the field a drama, full of color, in which one saw, as on an illuminated scroll of history, the foundation of the faith of our fathers.

One was shown the influence of monasticism in England before and after the Conquest, and the martyrdom of Becket reminded one of the long struggle between the Church and State—marked not once or twice only by brutal injustice and bloody tragedies, inevitable, perhaps, in a conflict between the spiritual and the temporal power, each seeking to break down the other's prerogatives, each claiming perhaps more than was due.

The episode of Magna Charta was to prove that the old Church was sometimes, if not always, on the side of liberty. The later episode of the suppression of the monasteries and the establishment of the Reformed Faith proved one thing to one man and one thing to another, according to his religious convictions and his knowledge of history.

Words of praise have ever prevailed in advertising "copy." That a producer should wax enthusiastic over his own wares is but human. But it's the praise of the consumer that counts—and it is to a discriminating and critical public that "Cosgrave's" refers you.

It is safe to say that no product, of any kind, enjoys a more enviable reputation than does this same Cosgrave Beer of Toronto in markets where it is offered.

Its self-evidenthonesty of purpose, purity, brilliancy, body, and every other attribute that goes to make a perfect beer are ever in evidence.

VOL. XXXII NO. 221 PETERBOROUGH, ONTARIO, WEDNESDAY SEPTEMBER 22. 1909 PRICE TWO CENTS

That Smith St. Bridge Contract is Troublesome

A short session of the Board of Works was held last night when the contract for the Smith street bridge was again brought before the members. It appears that the price of cement has advanced materially since Messrs. Conroy put in their tenders, and they are now looking to the city to bear two-thirds of the additional cost. Mr. W. H. Moore, representing the contractors, addressed the Board of Works, but the Board took no action in the matter as they had previously accepted Messrs. Conroy's tender as submitted.

Mr. Walter Scott was heard and asked that he be given a part of the south end of Stewart street, and he would run a lane through to Lake street and build houses on Park street instead of on Lake street with houses backing up in front of the church.

The matter was referred to the chairman and engineer, and the engineer is to prepare a sketch of the property.

W. H. Moore, on behalf of Messrs. E. and F. Conroy, said that since their tender was put in, and the tender of Begy & Co., was accepted the price they had got for cement was lost and the price had gone up 30c. per barrel and he would enter the contract by bearing one-third of the loss.

The chairman informed the board that he and the engineer in accordance with the authority given by the board, had appointed Wm. J. Martin, inspector of construction on the Smith street bridge.

Peterborough Should Own Her Own Exhibition Grounds

To the Editor of The Times.

Dear Sir,—I noticed a letter in Monday's Examiner from James Peat of Petrolia, that Peterborough should own her own Exhibition Grounds. I believe so too and have always been of the same opinion. I hope that the matter will be brought before the people again and voted upon next January to buy our present Exhibition Grounds. If the City owned the grounds, then there would be some encouragement to go ahead and put up suitable buildings and a first class Grand Stand. I feel sure that we could run our Exhibition for one week and the merchants and the public know what that would mean to our city. It would be the means of bringing a great many people to our beautiful city and they would certainly leave a good many dollars. We all know what the Exhibition at Toronto means to that city generally. Well our Exhibition in Peterborough would mean the same in proportion. This year's Peterborough Exhibition has been the best of all in every way and I feel sure that the people have got confidence now that the President and Directors are doing their best to make our Exhibition the very best by providing good honest races and good clean attractions and getting the farmers and others to make their Exhibits and giving in return good large prizes as an inducement to get the very best. I feel sure that every one who visited the Peterborough Industrial Exhibition this year went away pleased and satisfied and I feel sure that if the City will buy our present Exhibition Grounds, they will never have any cause to regret it. These Grounds are the finest in this part of this Country with one of the very best half mile tracks all made. The stables are on the grounds and the grounds are all fenced and with a few hundred dollars spent on the building and Grand Stand, can be greatly improved, and it only requires the united efforts of the Manufacturers, the Merchants, the Farmers, and the public generally, to help make the Peterborough Industrial Exhibition one of the best in the Dominion.

Thanking you, Mr. Editor, for your valuable space, I remain,

Respectfully yours,

J. J. TURNER, Sr.

New Waterworks Dam is Half Done Rapid Progress Has Been Made

Thousands of Tons of Concrete and Steel Already Used—A Hundred Men Employeed—Start Coffer Dam on the East Side Today

A rushing river, a score of men, a score of horses, heavy machinery, puffing engines, a mass of concrete, a network of lumber and steel, overhead carrying cables and a deep hole in the river bed is what one will seeanow if they visit the site of the new concrete waterworks dam which is being constructed by the Bishop Construction Co. of Montreal. A wonderful change has been wrought during the past three months to what was formerly a very quiet and inoffensive property. The old timer would not recognize it. Every day from the 23rd day of June, when the company started has seen the work advance materially and now the outsider or the uninitiated would stand and wonder how a dam could be brought out of that mass of timber.

A Times representative paid a visit to the new waterworks dam yesterday afternoon. He found a great change since last he was there a few weeks ago, at which time the last of the excavation for the wheel pits was being completed.

It is just three months today since the Bishop Construction Company began operations and the most difficult part of the west side construction is passed and today they start to put in the coffer dam on the east side of theriver.

In company with Mr. A. W. Ellson Fawkes, resident engineer, The Times representative went over the entire works. The concrete work from the river bed up to the top of the wheel pits and excavations is completed and the frame work or casings removed. The result is indeed pleasing. The work is as near perfect as anything of the kind ever accomplished in this vicinity or in the country. There are fourwheel pits andtwo sluice ways and there is not a flaw in any of the work. The concrete is now going higher and in a few days will be level with the top of thedam.

The framework to the outsider looks like a Chinese puzzle. It is so complicated that one might very easily get lost in it and have considerable difficulty in reaching the ground again. To attempt to give any description is out of the question but to give an idea of what has already been accomplished a few statistics will be of interest.

Dated on September 18th.

There are now from 90 to 100 men employed.

2000 yards of concrete have been used.

In other words 3500 of material have been used to form the west side of the dam todate.

90,000 tons of steel work has been placed.

First concrete was laid after the middle of August.

Almost one-half of the dam is completed.

The wholework will be done this year.

In constructing the new dam the Water Commissioners are providing for the future. For immediate use four wheel pits have been provided. Two sluice ways are in and can be used for either addition water wheels or for electrical development. Four pumps will be put in the new power house, and four more may be added in the future without further expenditure.

Provision is made so that the water can be shut off from the wheel pits entirely and dry land secured in a very short time. All the water of the river may be forced through the wheels or may run through the sluices as desired.

The work thus far is most creditable and Mr. Fawkes who has been in charge since the beggining deserves credit. To be in touch with men working on that big work and to see that everything is done correctly is a big task and only a man of experience and ability could undertake it. Mr. Fawkes has thus far proven himself capable.

Mr. Gustave Herlitschke, chief chemist for the Bishop Construction Company of Montreal, was a visitor at the works yesterday for the purpose of testing the cement. He is a man who has traveled all over the American continent and in many of the European countries in connection with concrete work. He said to The Times that he never saw finer piece of concrete and it is a credit to the company and to the engineer in charge.

Today the coffer dam on the east side of the river will be started. As was the casewith the first coffer dam, no time will be lost in constructing it. This means that it will be only a short time until the waters of the Otonabee will be flowing through the openings in Peterborough's new waterworks dam, and the day that the water is first turned through will be an important one for the company and the community.

While the engineer cannot state positively he does not anticipate any great difficulty in the construction of the east half of the dam. It will for the most part be straight work and it will move faster than the west side.

DR. CARMICHAEL RETURNS.

DO YOU USE PILLS?

If in Doubt About the Right Kind of Pills to Use Read the Following Letter Carefully:

"I am one of those persons whose system requires aid," writes Mr. Young Clednill from Picton, "but it is so easily affected by reason of the great sensitiveness of the bowels that ordinary drastic pills inflict great injury to the delicate coating, and excite such persistent activity as to be with difficulty checked.

"I wish in the highest terms to express the great value of Dr. Hamilton's Pills in cases like mine, and I am sure also for elderly people and the very weak, there is no pill like them.

"Speaking of my own experience with Dr. Hamilton's Pills, I can say they have proved the most stimulating Pills for the liver I have found. I have proved their tonic action upon digestion, and the same results have been secured by friends upon whom I have urged their use. The manufacturers are to be congratulated upon possessing so valuable a prescription and the public should know that so valuable a remedy has been placed at their command."

No other pill for constipation, for liver, kidney or stomach trouble, compares with Dr. Hamilton's Pills; they are mild and sure always to restore health. Refuse substitutes. Sold by all dealers, 25c per box, or The Catarrhozone Co., Kingston, Ont.

WANT FRENCH TAUGHT IN THE SEPARATE SCHOOLS

The French-Canadians in Ontario Organize for that Purpose

FORM FRENCH-CANADIAN CONGRESS

They Will Also Urge That Bi-lingual Normal Schools Be Established in this Province.

Alexandria, Sept. 21.—A successful French Canadian gathering was held on the Agricultural grounds yesterday afternoon, no hall in the town being large enough to accommodate those in attendance who numbered between six and seven hundred. Representatives were present from all sections of Glengarry, where the French have settled. The object of the meeting was to discuss the formation of a French-Canadian Congress to be held at Ottawa this fall. Vigorous addresses in French were delivered by Messrs. C. A. Seguin, secretary of the congress; C. S. Beaudreau and ex-Mayor Derochie of Ottawa, and several others. The object of the congress as explained is to secure French teaching in the Separate schools as well as the establishment of bi-lingual Normal schools for the purpose of qualifying teachers who will be able to impart instruction in French. The meeting was presided over by Mr. J. Huit. Upwards of eighty delegates to the congress were chosen. Similar organization meetings are being held at the various French-Canadian settlements in Ontario, extending from Nipissing to Glengarry and in Windsor and Essex.

Were Granted Authority

A deputation from Knox Presbyterian church waited upon the Presbytery of Peterborough yesterday morning and requested the authority to construct a new church adjoining the present edifice. The request was granted without any opposition and the congregation are now free to proceed with the work as rapidly as they desire. The motion was moved by Rev. Dr. Marsh and Rev. Mr. Stirling. Those on the deputation were Rev. Mr. Keith, Mr. Shorter and Mr. R. F. McWilliams.

Condition of Fruit Market in Peterboro' Grapes Take Lead

The fruit business is flourishing. Hundreds, even thousands of baskets are handled in the city daily. As was stated in The Times last week the peach crop is nearing the end. The big rush is about over and from now on the price of this favorite fruit will have atendency to advance. The early Crawfords were an immense crop and the prices for this immense crop and the prices were for thatreason now. The late Crawfords is now in, but there is not the supply and the demand from centers where prices are high, is great and is increasing. The late Crawford is a little better peach for some purposes, and is therefore indemand. The early Crawfordis equal for canning, and for the few days that they will last they will not advance in price materially, although the quality is on the decline.

The leading fruit just now are grapes and there is a heavy crop. The large varieties are in and are selling at a most reasonable price. A 10-poundbasket sells for 25c. These are splendid grapes for table use, and that is the principal use made of them as yet. The end of the week or early next week larger shipments will be received and the price will be down. Next week will be the proper and best time to secure grapes for winter use. The fruit will last for some time providing the weather is favorable. As the season advances the frosts become more severe and grapes will not stand much of a cold snap. The wise housewife will do well to put down her grapes next week.

John Maloney Passed Away Was Ill Since March Last

Peterborough lost one of its oldest and most highly esteemed citizens yesterday afternoon when Mr. John Maloney passed away at his home, 172 Brock street, after an illness of several months. For half a century the deceased had been a prominent figure in the city, he having come here from his home in Ireland in 1859 and he has lived here ever since. He was known by everyone and he saw during his career many changes in the city's commercial circles and in its population. With all the changes the late Mr. Maloney always remained the same good hearted kindly man who had a good word and cheerful smile for all. He was always surrounded by a host of friends and in his later days he had many admirers. His absence from the streets since his last illness last March has been felt by many and his demise will be generally regreted.

The late John Maloney was born in August, 1835, in Cashel, County Tipperary, Ireland. He was a son of the late Michael and Mrs. Maloney. In 1859 he came to Canada and settled in Peterborough. First he entered into lumber and mercantile business which he conducted for about 20 years. He occupied premises in the Old Henthorn Block on Hunter street and later in the Burnham Block on George street. In 1876 he disposed of his mercantile business and took over the old Caise House and subsequently the Grand Central Hotel which he conducted until his appointment to the office of the County and Surrogate courts nearly thirty years ago.

During his earlier life the deceased took a prominent part in all public matters and was a member of the town council the year the Prince of Wales, now King Edward VII., visited the city.

Mr. Maloney was married in 1868 to Maria Ambrose, daughter of the late John and Mrs. Ambrose of Lindsay, and she survives him. There were no children. Three sisters, Mrs. Wm. Tierney of New York; Mrs. Thos. Fagan, formerly of Otonabee, now of the city, and Mrs. J. B. Dunn of the city, and one brother, Daniel Maloneyof Montreal, survive him.

The deceased was a member of St. Peter's Cathedral, and of the Knights of Columbus.

The funeral will be held Thursday morning to St. Peter's Cathedral and interment will take place in St. Peter's cemetery.

Wedding Bells

LAUGHLIN—MORROW.

A very pretty wedding was solemnized yesterday morning at six o'clock at St. Peter's Cathedral when Miss Josephine Morrow, second daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Bernard Morrow, 469 Water street, was united in marriage to Mr. Edward Laughlin of Winnipeg, and Western representative of Greenshields Ltd. of Montreal. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Father McColl in the presence of only the immediate relatives of the contracting parties. The bride, who was given away by her father, entered the church to the strains of the wedding march played by Miss Doherty. She looked very pretty in a dress of white broadcloth. She wore a picture hat with plumes. The brideamaid, Miss Stella Morrow, sister of the bride, was beautifully attired in a dress of old rose, her hat was of the same shade. Dr. McCauly of Montreal, was best man.

After the ceremony the party drove to the home of the bride's father where hearty congratulations were bestowed on the young couple and a dainty wedding breakfast partaken of.

Mr. and Mrs. Laughlin left on the 8 o'clock C.P.R. train for Owen Sound where they will take the boat en route to Winnipeg and the Pacific Coast. After their honeymoon they will take up their residence in Winnipeg. Mrs. Laughlin traveled in a tailor suit of wine color shade with a hat to match.

Among the guests from out of town were Mr. and Mrs. Bernard Gough, Mrs. John O'Brien and Mrs. Walker, Lindsay, Mr. and Mrs. and A. J. Gough and Misses Kathleen and Lillian Gough, Toronto, and Mr. John Morrow of Montreal, Que.

PETERBOROUGH PRESBYTERY.

Important Session Held in St. Paul's Church Yesterday.

The Presbytery of Peterborough held a very interesting and very important meeting in St Paul's church yesterday. There was a large attendance of ministers and elders, and the morning session was very successful. Rev. Mr. Greene of Baltimore, occupied the chair.

Probably the most important matter before the Presbytery was the receiving of reports from the members who had visited the various mission fields of the Church. The reports were all most gratifying. The students who were in charge of the fields in the summer months were certified to their respective colleges. Rev. S. S. Burns of Lakefield convenor of the Home Mission Committee, made a report on the excellent work accomplished through the missions of the Presbytery during the past summer and he was authorized to make the appointments for the winter months.

There was considerable interest displayed in the evangelistic campaign which will be inaugurated by the church early in November. This is the first time the Presbyterian Church has undertaken such a scheme and good results are anticipated.

Splendid Address on Evangelism

Yesterday afternoon a conference was held on evangelism by the members of the Peterborough Presbytery, in view of the simultaneous campaign in all the churches in Presbytery during the month of November. Prof. Kilpatrick of Knox College, Toronto, was invited to be present and meet with the members and explain the lines and methods to follow in the work.

The professor first dealt with the meaning of evangelism, stating that the Word of God had fallen somewhat in disrepute because of unwise methods used. To him evangelism meant a christianity which implied a message or a declaration of the Word of God to men. In other words the simple truth of the whole matter was that God saves through Christ. The apostles and preachers of all ages had declared that truth. This was the central, the fundamental and the ultimate truth. In order to have a permanent work, same methods must be pursued. This would imply using all the best talent in song, in prayer, in personal dealing and in preaching.

In connection with this work, the use of these methods and the declaration of the one great central truth there would be the splendid inevitableness of the harvest following seed sowing. He declared that it was the business of the Church to undertake this evangelism just as the mother cares for her children.

A vote of thanks to Prof. Kilpatrick, moved by Rev. R. Pogue and Rev. Mr. Beatty, was unanimously carried.

HALLY COMET.

Can Be Seen Directly Above Us Between 2 and 3 a.m.

Rev. Dr. Marsh of Springville, who is one of the best authorities on astronomy in the country informed The Times yesterday that the exact position of the Halley comet had been determined. The visitation of this comet is about once in 76 years. It may now be seen through a powerful telescope between two and three o'clock a.m., directly above us.

Governor Johnson Dead Democrat's Severe Loss

Man Who Opposed Bryan and was Likely to be Presidential Candidate at Next Election Dies, Following Operation Last Week

(Special to The Times.

Rochester, Minn., Sept. 21.—Governor John A. Johnson, three times elected Governor of Minnesota, a candidate for the Democratic nomination for President in 1908, and looked upon by many throughout the country as the probable Democratic standard-bearer in 1912, died at St. Mary's Hospital at 3.25 o'clock this morning, following an operation last Wednesday.

Governor Johnson's life hung continually in the balance until the end came. So frequently did his condition change, alternately for better and then for worse, that his physicians, ever hopeful but none too optimistic, were able to say at no time since the operation was performed that the governor had more than an even chance for life.

At his bed-side when the end came were Mrs. Johnson, Miss Margaret Sullivan, her friend, Drs. W. J. and Charles Mayo, Dr. C. F. McNevin, Frank A. Day, the Governor's private secretary; Fred B. Lynch, Democratic National Committeeman, and the Misses Jannie and Schiller, the Governor's nurses.

DIED FROM EXHAUSTION.

Dr. W. J. Mayo stated that there were no traces of blood poisoning, and that the immediate cause of death was exhaustion and heart failure.

Dr. Charles H. Mayo, coming from the Governor's room at 1.30 o'clock yesterday afternoon, said that his wonderful resistance indicated an almost total abstinence from drugs in any form.

HAS NOT RESIGNED.

Ald. J. J. Turner Will Appear Before the Judge for Examination

Ald. J. J. Turner was communicated with by The Times yesterday, and he stated that he had not resigned his seat inthe council and that he had not intended doing so. He will appear before his Honor Judge Huyke, a week from today for examination for discovery. He feels confident that he can defend his action in the council and at a later date full particulars of the affair will be given to the public.

The Times received its information regarding the resignation from what was considered most reliable authority and the item was published in good faith. This paper has always supported Ald. Turner in the council, as his arguments and his course of action were generally progressive and based upon business principles, and there was no intention of doing otherwise at that time nor in future.

COLONIAL WEAVING CO.

The first machine will be moved from the Colonial Weaving Company's factory at the north end of Water street to the newfactory near the C.G.E. works this morning. The work was started yesterday and the first loom is ready for the carters, and from now on the moving will proceed as rapidly as possible, and as soon as the machinesarrive at the new factory they will be erected and started in motion so as to cause no more delay than necessary.

The company has received sixteen new machines and they are in the factory and will be erected at once. For some months past the orders have been coming in more rapidly than the factory could turn them out and the new peace cannot be occupied too soon. The future is very bright and the outlook for a still greater increase in business is bright.

DIRECTORS TO MEET.

To Square Up the Fair Business on Friday Night.

A meeting of the Peterborough Fair Association has been called for Friday night for the purpose of settling up all business in connection with the fair and to discuss plans for next year's show. The directors are now very enthusiastic and feel that they have something to work for. All who have accounts against the association are requested to have them in the secretary's hands at once.

Manufacturers Favor City Purchasing Land for Exhibition Purposes

It is a popular idea throughout the city now for the city to purchase permanent grounds and erect suitable and modern buildings for agricultural fair purposes. A great many citizens are in favor of the idea and they are talking about it. The business men see a good proposition in it for the city and they will support the council in the undertaking.

Yesterday a Times representative in conversation with two of the leading manufacturers learned that they would heartily support the purchase of the fair grounds and they expressed their opinion on the matter. They thought that the present grounds were not only too small, but that they were too valuable for that purpose. They favored a site on the river bank, either north or south of thecity, preferably south. In the neighborhood of of Crawford's Grove there is lots of good level property which could be secured very reasonably, and which would be ideal for the purpose.

YOUNG LADIES' COLLEGE.

Under the Management of Messrs. Spotten & McKone to Be Opened.

Since Messrs. Spotton and McKone of the Peterborough Business College, took over the McGibbon Business College, which was recently opened, it has been learned that they intend to open a young ladies college in the near future. The quarters recently vacated by the Peterborough Club, it is understood, have been secured and will be fitted up immediately.

The ladies'college will be under the management of Messrs. Spotten & McKone, and will be incharge of a most capable lady principal who is a university graduate. The principal has already been secured, and she is a woman eminently fitted for the position.

The subjects taught will be the same as those taight in all ladies' colleges, and will include German, English and French languages, penmanship, art, mathmetics and physical culture.

Messrs. Spotten and McKone are very energetic young business men, and they are deserving of great credit. The best wishes of all will be extended to them in their newundertaking and thereis every reason to believe that they will receive the hearty supuort of the citizens of the city and district.

Young Men's Guild

A meeting of the Young Men's Guild of St. Andrew's Presbyterian church was held last night when the following officers were elected for the ensuing year.

Vice-President—E. Curry.
Rec.-Sec.—T. Donaldson.

Eminent Toronto Physicians

FAILED TO CURE RHEUMATISM.

Miss Flora Chapman Vividly Describes Her Suffering and Ultimate Cure With "Nerviline."

"After being an enthusiastic user of Nerviline for years, I feel it my duty to tell you personally what your wonderful preparation has done for me.

"I suffered torture from rheumatism and heart trouble, tried scores of so called remedies, consulted for weeks and months, with Toronto's most eminent physicians, but derived only slight benefit.

"A friend insisted on my using Nerviline, and to my surprise a vigorous rubbing of this powerful liniment eased the pains and reduced the stiffness in my joints. I continued to use Nerviline and was permanently cured. I am now perfectly well, and for three years have had no rheumatism at all. I know many families where no other medicine but Nerviline is kept—it is so useful in minor ailments like earache, toothache, neuralgia, coughs, colds, lumbago and sciatica. I call Nerviline my "Life Guard," and urge all to try its merit."

GIVE US GOSPEL FROM THE PULPIT.

Dogma, theology, science and religion—where have we heard those words before.

Unfortunately, they are coupled together more than they should be, to our way of thinking.

They are not the best of friends as we throw them against each other, and might better be left apart for a while. Some time or other they will clasp hands in, two, three, four order, and will make a peaceable and powerful combination.

But for the present we wish we might hear less of them in our sermons and that in their place we could listen to more of the old-fashioned and common-sense appeals to the character generally.

We are glad to read the opinion of Prof. Gerald B. Smith as he gave it at the University of Chicago recently.

He said that from the theological writing of the present day we seem to be entering upon an era of co-operation rather than warfare between theology and science.

We may take a hard-headed view of it. It may be that our wish for home remedies from the pulpit will curl the lips of many of our divines.

But we believe we shall get an answering chord from many hearts when we say we want less technical argument thrust down our throats in the guise of religion.

Further, we take our stand on this inexpugnable proposition: It is the business of scientists and dogmatic theologians to deal in cold abstract formulae. It is the business of the preacher to SAVE SOULS.

To take a restricted but nevertheless potentially important class of persons as an example, the colleges and universities of the country are sending out each year thousands of young men to take part in the world's work. These young men are, in general, religiously inclined.

Rather they are indifferent, choosing to leave that matter for thought later on. At the same time they are intelligent and trained to think; sympathetic and quick to respond.

What better subjects could the man of God ask? Where could he find a better point of application for a real message?

And yet, what do we hear in our baccalaureate sermons? One, two, three, four—dogma, theology, science and religion, as if the most important thing in the world for a young man to think about were the mathematical correlation of character and calculus.

We do not think this is the important, the essential business of the preacher.

Again, we insist, it is the preacher's function to save souls. Give men the gospel.

AERIAL DAMAGE SUITS.

A score of years ago when roller skating was the popular fad it became necessary to devise new laws to meet the conditions produced. Later the wheelmen caused more violent changes in the laws: then automobiles came, and new laws were prepared to meet the conditions they created. Now the aeronauts are becoming so numerous that new laws will have to be made to define their rights and responsibilities. They have got into court on patent rights and infringements and then there is a beaten track, but there are neither laws nor precedents to govern collisions and damage suits which will be the next stage.

When a balloon or an aeroplane descends either intentionally or accidentally it is liable to do some injury, and out of this damage suits must grow. These may be capable of great variety. For instance, there was an unchartered cow [illegible] and [illegible] go Dorcmus in the Hackensack, N. J. District Court last week. A balloon descended on a boat and knocked a hole in the cabin. The owner of the boat seized the balloon to pay for the damage. The balloon was replevined. The balloon company sued for $500 damages. The boat owner brought a similar suit, and there is no statute covering the case for either side. If the parties cannot reach a compromise the case will probably go to the equity court, as that is the only place that can operate without law.

It is believed that the State Legislature at the coming session will be called upon to make a law governing damage suits.

Hateful Robber

Early Rearing Often Cause

By JOHN F. GETTING Editor.

WHILE the crime of robbery is one, that by reason of the suddenness and brutality which usually accompanies the attack, is justly regarded and condemned as a heinous crime against society, it is, at least in large cities, a natural result of conditions, both permitted and favored by the condemning public. The "robber" of our metropolitan cities is usually one who becomes such a victim of circumstances, and does not like the more refined criminals select the course of crime as one conducive to prosperity. He is largely the child of circumstances, and the product of selfish policies inaugurated by those who most bitterly condemn him. He is usually one of moderate intelligence and meager education, who, by reason of this crude condition, is barred from favored opportunities. His early life may have been surrounded by an atmosphere of poverty, ignorance and dissipation; his religious education, that of faith and form instead of moral and intellectual development; his ideals of manhood, the supremacy of brute force, and his aims and hopes circumscribed by the allurements of the ever present lower-grade saloon and other debasing influences. With such influences operating on his youthful mind he approaches manhood an easy victim to the corrupting agencies of city life. The results of his labor are absorbed by the saloon, the race track, or other degenerating and deceptive haunts, which, with open doors, offer entertainment consistent with his crude ideas of social life. Yet, he has not become a criminal. He is willing to toil for meager wages and face the world with reasonable honesty, spending only that which he earns; but recklessly spending it all; until, by reason of circumstances beyond his control, employment ceases and his humble prosperity is at an end. This may be, as is most likely, in the chilly season of winter when opportunity closes its doors against the unfortunate. With companions, similarly situated, tales of woe are interchanged, and ways and means discussed, and discussed in the light of their dark environments. Hunger and cold, with a long season of inactivity, faces them; while prosperity is present with others, less deserving. The logic of necessity prevails, and violence is resorted to as a temporary means of livelihood. Here starts the "robber" on a career of crime, soon to be arrested, convicted and placed beyond the indulgence of society. In many instances, a less indulgent view may be taken of the "robber:" but if society, in its social, religious and political phases, acted with more justice and humanity to the unfortunate classes, and created conditions more favorable to the moral, intellectual and industrial education of the youth, the brutal crimes would be less prevalent.

Why Should Man Hold Supreme Power?

By E. C. DeBEER

Ethically there is no such thing as the sex question. Why manufacture one? Are not man and woman alike yet different; each equal, each distinct, absolutely necessary to each other? Why any antagonism, with increasing distrust, disdain, even disgust?

One may understand antagonism from the household tyrant, the pompous bully, the master of the old school who will woo a maiden on his knees, promising all things, and promptly relegate her to a position of domestic servility once she has surrendered herself. But this antagonism is not understandable and cannot really exist among a great majority of thinking good men, who regard woman as man's helpmate and companion, the friend in all need.

As is night to day, heat to cold, so is man to woman, different, the same, absolutely necessary to each other, pursuing apart but together the laws of nature.

Alone man stands for selfishness, arrogance, brutality; hand in hand, softened, inspired by the subtler influence of woman, he, she, become an entity, the earthly manifestation of the Great Cause.

A vote! A puny thing, but the recognised symbol of emancipation from slavery, from tyranny. Good men have fought for it. On what just grounds refuse it to a woman? Man in his fulsome hypocrisy depicts justice as a goddess.

Intelligence! Are then all male voters intelligent? Why demand a higher standard from women? They will vote for the wrong sort of men. Are not candidates always the wrong sort of men to some voters?

No, those who want to vote will do so instinctively for men of mind and insight into parochial school, hospital, charitable matters, matters affecting the immediate welfare of the family, and about which women intuitively know more than men, however reluctant these be to admit it.

In the Wilds of Western Canada

By AGNES C. LAUT

It was down the Saskatchewan we had decided to go, partly because all the romance of the most romantic era in the west clings to its banks, partly because its snaky, winding trail, half the width of a continent, marks the last trek to the last frontier of the last west. It was up and down this broad stream—Kis sis katchewan Sepee, the Indians called it, "swift, angrily flowing"—with its countless unmapped islands, that the war canoes of the Cree long ago flitted like birds of prey to plunder the Blackfeet.

It was up the Saskatchewan the French explorers came wandering mazed in search of the western sea. Along these high, steep banks, where you almost break your neck trying to get dunnage up to a level camping place, the voyagers of the old fur companies toiled, "ti-i-ing, ti-i-ing" in monotonous sing-song day and night, tracking the clumsy York boats up stream all the way from tidewater to within sight of the Rocky mountains.

If you want to camp near the new settlers each night and see how they are making good away from the immigration agent; if you want to wander over the sights of the old historic places, and ramble to the Indian reserves where you can meet natives still uncontaminated by the whites—better make your time limit six weeks. You could profitably spend twelve on the trip.

Get Well First

Don't risk even a penny—until health first returns.

And I mean just exactly that.
I am the one physician who says to the sick—I will, out of my own pocket, pay for your medicine if it fails to bring you help!"
And for 30 years Dr. Shoop's medicines have been used and recommended in every city and hamlet in America. They are positively endorsed in every community—and everywhere.
Then why pay the cash, and at your risk, for other unwarranted and uncertain medicines?
Thousands upon thousands have in the past successfully used Dr. Shoop's Restorative.
When the Stomach nerves, or the Heart or Kidney nerves fail, these sick ones know how quickly Dr. Shoop's Restorative will bring them back to health again. But best of all, they positively take no money risk whatever. They know that when health fails to return, Dr. Shoop will himself gladly pay the drug get for that test. And his that test a full 30 day treatment is freely granted. But write me first for an order
This will save delay, and disappointment.
All druggists sell Dr. Shoop's Restorative and Dr. Shoop's Rheumatic Remedy, but all are not authorized to give the 30 day test. So drop me a line please—for I have appointed an honest and responsible druggist in almost every community, everywhere, to issue my "no help, no pay." medicines to the sick. Tell me also which book you need. The books below will surely open up new and helpful ideas to those who are not well. Besides you are perfectly free to consult me just as you would your home physician. My advice and the book below are yours—and without cost.
Perhaps a word or two from me will clear up some serious ailment. I have helped thousands upon thousands by my personal advice and prescription for sick folks. My best effort is surely worth your simple request. So write now, while you have it fresh in mind, for tomorrow never comes. Dr. Shoop, Box 18, Racine, Wis.

A SUNGLASS TRICK.

How to Sever a Thread Inclosed in a Glass Bottle.

This is a trick which can only be performed when the sun shines, but it is a good one. Procure a clear glass bottle and stick a pin in the lower end of the cork. Attach a thread to the pin and tie a small weight to the end of the thread so it will hang inside the bottle when the cork is in place. Inform your audience that you will sever the thread and cause the weight to drop without removing the cork.

All that is required to perform the feat is to hold a magnifying glass so as to direct the sun's rays on the thread. The thread will quickly burn and the weight fall.—Popular Mechanics.

WITH CORK AND BOTTLE.

An Experiment That Illustrates the Nature of Compressed Air.

Something of the nature of compressed air may be learned from the following experiment:

Take a small cork and ask some one to blow it into a fairly large sized bottle that has a neck.

This seems to be an easy matter.

The one who tries it will probably blow as hard as possible upon the little cork, but instead of going into the bottle, as expected, it will simply fall down.

The harder the puffs or blows the more obstinate the cork will appear to be, and even if the effort of blowing gently be tried it will be of no use; the cork will not go into the bottle, much to the amusement of those who are watching.

The reason why the cork will not go in is this:

The bottle being already filled with air, when the cork is blown more air will be forced into the bottle, and consequently the air inside will be greatly compressed and will simply force the cork back.

The following is a simple way of overcoming the difficulty:

Instead of trying to force the cork through the compressed air in the bottle, just the contrary should be tried—that is, some of the air should be sucked out of the bottle. This being done the bottle will become partly emptied, and when the outside air rushes in to fill up the empty space it will carry the cork with it to the bottom of the bottle.—Chicago News.

The Elephant and the Puppy.

A British officer who was enjoying some sport in India had with him a tiny fox terrier puppy which had been given to him. The little animal, though only just big enough to walk, was full of spirits and always getting into mischief. The officer was one day in the jungle hunting when he heard an angry trumpeting at a little distance, followed by a squeaky sort of noise which he could not at first understand. He made his way cautiously to the spot from which the sound proceeded and there saw a strange sight. The puppy, which had strayed from the Englishman's camp, was dancing in a little open space barking furiously at a huge wild elephant a few feet away. The elephant was enraged, but did not seem to understand the little creature. After many loud trumpetings the great animal stood uncertainly for a few moments and then turned and made off hurriedly.

SIR CHARLES RIVERS WILSON.

Something About the Man Who Supplanted Sir Henry Tyler.

There have been, at least, seven really dramatic moments in the history of Anglo-Canadian finance (says the Canadian Gazette, of London, England). One of them gave Canada, for weal or woe, her state-owned railway, the Intercolonial. Another dramatic moment set the Canadian Pacific Railway Co. upon the road of financial rectitude, as interpreted by British standards, and of prosperity. And among the other dramatic moments must be placed that which drove Sir Henry Tyler from the presidency of the Grand Trunk Railway Co. to make way for Sir Charles Rivers Wilson. That was in 1880; and Grand Trunk shareholders and the Canadian traveling and trading public know how to appreciate the benefits accruing to them in the succeeding years. And it is under the stimulus of these [illegible] successes that the Grand Trunk is moving forward to the conquest of [illegible] fields through the instrumentality of its Grand Trunk Pacific enterprise. Born in London in 1831, Sir Charles Rivers Wilson was educated at Eton and Balliol and began business life as a clerk in the Treasury Department of the British Civil Service. For five years he was private secretary to the Earl of Beaconsfield, and subsequently became Comptroller-General of the Office for the Reduction of the National Debt and Finance Minister of Egypt. His wife, whom he married in 1886, was the Hon. Beatrice Violet Mary Mostyn, sister of the seventh Baron Vaux, of Harrowden. In addition to his presidency of the Grand Trunk, Sir Charles is a director of the Alliance Assurance Co., Limited; chairman of the British Electric Traction Co., Limited; director of the Grand Trunk Pacific Railway Co., and chairman of the International Syndicate, Limited.

A Newspaperman's Secret.

The late William Jarvis was one of the oldest and best known survivors in Montreal of the journalism of a generation ago. He had in his time been connected in one way or another with a number of the men and events which have made the history of Montreal and Eastern Canada. His remarkable memory preserved all these experiences, and he was thus able to make very interesting a "Thirty Years Ago" column on one of the Montreal dailies. In this connection it may be said that he had been a bosom friend of the late Fred Perry, who came into prominence at the time of the burning of the Parliament Buildings in Montreal. And, though he never countenanced the report, it is said that William Jarvis was one of the last of those who knew the real story of the famous destruction of these buildings in the forties.

A Canadian Cantatrice.

Mrs. Cecil Edwardes, whose appearances in grand opera at Covent Garden this season have brought her much praise, is sister-in-law to Lord Kensington. She is a British Columbian; studied under Jean de Reszke; and made her first public appearance as a singer in oratorio.

IN STUDENT DAYS.

Tale of Eric Armour and the Bottle of Poison.

They tell a good story about the days when Eric Armour, law partner of Edmund Bristol, M.P., for Centre Toronto, was in his senior year at Varsity. The old residence was still in full swing and "Count" Armour and another senior shared a room in what is now the Undergraduate Club.

Some kindly person, one day in the fall term, thinking to lighten the arduous monotony of Armour's days at the university, made him a present of a sturdy little earthenware jug of Scotch whiskey of a famous brew. Now the popularity of Count Armour, which is a bye-word to this day, was in its full bloom at that time and his room was headquarters for those of the students who turned to find relaxation from their books. Scotch whiskey was no thing to leave exposed upon one's dresser among such company. So the room-mates hastened to a drug store, secured a plain business-like bottle, had it liberally swathed in poison labels and garnished with death's heads. Into this they poured the precious liquid and hid it away upon a high shelf, to await a fitting occasion for so gorgeous a libation.

One bitter night in late December such an occasion came. Varsity won a hockey match and as the chilled rooters made their way back to residence Armour and his room-mate determined to celebrate with a toddy. So every room in Second House that night yielded up its two men and two glasses who sat about in awed silence while, like priests at sacrament, Count and his partner labored with the lemons, nutmeg and boiling water.

Presently the great moment came when Count Armour strode majestically to the cupboard and took down the bottle. It felt strangely light. With a sinking heart he carried it under the gas jet. Whiskey there was not but under the most fearsome of the skulls Armour read in a fine script which he knew for that of "Rex" King, now of Detroit:

"Goodbye, Count; I have committed suicide."

The Experience Is Great.

The men who are going to make the most money out of this country are not the men who are doing the pioneer work. I know many good, honest, hard working fellows, who are working themselves ragged and hungry because they are not in right. At the outset all were jubilant. Money jingled in their pockets; equipments were complete; wives and families at home were content to see them go away for a while to the Land of Promise; stories of men as green as they in the bush experience having made their pile were continually on their minds. The moment of their disenchantment is at hand.

It takes a great deal of money to ascertain what most mining propositions are worth. Companies or syndicates must be formed to develop and mine, and usually after the formation of these Mr. Prospector, after receiving his one-fifth share of the five or ten thousand dollars that his backer received from the syndicate, either proceeds to blow in the result of his season's work or goes back and locates somewhere else. I don't want to discourage anyone from coming in, nor do I feel like being too optimistic over their coming. Quarts mining is essentially a rich man's game. Prospecting is everybody's. The experience is great.—Gowganda Tribune.

The Lindsay Warder says:— Mr. S. Anderson, who is now operating 40 miles of electric railway and represents large interests, is looking into the possibility of a street railway system from Fenelon Falls to Bobcaygeon passing through Sturgeon Point, and it has been suggested that a large hotel and pavilion may be erected on the beach at the east end during the coming winter. This would materially increase the earnings of the railway, and also make Sturgeon Point one of the most popular resorts in Canada.

Tickling or dry coughs will quickly loosen when using Dr. Shoop's Cough Remedy. And it is so thoroughly harmless, that Dr. Shoop tells mothers to use nothing else, even for very young babies. NEW ZEALANDER ON ENGLAND.

Sir Robert Stout Delivers a Sharp Criticism on Old Land.

Sir Robert Stout, ex-Premier and present chief justice of New Zealand, has very definite ideas of the consequences of England's failure as a world-power. Sir Roberts' knows the Antipodes as a man who has spent nearly all his life there, going out from the Shetland Islands at the age of 14, and returning to Great Britain for the first time now at the age of 65. He also knows New Zealand as one who has been chiefly concerned in building up the Island Dominion.

In an interview with the navy builder of 1885, Wm. T. Stead, he declares that England suffers chiefly from slackness and illogical views. The non-Conformists, for example, wish to disestablish the church, and at the same time establish religion in the parish school.

Laborers are very slack in their methods, and three men are needed to do the work of one. The young Englishmen are not equal to the New Zealanders and the farms are not well cultivated. There is lack of enterprise, care and energy on the part of the manufacturer. As a result Americans captured the best part of the New Zealand trade. The habit of fadding, on which $800,000,000 a year are spent in England, is another source of national weakness noted by Sir Robert.

"We hope there will be no war," said the New Zealander, "and if war should come we hope Britain will be victor. But do not make any mistake about it. If by any disaster any foreign power were to dictate a peace in London which transferred New Zealand to the conqueror, the next day we should hoist the Stars and Stripes, the only other flag save that of the Union Jack under which New Zealanders would live."

Sir Robert should pay a visit to Canada.

Boom on Rand.

After a long interval it is once more quite "boom time" in Johannesburg. It is generally agreed that prospects have never been so good since 1895. All classes of business are already feeling the effects of better times. Activity on the Stock Exchange is enormous, for the public have at last fairly "gone into it."

One feature of the moment is the immense amount of pegging of claims going on in the surrounding district. Thousands of claims allowed to lapse in times of depression have been taken up again, and many flotations are probable, but there are fears in some quarters that this may be overdone and produce a reaction.

The general view, however, is that the upward tendency will last. The reduced working costs on mines have made payable the working of millions of tons of reef which hitherto have not been a profitable proposition, and at the same time have immensely increased the profits of the more valuable mines.

It is regarded as a good sign that so far the improvement has not produced the mania of gambling which marked the 1895 "boom." In the commercial part of the town traders report a marked increase in trade, especially in luxuries, such as pianos, motor-cars, carriages and horses, which first felt the bad times.

There are strong hopes that the wave of prosperity will result in the opening up of new mines and that it will thus absorb the unemployed.

Two Female Quixotes.

Two women in Natal are at present engaged in fighting the whole force of the British Government. The battle waged by the Misses Colenso—two sisters—is carried on without visible signs of outward warfare, and yet it is a struggle as daring, as strenuous, and as adventurous as any real engagement. Embarked in a quixotic attempt to rescue the native chief, Dinizulu, from the coils of British diplomacy, they have spent almost every cent they had in the world. For the last five years the elder sister, Harriet, has been the guide, philosopher and friend of the native chief, and remained near him while he waited in prison until her efforts got him out, only to be tried and re-convicted on another count. The devotion of the Colenso sisters to the cause of the black chief has won the respect of even their inveterate enemies, the English foreign wire-pullers, who wish to turn the land of Dinizulu over to white explorers.

No white people in the whole of South Africa have greater knowledge and experience of the Natal natives than the two sisters. They are the daughters of the famous Bishop Colenso, first and last Bishop of Natal, who devoted his life to studying the needs and ministering to the spiritual wants of the black men.

Lady Bancroft's Lovebird.

My wife had lost a little green parrot, for the return of which I offered a reward of ten shillings, giving our address, but no name. One of the newspapers, however, had a paragraph headed, "Lady Bancroft's Lost Lovebird." It was my privilege, with others, to receive at this period our present King and Queen—then Prince and Princess of Wales—at the Botanical Gardens, when His Royal Highness produced a newspaper cutting and said, "I think I have Lady Bancroft's lost bird. One of the breed was flying about for some days in the garden at Marlborough House, and a gardener succeeded in catching it this morning. Pray go and see if it is yours, as I hope it may be; but, mind, I shall claim the reward." I replied, "Certainly, sir; it is small, but appropriate, being—half a sovereign."—From "The Bancrofts: Recollections of Sixty Years."

His Four Seasons.

An amusing story is told by Sir W. H. Holland of the answer given by a London waif to a Salvation Army captain. The zealous officer had asked the boy what work he did to provide him with food, etc., and the reply was: "I pick strawberries in the summer, I pick hops in the autumn, I peak pockets in the winter, and exhaust for the rest of the year."

Drive Rheumatism out of the blood with Dr. Shoop's Rheumatic Remedy and see how quickly pain will depart. Rub-ons never did reach the real disease. Rheumatism isn't in the skin. It's deep down—it's constitutional. Getting rid of the pain, is after all what counts. That is why Dr. Shoop's Rheumatic Remedy goes by word of mouth from one to another. And herein lies the popularity of this remedy. It is winning defenders everywhere. Tablets or Liquid. Sold by all dealers.

PERSONAL EXPERIENCE.

An Unlettered Woman's Ultimatum on Family Government.

There are a good many women who have all of the advantages of modern civilized life, but who have yet to arrive at a conclusion as sane and modern as that of a Kentucky woman who is the mother of fourteen children and who is herself unschooled. She has gathered all her "ideas" from experience and from "just watchin' and studyin' about things."

This is her ultimatum on family government:

"Folks whuppa children too much. Hits ol' folks' meanness what causes whuppin' more than children's desarvin' hit. The ol' folks 'll hev some trouble of their own, an' they'll turn and whupp a child, an' hit innercent."

And if the truth were known it is old folks' meanness over half the time instead of the children's "desarvin'" that is the cause of the "whuppin'."

There are many women who would be greatly incensed if they were told that they were no better than the big boy coward who pitches into the little fellow just because he can.

It's very well known what people think of that sort of a coward. He is about the most despicable type on the playground, and even his fellow playmates recognize it and despise him for it.

Of course the virtuous parent will tell you that he is disciplining his child when he slaps or pinches him, and there may be conditions under which that is true. But how about the little boy who wanted to linger in front of the shoe store window the other day and whose mother suddenly reached forth a vicious hand and pinched the baby's arm till he cried with pain?

That woman felt good and cross, and she took it out on the youngster, and she was a coward for doing it.

So was the man whose little girl of six started to scamper the other way when the rest of the family had started down the street, when he grabbed her with a jerk and set her down on the stone pavement so hard that her spinal column must have rattled. That measly little man, bristling with silly authority, always had been a coward no doubt, and he'd been bullied so much when he was a youngster that he was just having fun taking it out on his defenseless little children. O discipline, what crimes have been committed in thy name! What a convenient cloak for temper discipline can be made!

The unschooled woman of Kentucky is right. "The folks have some trouble of their own." And sometimes the trouble of the "folks" is just "temper" because they are hungry.

KITCHEN HELPS.

One housekeeper advises the use of half a lemon for removing match marks from paint.

If your paint has been marred by careless scratching of matches try rubbing it with the finest sandpaper.

The housekeeper who goes to market rather than order by telephone will find she gets better things for less money.

Vegetables, like beets and green corn, that contain sugar do not keep well and should be eaten as soon as possible after they are picked.

If you are doubtful about your cream keeping sweet, heat it to almost boiling, put in tightly corked glass bottles and set on the ice to cool. In this way it will not sour nearly so soon.

Iron holders made from a piece of asbestus the desired size and covered with drilling or heavy unbleached muslin are light and keep out heat. There should be a ring or loop sewed to one corner to hang the holder.

Red meats are less liable to contamination than fish or chicken. The latter should not be eaten if there is the least suspicion of odor about it. Beef slightly tainted, though disagreeable, will not produce ptomaine poisoning.

The dishwasher who would be through with her work quickly invests in a soap shaker and a chain for cleaning pots and pans. She also has on hand over the sink a box of borax and a bottle of ammonia for cutting grease.

If moths have attacked a carpet try putting gasoline round the edges, soaking the nap of the carpet; also work powdered borax into the carpet wherever there is a sign of moths or under heavy pieces of furniture which cannot easily be moved in the weekly sweeping.

Woman as School Head.

Froken Ida Falbe-Hansen has been general supervisor of all the public schools in Denmark since 1903. She is ordinarily employed as a teacher in the Normal college in Copenhagen and bears the reputation of being one of the foremost educators in Europe. She has shown remarkable gifts as an executive. She is the only woman who ever has held her present post. A couple of weeks ago she celebrated her sixtieth birthday, and young and old in Copenhagen joined in doing her honor. Her steady influence has been for school reform. She believes in the public school system of America and has borrowed freely from it in her work for the public schools of her country. Froken Hansen also enjoys a wide reputation as a translator.

THE COUNTESS DE CHAMBRUN

For nearly ten years past the French government has kept a member of the De Chambrun family at its Washington embassy. With the advent of the new year Captain de Chambrun of the artillery corps of France arrived at his post as military attache, and his brother, Viscount Charles de Chambrun, who had served for years as first secretary of the embassy, sailed away to his native land.

Captain de Chambrun's appointment to the American capital was a matter for rejoicing to many people. He is well known on this side of the Atlantic, for he married the younger sister of Representative Nicholas Longworth of Cincinnati, and he had spent much time in the Capital City, having been sent here by his government at the time of the dedication of the Rochambeau statue in Lafayette square. The

THE COUNTESS DE CHAMBRUN.

Countess de Chambrun came to this country at the time of her brother's marriage to Miss Alice Roosevelt, which took place at the White House three years ago last February. Later she went to her mother's home in Cincinnati, where she visited with the members of her family.

The Countess de Chambrun is of a retiring disposition and objects to anything that approaches publicity, save her position as wife of the military attache of the French embassy and the social prominence of her relatives bring her perforce before the public eye frequently. The accompanying photograph is the only one extant, all other plates by her wish having been destroyed by the photographers.

Count and Countess de Chambrun have two children. They live in a beautiful home on Sixteenth street, not far from the embassy. The count is a great-grandson of the Marquis de Lafayette, who rendered distinguished service to the cause of the colonies. The Countess de Chambrun has one sister, Mrs. A. B. Wallingford of Cincinnati.

Wedding Trips Going Out of Style.

The wedding trip is surely going out of style. Small wonder, either, when one considers how tired the average bride finds herself after the ceremony, for there have been the trousseau, the wedding arrangements, the notes of gratitude for good wishes expressed and, withal, the nervous strain of taking the most important step in her career.

A woman who has had occasion to see many newly married couples on their travels says:

"The bridal trip is more or less of a fraud in many respects. Brides and bridegrooms are not always the contentedly happy persons they are supposed to be, and tears on a honeymoon are not by any means unknown. The wedding day is an awful strain and often upsets tempers for days.

"The young persons arrive at the hotel just in time for dinner after a journey of hours. The bride is pale and tired, the bridegroom harassed and worried to see her so and making a great fuss generally. Then follow a hurried unpacking and frantic preparations for dinner. The maid helps the bride to dress, and the groom in the meantime discovers his evening coat has been left behind or some kind and practical joke loving friend has exchanged suit cases with him.

"The first meal together—a joyous affair at which the bride is too tired and excited to eat and the groom wonders whether, after all, he has made a mistake!"

So nowadays it has come to be the custom to go direct from the church to a country house, either one's own or a friend's, and to pass the honeymoon in seclusion impossible to tourists, or, better yet, to steal away to the new home and get started right away in the joys of housekeeping.

Mr. and Mrs. C. Rangley of Markham, announce the engagement of their eldest daughter, Miss Marie Thelma, to Dr. Frederick Allan Aylesworth of Roseneath.

WILL BUILD ISOLATION HOSPITAL

City Council Ammended the Report of the Property Committee and no By-law will Go to the People—Plans and Specifications Adopted

The Isolation Hospital will be built this year and no time will be lost in getting started. The council at its meeting last night altered the Property Committee's report and no bylaw will go to the people in January. The building will cost completed probably $15,000 and it will be rushed from beginning to end as the condition of dyptheria and scarlet fever is very serious in the city and provision must be mad the city and provision must be made for the care of the sick.

The Property Committee was instructed to advertise for tenders at once. There were several in favor of going to the people in January, but the majority favored immediate action.

Theisolation hospital is a matter which has been handled by the councils forseveral years past. It is today more serious than ever as there has all summer and even last fall been a large number of patients. For a while the epidemic was abated in the city but recently it has become more severe. The past week several new cases have been reported and the families were put in quarantine. The cold weather is coming on and the danger of complications is greater. The city has no possible way to deal with the cases and itis a tremendous handicap and expense to the families which are thus confined. The great majority of cases are in families which cannot afford to bear the expense or to be out of employment. Another serious matter is that in most families where scarlet fever breaks out usually more than one case develops and the house remains in quarantine for many weeks. It is very necessary, said Dr. McPherson, as medical health officer, to have an isolation hospital. It is a matter which has to be settled in a very short time, and it was important that it be settled now and that the work be proceeded with at once.

When the Property Committee's report was read to the council recommending that the isolation hospital question be put to a vote of the people Ald. Morrow moved and Ald. Duncan seconded that the report be so amended to read that the Property Committee be instruct ed to advertise for tenders and that the work be gone on with at once.

Ald. Hicksstated that he thought the Property Committee had adopted a very wise course. He admitted a isolation hospital was badly need ed but he thought that the patients could be well looked after by erecting one or two buildings and on a much more modest scale. The alderman pointed out that since 1894 the city's debenture dent had increased over a hundred per cent. while the assessment had increased only about fifty-nine per cent. He thought the city was issuing debentures for altogether too small sums. Now the city must stop some place. Let it be here or in future. At this time, however, the council has an opportunity to consult the people, if they are satisfied to spend $15,000 for that purpose, all right.

Ald. Hicks also pointed out that the council this year has done a lot without consulting the people. For instance a new public library is being built which will cost the city at least $3,000 a year. Then the people were never consulted in connection with the Board of Education's$10,000.

Ald. Duffus said that if the people turned the bylaw down the council would simply have to build the hospital anyway next year.

Ald. Morrow agreed largely with Ald. Hicks' statements but he thought that a building such as is proposed should be erected by debentures.

Aldermen Metheral, Gillespie and Duncan all favored the building of the hospital this year.

Ald. Morrow's motion was then voted on and it was carried by a vote of seven tothree.

Return to Ward System

At the next municipal elections in January a referendum will be submitted to the people as follows:

"Do you favor a return to the ward system of electing the city council?"

This is the result of a petition handed in to the city clerk signed by 200 ratepayers asking that the referendum be taken.

Ald. Morgan introduced the matter to the council after the hour of midnight last night. He only had to remind the aldermen that the question was given a three months' hoist last year because the request was made too late in the season. He therefore brought it up this year in lots of time. His motion was seconded by Ald. Dincan and was carried.

If the people vote in favor of the referendum, it will come into force at the January elections in 1911 or one year later.

Will Purchase Burleigh Power

The Central Ontario Power Company has been called on their offer to supply electric power to Peterborough from Burleigh Falls at $11.60 per horse power, providing the city buys all the power. The city will take all the power that can be developed at the minimum flow of the river.

Ald. Hicks at last night's council meeting brought up the Burleigh Falls power again and said he thought that the city should show the Central Ontario Power Company that the city meant business. He said that the company in a letter to the council offered to deliver power to the city at $11.60.

He favored the city accepting the offer and to take all their power at that price developed at the minimum flow of the river.

He moved that the city clerk write the company stating that city would accept their power at their offer of $11.60, and to ask them if they were prepared to enter in such an agreement withthe city and that the city have the option of purchasing the Burleigh Falls property. Ald. Duncan seconded the motion.—Carried.

MYSTERIOUS DISAPPEARANCE.

Young Farmer Near Belleville Disappears.

Belleville, Sept. 21.—Despite every effort of police, relatives and friends no trace of Stewart McMullen, who so mysteriously disappeared a week ago tonight, has been found. The young man was over six feet tall, 19 years of age, and of exemplary character. He conducted a farm for an invalid uncle, John Connolly, in 3rd Concession of Sydney township.

It appears McMullen left home early Tuesday night to come to this city where he was to take a degree in the Orange Order, and that is the last known of him. Next morning his hired man came to the police station and informed Chief Newton of the circumstances. He found the young man's horse and rig in the stables of the Anglo Saxon hotel, the hostler stated that they had been put in there on Tuesday night between 11 and 12 o'clock by a young man answering the description of McMullen, the latter saying he was in a hurry to catch a train.

Peary Refuses to Share the North Pole Honors

Must be Recognized as the Only Man Reaching the Pole—Declines Public Honors and Banquets Till Controversy is Duly Settled

Sydney, Sept. 22.—The work of the souvenir hunters, who swarmed over Peary's ship, Roosevelt, yesterday, is in indescribable. The messroom library consisting of 200 story books, and other volumes, which was provided at the beginning of the expedition by Commander Peary, is gone. Not a book remains.

Sydney, N.S., Sept. 22.—An interesting feature of the water parade in honor of Commander Peary's arrival here yesterday, was the notice Commander Peary took of the little tug Fairy, which was flying the Italian flag. The commander at once recognized that this act of the Italian residents here was a most delicate one, and that the spirit of it was laid in the knowledge of the deep friendship that exists between Peary and the Italian explorer, Cagni. It was the latter who vowed it as his belief that if any man discovered the North Polethat man would be Commander Peary.

Having this in mind, Commander Peary called to the little tug Fairy to give a line to the tug Iona,which was fast to the Roosevelt, and tow along in the place of honor.

Another little incident of the trip up the harbor was the anxiety the commander showed when the motorboat ofJ. H. Bertram was capsized, and the occupant thrown into the water. Peary called out not to bother about the boat, but to save the man, and his sharp word of command caused those aboard the Fairy to grab hold of Mr. Bertram's feet and drag him aboard feet first.

An old lady from the country districts, who was in town yesterday to see the sights was standing upon the steps of the Sydney Hotel when Commander Peary was shaking hands with the citizens.

"My, my!" she exclaimed. "Who would have thought he knew so many people here!"

It is estimated that fully 15,000 people witnessed the landing of Commander Peary at the Ferry Company's pier and the subsequent official reception at the Sydney Hotel.

"PILLS LIKE A FILE."

So Harsh and Drastic are Many Pills as to Seriously Injure the Health.

In a letter written from his home in Valencia, Mr. Marsh Selwyn does service to thousands by drawing attention to the injuries inflicted upon delicate people by drastic purgative pills.

"For a long time I suffered from constipation. This condition compelled the use of pills. Like many another, I made the unwise choice of using pills that were like lightning in their activity. I began to be filled with intestinal disturbances, constant rumblings, gas in the bowels and diarrhoea. I grew pale and emaciated. Then the doctor told me drastic irritating pills had caused catarrh of the bowels, an almost incurable disease. Explaining my situation to a friend, he advised a trial of Dr. Hamilton's Pills. I speedily experienced the healing and curative effect they exert on the stomach, liver and bowels. The intestines, freed from irritating dirt, rapidly regained natural tone, the bowels acted as if nature and not Dr. Hamilton's Pills were at work. I know it will be of value to thousands to know that a pill as mild and curative as Dr. Hamilton's is available to the ailing."

For bowel disorders, sick headache constipation, liver and stomach derangement, there is no pill so invariably sure to cure as Dr. Hamilton's Pills. Refuse a substitute. Sold in 25 cts boxes, all dealers, or The Catarrhozone Co., Kingston, Ont.

SWEENEY—MULCAHY.

A pretty wedding was solemnized in St. John's Roman Catholic church in St. John's Roman Catholic church, Keene, Tuesday morning at ten o'clock, when Miss Minnie Mulcahy, daughter of Mr. Timothy Mulcahy, Otonabee, was united in marriage to Mr. John Sweeney of Winnipeg, and son of Mr. John Sweeney, Otonabee. The ceremony was performed by Rev Father Kelly in the presence of only the immediate friends and relatives of the contracting parties. The bride who was given away by her father,looked very pretty in a dress of blue voile over taffeta. She wore a hat to match. She was assisted by Miss Florence Coughlin, who was becomingly attired in blue mulle and a black hat. Mr. Frank Fano of Peterborough, acted as best man.

The Fall and Winter Classes of Educational Department of Y.M.C.A.

The fall and winter educational classes of the Y.M.C.A., will open in a short time. These classes were conducted last year and proved a great success and benefit to the boys and young men of Peterborough.

This is a most commendable work taken hold of by the Y.M.C.A. It provides a profitable way in which the young men of the shops, factories and other institutions can spend the long evenings of the fall and winter and early spring and so fit themselves for larger usefulness in whatever occupation he was engaged.

The Young Men's Christian Association in the Educational Department is offering to the boys and men of Peterborough means of self-improvement in many branches, viz. Literary and Debating Club, checkers and chess, matriculation class, school of salesmanship, sign painting, show card writing, and many other branches of education.

The matriculation class has already 12 applicants for admission and it will not be long before all the different classes in connection with the department are filled. Full information in regard to the classes can be obtained from the secretary.

Billy W. was Killed at Driving Park Yesterday

A peculiar accident happened yesterday morning at the Driving Park which resulted in the death of Billy W., the horse that was purchased in St. Catharines by Mrs. Wm. Whitton, Lundy's Lane. Mr. Gerald Dunford was driving Billy W. around the track for a workout and for the purpose of finding out whether he was in condition to enter the races in Lindsay on Friday and Saturday of this week. A number of heats had been run and another was being finished. Billy W. came down the stretch towards the grand stand on what proved to be his last finish, and was stepping along at a 2-20 clip. He had reached a point almost in front of the grand stand. when a piece of paper was blown across the track and passed in front of the horse. Just what happened cannot be well explained. It was all over in a few seconds and Gerald Dunford who had the reins did not realize just what did occur until he picked himself out of the dust 30 feet away, after a monoplane stunt from the seat of his sulky. Billy W. became so frightened by that papery flash across the horizon of his vision that he simply turned a somersault apparently alighting on his head. A few convulsive kicks and the last spark of Billy W.'s sporting vitality had fled and he fell over on one side, dead. Gerald Dunford had a narrow escape. He was caught off his guard and shot from his seat as if from a catapult.

Billy W. had a fair mark and as a driver and "stepper" was a good piece of horse flesh. It will be a decided loss to Mr. and Mrs. Wilton.

When a man or woman finds sickness coming on, such as indigestion, weak eyes, kidney trouble, etc it is time some attention is given to the subject of food and drink.

In practically all such cases where coffee or tea is the drink one can obtain relief by quitting the coffee or tea and taking Postum for he leaves off a drink that is an active producer of disease and takes in its place a powerful liquid food that contains elements for rebuilding the nerve centres which have long before been torn down.

"There's a Reason"

Peterboro' Canoe Co. Get Lease of Land on the Water Front

The Peterborough Canoe Company have at last succeeded in securing from the city a lease for a piece of land on the water front to be used for a piling ground so that they can erect a new building on their property in which to build gasoline launches. The company will begin at once to prepare for their increased facilities.

The Manufacturers' Committee reported to the council as follows:—

Your committee begs leave to report, that in regard to the request of the Peterborough Canoe Company for a fixed assessment, and a lease of the land north of King street between their property and the C.P.R. spur line.

That it cannot recommend the granting of a fixed assessment.

That it recommends that a bylaw be passed, requesting the Peterborough City Trust Commission to grant a lease to the company, subject to determination by either party by giving one year's notice in writing, of that part of the river front lying north of King street and extending as far north as a line drawn parallel to King street, and at a distance of one hundred feet northerly from the northern limit of the company's land, to the Canadian Pacific spur line, but reserving the right of way over the easterly forty feet thereof, and giving the railway line, at a rental of one dollar per year and taxes. The said company to have the right to remove any buildings erected by them upon the said lands, at any time before the expiry of said lease.

That allthe expenses that may be necessary to obtain a description of the property to be leased or used by the company, shall be borne by the company.

The report was adopted.

INQUEST REOPENED.

The inquest opened some time ago as the result of the discovery of a human skeleton in a bush at Springville, will be reopened at Springville this evening at 5 o'clock by Coroner Dr. Gray.

Awaiting End of Earth

Providence, R.I., Sept. 22.—True to their belief that a great upheaval is about to occur, whereby the top crust of the earth will peel off, carrying the wicked to destruction and leaving the "elect" in undisputed possession of the world, several Rhode Island families belonging to the sect known as the latter Reign of the Apostolic Church, have gone to Duxbury, Mass., an appointed place, to wait for the cataclysm. The time set for the triumph of the faithful is Friday next at 10 a.m., Leaders of the sect from Rhode Island, Maine, and elsewhere are now at Duxbury, and it is said that many of them have disposed of all their worldly goods and abandoned their various occupations. The prediction that the earth would be rended asunder on Sept. 24, is said to have been made first by Frank N. Doughty, an East Providence member of the Apostolic Church ofthis city, last spring.

Knew of Cook's Claim While Still in Arctic

Sydney, C.B., Sept. 22.— Some very interesting remarks were made this afternoon by the man who has shown such keen resentment of another's claim to priority in Polar discovery.

When Commander Peary received the correspondents in the parlor of his suite in the hotel late this afternoon he stated that he would be open to any questions, but that he would he use his discretion in answering them. The first question that was asked of him had reference to Dr. Cook.

Peary was told that Dr. Cook had reiterated his statement that a note signed by Peary and directing Bo'sn Murphy, of the Roosevelt, to seize any stores he found at Etah as being under the status of abandoned goods, had been found by Cook and a copy of it made by him. Did the commander have any reply to make to that?

"Bo'sn Murphy, of course, had his written instructions from me when he left the Roosevelt to remain in Etah before we sailed northward in August, 1908," said Peary. "The orders were from me, and they will be published, of course, at the proper time."

WHEN PEARY HEARD THAT HE WAS NO. 2.

George Keenan, the traveler and correspondent, who took part in the session of newspaper men, asked Peary how many dogs and sledges he had sacrificed in making the first seven marches out from the land over the Pollar Ocean. Considerable significance bore on the answer he thought, because if one man lost a large proportion of his outfit, and another went through the same region with which he started, there was an unusual discrepancy between their two experiences.

Then somebody reverted to the Cook question again. The questioner wanted to know when it was that Peary heard that Cook took to himself the credit for having reached the Pole. Was it before Harry Whitney, who is supposed to have been told by Cook, left the Roosevelt or after he had been transferred to the Jeannie?

"I cannot just locate the time," began the commander. "I knew before I reached Etah, no—I will have to be excused if I do not answer this question. On such a matter I prefer to keep silent until, as I have stated before, the main question of whether or not Cook reached the Pole is definitely decided."

Somebody wanted to know what would be Peary's procedure in making his data of Polar quests.

"I have already made an official report of my arrival at the Pole to the Navy Department at Washington and I have made a preliminary report to the Geodetic Survey. My next step will be to make a full report to the Peary Arctic Club, then I will render a more complete report to O. H. Tittman, superintendent of the Coast Survey, in Washington, upon the tidal, meteorological and ocean sounding work. That will for a time my actions."

Annual Meeting of the Bible Society

The 72nd annual meeting of the Bible Society was held in Charlotte street Methodist church last night when a very large congregation assembled.

The meetingwas a very interesting one and the choir contributed much to the brightness and success of the meeting. Sheriff Hall, president of the society, took the chair, and called upon the Rev. E. A.Pearson who gave a most interesting address on the value of the Scriptures in the development of character. There were many difficulties and problems confronting those who disseminated the Word of God, but there was triumph everywhere.

Canon Davidson dealt with the practical use of the Bible, the reading and study of the Bible. The speaker depreciated the tendency in many quarters to be satisfied with the possession of the Bible without the study of it.

Rev. R. Pogue spoke of the Bible under three heads;

1. The estimate men have of the Bible.
2. What the Bible has done for those who have accepted them.
3. We ought to read the Bible more than we do. The contents of the Bible ought to be known more and more.

Rev. J. R. Webb spoke of the duty of the hour. The great call is to do more than ever has been done. He had been told by an official of this city, of a man whose wife had died and in going to the West took his wife's Bible. Because he loved his wife and loved her Bible he kept it bound up with tape and for a whole year never looked within its pages. He returned to Peterborough not long ago he came there fell from the covers of that Bible his wife's bank book containing the last that there was a deposit of $1900.

Walter Blythe's Family were All Sane

Toronto, Sept. 22.—Walter Blythe, sentenced to be hanged on October 1, for the murder of his wife at Agincourt on January 3, last, may require another respite to allow the question of whether or not he should have a new trial being argued. This morning Mr. T. C. Robinette, K.C., counsel for the prisoner made a strong plea before the Court of Appeal for the right to appeal against Mr. Justice Riddell's refusal to grant a stated case. Judgment was reserved by the Court of Appeal, with the promise that it would be delivered as soon as possible.

The point which may cause delay is the fact that the ground on which Mr. Robinette now claims the right to appeal. was not presented by him before Judge Riddell when he asked for a stated case. He admitted this morning that the point was new one, and had not been placed before Judge Riddell.

Mr. Robinette stated that the point in question was the only one on which he was appealing. The trial, he said, had gone on before they had an opportunity to "gather evidence as to the prisoner's sanity and on information received from a friend in Toronto, to the effect that the Blythe family were subject to insanity, that plea had been depended on in the trial. Accordingly Blythe had not been permitted to give evidence onhis own behalf. Their investigations had shown no sign of insanity in Blythe's family, but did show traces of it in the family of the wife. He stated that the insanity plea had now been dropped, and if a new trial were granted the defence would be along the lines indicated in the present application.

Two Belleville Boys Accidentally Shot

Belleville, Sept. 22.—Two well-known young men of this city were victims of a shooting accident yesterday afternoon.

Fred Mills and Bert Bell, both 18 years of age, took a holiday and went out into the country a few miles from the city in search of squirrels. While crawling beneath a rail fence they stepped on a pile of stones, which began to move under their feet. Both boys fell to the ground, the trigger of the gun carried by Bell striking a stone and discharging the weapon. The bullet entered Mill's thigh and passed through Bell's right thumb.

Mills was removed to the hospital and will recover.

Thirty-Year Franchise for the Light and Power Co. is Settled

There were doings in the council chamber last night and it took a long time to get all the things through. It was a real old time fire-works session but as a result the agreement between the Peterborough Light & Power Company and the city for a thirty-year franchise, has been settled and it will be submitted to the people to voteon next January.

Over two hours was spent in threshing out the final details, but all were arranged satisfactorily except that the company wanted the bylaw submitted as soon as possible and offered to bear the expense of submitting it and sending a postal card to each ratepayer notifying them where to vote.

When the city clerk began to read the agreement there were signs of a storm but everything went smoothly until a clause was struck in which the small power users were dealt with. Those using motors up to 4-horse power had the option of taking a flat rate at $40 per horse power or using the meter at 7c. per k.h. Ald. Duffus raised a big kick on this claiming that the meter rate was too high. Ald. Hicks assisted him but the council stood by the agreement.

Aldermen Morgan and Duncan took exception to the clause stating that the company shall sell the power that is developed in the city for manufacturing purposes at $20 per h.p. They wanted all power developed within a radius of 25 miles, but were defeated 4—6.

The clause was afterwards amended to read that the company must reserve 2000 h.p. for manufacturing purposes other than what is used by the Quaker Oats Co.

Next Aldermen Morgan and Duncan moved that all matters in dispute between the city and company in future be submitted to theHydro Electric Commission or the Municipal and Railway Board at the city's option. They put up a strenuous fight for this. The company refused to consider the Hydro-Electric Commission on the grounds that that body was in itself prejudiced against power companies. They agreed to allow disoutes to be settled by the Municipal and Railway Board or by an arbitration board appointed under the Arbitration Act. This was accepted after a long debate.

At the suggestion of Ald. Hicks a clause was inserted to the effect that the company must sign the agreement before it is submitted to the people. Mr. Larmonth said the company had intended doing so.

Then followed the final struggle on the time of submitting the bylaw. Those favoring January were successful, so that the matter is now practically settled, after nearly six months' labor until the people vote on it.

Smith Street Bridge Contract Must Stand

Mr. Ed. Conroy, representing E. & F. Conroy, addressed the council in connection with the Smith street bridge contract. He maintained he should be allowed something in face of the increase in the price of cement since he put in his tender. The increase is at least 30c. per barrel. It is a matter beyond his control and he is willing to bear one-third of the loss and the city put up two-thirds. The increase will amount to $760 so that the city's share would be $520.

The council, however, could not see its way clear to grant an increase in Mr. Conroy's tender.

At the last minute before adjourning this morning, Ald. Duffus got a motion through instructing the Board of Works to fix up Argyle street and Caddy street in Ashburnham.

EARLY MORNING BLAZE.

At four o'clock this morning P. C. Meagher discovered a blaze at the old dump at the corner of Charlotte and Water streets, and sent in an alarm. The firemen quickly responded and soon had the blaze out. It required the laying of 600 feet of hose however. There was no serious damage done.

SEEING THE COUNTRY.

The President of the United States is well started on a 13,000 mile tour of his country. He had a great day in Chicago; made important speeches as to the policies of the Republican party, went to see a big baseball game, was profusely snap-shotted for the newspapers and familiarized tens of thousands of people with the appearance of his already world-famous smile. Mr. Taft does well to see as much as possible of the people who elected him. He has, of course, a good deal of time at his disposal for work of this sort. The British legislator whose case covers that or the Canadian legislator is glad enough to rest a bit during the recesses of Parliament. The United States executive is not so hard pressed. In the old Country, of course, the statesman may go from one end of the country to the other and back again to London in about the time it would take an Ottawa man to go to Quebec and back. Canadian distances are relatively enormous and the difficulties encountered by ministers in learning the country at first hand are correspondingly great. But there is need for this first-hand knowledge and everything fitting should be done to encourage it..

Lady Morell Mackenzie, widow of Sir Morell Mackenzie, wrote in her will:— When I die, I hope my children will wear as little black as possible. White or mauve I like, but not black. And I hope they will not shut themselves up, but go out among their friends, and to places of amusement. I am not afraid of them forgetting me, and I want them to be happy." To which our esteemed contemporary The Bobcaygeon Independent adds: An eminently wise woman. Those hideous trappings of mourning are the remnants of heathenism. They are a fraud, for they represent a condition of mind that cannot be sustained. Even if it were possible for grief to be continuous, no person has any right to impose their woe on the brightness, cheerfulness, and happyness of others. The wish of the departed would naturally be that their friends be frank, honest, and happy.

It's a pity when sick ones drug the stomach or stimulate the Heart and Kidneys. That is all wrong! A weak Stomach, means weak Stomach nerves, always. And this is also true of the Heart and Kidneys. The weak nerves are instead crying out for help. This explains why Dr. Shoop's Restorative is promptly helping Stomach, Heart and Kidney ailments. The Restorative reaches out for the actual cause of these ailments—the failing "inside nerves." Anyway test the Restorative 48 hours. It won't cure as soon as that but you will surely know that help is coming. Sold by all dealers.

IN considering the Glackin bill, authorizing the state of Illinois to establish by special taxation a tuberculosis sanatorium, the question arises as to whether it should end with the establishment of a sanatorium for tuberculosis only, or whether the proceeds of the special tax should not be also used for the establishment of a sanatorium for the cure of other diseases and for the betterment of tenement districts.

The tenement house laws could work in co-operation and be part of this new law. There could be built, with the proceeds of this tax, model tenements, of which the state should be landlord. These tenements should be designed and built for the health and welfare of the working classes.

No better model could be followed than the Krupp dwellings of Germany. These buildings are built in squares, with open stairways, large central court, bathroom, kitchen, parlor and bedrooms—no shutting out from the people of their natural rights—God's light and air.

The model dwellings should be under state control and visited at intervals by official inspectors. No overcrowding should be allowed, cleanliness and hygiene should be insisted upon, and the tenants of these dwellings should have free medical treatment from medical officers of the fund, and should, in fact, be under medical supervision.

I venture to suggest that such tenements could be run by the state on a paying basis, and the benefit of the community would be so far-reaching that it is impossible to limit it by any statement.

The effect on the health of the individual is obvious, and the moral awakening would be a revelation, because, as the tenement question now stands, it is quite a common occurrence for ten families to live in a house originally built for one family, and several people of both sexes, boys and girls, men and women, to sleep in one room.

The tenement house to-day breeds physical and moral disease. As W. J. Hurlbut, in his play, "The Writing on the Wall," asserts, "The tenement house landlords are a trust—a combination in restriction of health, of decency, of virtue." The state must fight the trust by becoming the landlord of model tenement dwellings for the people.

The Bills We Like to Receive

By JOSEPH E. RALPH

of bills is a fine, firm quality of linen, known as "distinctive" paper, manufactured under government inspection at Dalton, Mass. Its delicate yet tough fibers have had a varied history before receiving the government stamp. The flax grew, perhaps, in the moist, fertile fields of Ireland.

It was gathered, bleached, spun and woven largely by woman's skill. It may have formed at one time dainty lingerie; it may have been the garments of babes; the confirmation suits of children or the graduating gowns of girls.

The paper employed for the printing

Loving hands have caressed it, patched it, darned it, and finally consigned it to the rag bag. Its mission, however, was not thereby concluded. By a process of modern alchemy, it is transformed and issued anew, not from looms, but from rolls, to take up another cycle of usefulness. Feeding avarice, serving as a channel for charity, satisfying hunger, paying bills, building homes and perhaps dowering brides whose mothers wore the same fibers when they stood before the altar, the bank note could tell a rare story of comedy and tragedy.

College Work But a Part of Life

By PROF. WOODROW WILSON

Of all the erroneous and harmful ideas that young men and young women have, the worst is the pernicious belief that college is simply the stage which precedes the real beginning of life, and that the real life and the real tasks are still to come. University life is not an introduction to life, but a part of it, and a most important part of it. More and more, as the years go by, in the business as in the professional world, the stress is being laid upon the trained mind, able to grapple with the complicated problems of industrial and urban life. Those whose minds are not trained will be servants, who will not only have to obey some one else, but will have to bear the added indignity of being told how to do the work. And the training of the mind, which will make a man a master and not a servant, is to be had only through hard work, intellectual work, and by a utilization to the full of the great opportunities which a university training spreads out before one. To give that training, to help that mastery of one's mental powers, in which lies the secret of Midas and of Socrates, is the purpose and the aim of a university.

Life's Discords Often Work for Good

By JOHN H. LeBARON

A small discord will sometimes ruin a large symphony.

A discord is anything that disturbs the tranquil trend of things.

No matter how crude or how savage a people may be if left to themselves they exist with a certain degree of harmony. This is one of the selfish requirements of self-preservation.

It is not necessarily a matter of ethics. At war with other tribes, even at war with nature, the savage, nevertheless, lives in rude harmony with his own people.

War is the great discordant note of civilization. Among enlightened nations 2,000 years of Christian civilization should have made war impossible.

As long as wars exist the symphony of civilization is incomplete.

All great souls have been discords, out of harmony with existing ideas.

"The carrion in the sun will convert itself to grass," says Emerson.

Bearing out the not altogether philosophical theory that there is good in everything, even discords have their mission.

BIG LAND DEAL.

Acmillan Jarvis & Co., Paid $190,000 for 80 Feet.

Toronto, 22.—Judging from the activity of Bay Street real estate, that thoroughfare will soon be one of the main financial districts of the city. Another big deal was put through yesterday, when Messrs. Acmillan Jarvis and Company purchased 80 feet on the east side of the street, just north of King Street. The site is occupied by the London Canadian Loan Company's building and the old Emergency Hospital. The price paid was about $190,000, or nearly $2,135 a front foot. The property is irregular in shape. A portion of it has a depth of 158 feet, while the remainder has only 105 feet to a lane. The building which was occupied by the London Canadian Loan Agency is five storeys high.

KIPLING SEES DISASTER.

Predicts Trouble as a Result of Present Social Tendencies.

National disaster from present-day tendencies of the National Government is prophesied in a long poem by Rudyard Kipling, which the Morning Post prints.

Describing the citizens of an imaginary state, "The City of Brass," he tells how they started to "decree a new earth at a birth without labor or sorrow."

Their administrative ideas are thus described:

They said: "Who has hate in the soul?
Who has envied his neighbor?
Let him arise and control both that
man and his labor."
They said: "Who is eaten by sloth?
Whose unthrift has destroyed him?
He shall levy a tribute from all because none have employed him."
They say: "Who has toiled? Who hath striven and gathered possession?
Let him be spoiled; he hath given full proof of transgression."

They raised their ramparts to convert them into pleasure grounds, encouraged rebellion in their colonies, flung away the Imperial possessions their forefathers gained, scouted faith and endeavor, and derided the idea of restraint.

Nemesis comes when they are steeped in self-satisfaction in the form of a hostile host, and the poem concludes:

The eaters of other men's bread, the exempted from hardship,
For the hate they had taught through the State brought the State no defender,
And it passed from the roll of the nations in headlong surrender."

A Fading Art.

The art of carving is disappearing among the Maoris of New Zealand. There is no demand for war canoes now, except from world's fairs and Paris expositions. In the olden days, the chief's house, the storehouse, and the posts of the village stockade were ornamented with carved figures. But the rainy climate of the country and other causes have been fatal to these monuments. One must go to the museums to see specimens of this fading art.

The "haka" is the war dance or call to arms of old Maoriland. Stripped to the waist, the men arrange themselves in two files and begin to chant in a low tone, a woman giving them the time. They turn right and left, stamping and waving their arms, till they work themselves up to a prodigious pitch of fury expressed by rolling eyeballs and deafening roars. Standing to one side, the woman "leader" urges them on to the climax. They give one thundering stamp, and thrust out their tongues as far as they can. This was the supreme act of defiance to the foe. In the olden days it was no light matter to attend a "haka." Then each warrior brandished a heavy greenstone club, and once heated to the pointed of battle frenzy, would hardly cool down, even at a play "haka," without clubbing somebody just to keep his hand in practice.

His Lucky Donkey.

The costermonger's love for his donkey was demonstrated recently at the People's Palace, Mile End road, London. Nearly 200 donkeys, carefully groomed, with their owners standing by them in their Sunday best, were exhibited under the auspices of Our Dumb Friends' League.

Many of the costermongers declared that they would not part with their little animals for untold gold. "Here's the foundation of all my little fortune," said William Witt, an East End coal dealer, as he stroked his sturdy prize winner, Lazy Lightning. "Five years ago I was dead broke; I borrowed 20 shillings to buy my little pal here"—patting the donkey again.

"First my donkey carried coal from street to street on a barrow; but gradually my trade grew. Now I've got three little shops, and a farm out in the country. But it was the donkey that turned my luck and put me on the right road. Out at the farm there's a nice green field, with shady trees in it. As soon as this show's over that's where my donkey's going, to end his days just doing nothing but enjoy the green grass—and rest."

Many prizes were awarded to the best-groomed donkeys. A challenge cup and a set of harness, given by the Queen, were won by Jenny, a smart little donkey that pulls the barrow of a wood and coke hawker.

Cinematograph in Central Africa.

There seems to be no limit to the ramifications of modern inventions. No sooner does anything establish itself in the favor of the public than it bobs up serenely everywhere. Who would have thought, for instance, that the cinematograph, popular and entertaining as it is, would have appealed to the wild and woolly native of Central Africa? Yet a letter from the office of Superintendent of Buildings at Zomba, Nyasaland, assures me that this is so. The venture is successful, too. Mr. Hackett, of Frome, Somerset, is the intrepid pioneer, and the letter I have received states that "his exhibition has attracted the natives by the thousand." They call Mr. Hackett the "witch doctor," and he is still proceeding into the interior, "with a convoy of 40 Kaffirs to carry provisions, outfit, etc. —London Answers.

Historic House for Sale.

Smallfield Place, Burstow, England, which is associated with the life history of Anne Boleyn, is to be sold by auction by Messrs. Knight, Frank & Hutley. The house is considered to be most perfect example of domestic architecture in Surrey. Smallfield was given by Lord Burghurst to John de Burstow as an acknowledgment for assistance received from him when thrown from his horse in the French war in the reign of Edward III. The "priests' hole" is still there, and the house is in a wonderful state of preservation.

Looking For Jobs.

No less than 2,500 applications were received for thirteen vacancies under the Surrey (Eng.) County Council the other day.

In the Senate.

The Senators of Canada are variously distinguished. Boucher de Boucherville, from Quebec, is the oldest, though only 87, a mere infant compared with some of his confreres, recently deceased. Hon. Hewitt Bostock, from British Columbia, is the youngest, just 45, almost too young for the company he keeps. There are also the wittiest Domville, of New Brunswick, is our choice — and the wealthiest; and though all are wise, there must be one wiser than the rest.

W. Dell Perley, from Saskatchewan, whose death last week still further reduced the rapidly-thinning ranks of the Conservatives in the Upper House, was the biggest physically. Originally, a St. John River farmer, he went west in the first boom days of Manitoba, ignoring the maxim that a man is a fool who moves after forty. His first attempt at prairie farming was unsuccessful and he decided to return to New Brunswick. In a crowded shack at Brandon, which did duty for a hotel, on a cold, wet October night, he met Dr. Silas Alward from St. John, who talked Mr. Perley out of his fit of homesickness, and he returned to Assiniboia to prosper beyond his most sanguine hopes, and to become eventually member of Parliament and Senator for his adopted home.

Sir Wilfrid and Family Prayer.

The death of Rev. Dr. Williams of Montreal, recently, recalls a circumstance that concerns Sir Wilfrid Laurier, and that is vouched for by a prominent public man of Toronto, says a religious exchange.

Mrs. Williams was a daughter of Mr. Murray of Quebec, one of the old Puritan stock. Up to the age of eighteen Wilfrid Laurier could not speak a word of English, and he went to live in the home of Mr. Murray for the purpose of learning English. It was Mr. Murray's habit to read a portion of Scripture and have family prayer every morning, and the French-Canadian boy was told that he might remain during these devotions if he wished to. He did so, and was a member of the family circle for about four years.

After he had become distinguished in the public affairs of the Dominion, a friend who knew of his association with the family of Mr. Murray, asked him what effect it had on him, and his answer was at once an honest appreciation of good living and a tribute to principle. Said Sir Wilfrid:

"The sterling integrity of character and uprightness of life displayed in the home of Mr. Murray made such an impression upon me that I will never shake it off as long as I live."

In Search of Coal.

A party of prospectors has left Prince Albert on a six months' trip to the country lying between Isle la Crosse and Athabasca Lake. They have been sent out by the Lands branch of the Canadian Department of the Interior, and will work their way across to Fort McMurray by water, and return by dog trains. The object of the expedition is to discover definitely what coal deposits are in the north, and to find further outcrops which the Indians report to have found from time to time.

Indian Skeleon Found.

While workmen were digging clay in a brickyard in St. Boniface, Man., the other day they unearthed a skeleton of an old Indian in perfect condition. Upon his breast was a peculiarly shaped little cup, which had been filled with hazel nuts.

Summer in Greenland.

Among the interesting observations made by the Danish northeast Greenland expedition is one on the sudden oncoming of summer in that land of ice and fiords. The change is described as sudden. Gradually the temperature of the snow had risen to the freezing point, and then in one day it all melted. "The rivers were rushing along, flowers were budding forth, and in the air the butterflies were fluttering." The birds came nearly all on the same day, and most of them even at the same hour. One day there were only the ordinary ptarmigan and the raven; the next there were the sanderling, the ring plover, the goose, the eider duck and many others.

A Bisley Story.

Stories of Lord Roberts are perhaps more numerous than authentic. Here is one which may or may not be authentic, but is certainly amusing. The Commander-in-Chief was watching the firing at Bisley, and noticed two or three mistakes on the part of the markers. So he went to the telephone and rang up the officer in charge. "The marking is very bad," he observed. "It's the best you'll get," retorted the officer. "Do you know who I am?" sternly demanded Lord Roberts. "No, I don't." "I'm Lord Roberts." "Well, I'm Lord Wolseley." Lord Roberts loves a joke, but how he took this one history does not record.

The Lindsay Warder says:— Mr. S. Anderson, who is now operating 40 miles of electric railway and represents large interests, is looking into the possibility of a street railway system from Fenelon Falls to Bobcaygeon passing through Sturgeon Point, and it has been suggested that a large hotel and pavilion may be erected on the beach at the east end during the coming winter. RACING FOR THE PASS

YELLOWHEAD ROUTE DISCOVERED MANY YEARS AGO.

Viscount Milton and Dr. Cheadle in 1863 Spent Three Months Going From Edmonton to Kamloops Through the Narrow Cleft in the Mountains—Severe Privations and Laborious Travel.

From time to time there come out of the west reports regarding a race now going on between two great railway systems, the goal of which is the Yellowhead Pass. Each, it is said, is straining every nerve to be the first to locate and build its line through that famous passage across the Rocky Mountains. In that passage there is ample room and about facilities for both so that the result of the race is not of paramount importance. The important thing is that here two transcontinental railway systems propose crossing the Rocky Mountains and striking the Pacific coast at points far north of the existing British Columbia ports. This means, not only new railways, but new areas opened to development and settlement.

The Yellowhead Pass is not now engaging for the first time the attention of railway builders. Thirty years ago the Canadian Government caused a preliminary survey of the pass to be made, the intention then being to build through the pass the Government railway which had been promised British Columbia upon its entrance into Confederation. A few years later the railway project was turned over to the present Canadian Pacific Co., and the latter, having selected Vancouver as its western terminus, naturally looked for a more southerly passage through the Rocky Mountains. Kicking Horse Pass, the one in use to-day, was selected, and the Yellowhead Pass was left to enjoy a third of a century more of solitude. But its solitude has at length been broken upon. The engineers have come and taken their levels and driven their stakes. Close on their heels will follow the construction gangs. They will carry the highway of steel through the mountains, and soon these valleys and gorges will be resounding with the whistle of the locomotive.

The pass is heavily wooded, and the shadow of the forest and still deeper shadow of mountain gorges hang over the greater part of its extent. It has changed very little since that summer, forty-six years ago, when two adventurous young Englishman, Viscount Milton and Dr. Cheadle, accompanied by an Indian guide and his wife and a very eccentric camp-follower, journeyed from Edmonton to the Pacific slope by way of the Yellowhead Pass.

It was a remarkable journey, during which the little party, toiling through dense forests, wallowing in almost impenetrable swamps and crossing on rafts turbulent rivers, endured great suffering and encountered grave dangers. Their supply of food became exhausted and it was only by killing and eating their miserable horses that they were able to sustain life until an Indian camp on the Thompson River was reached. By a very narrow margin indeed did they escape a miserable death from starvation. The two Englishmen wrote a graphic account of their journey and from its fascinating pages can here and there be gleaned descriptions of the Yellowhead Pass—especially interesting now that the pass is seen to become one of the thoroughfares of the Dominion.

It was on June 3, 1863, that Milton and Cheadle set out from Fort Edmonton for the Yellowhead Pass, their plan being to cross the Rockies, enter upper British Columbia and then follow one of the rivers down to the coast.

After days of weary travel they came in sight of the Rockies. "The prospect was a most glorious one," wrote the travelers, "and most exhilirating to us, who had lived so long in level country, and for the past three weeks had been buried in dense forests, which shut out every prospect, and almost the light of day.

Ranges of pine-clad hills, running nearly north and south, rose in higher and higher succession towards the west, and in the further distance we could see parallel to them a range of rugged, rocky peaks, backed by the snow-clad summits of some giants which towered up beyond. The snow which crowned the loftier peaks, and still lingered in the hollows of the lower hills, glittered in the brilliant sunlight through the soft blue haze which mellowed the scene, and brought the far-distant mountains seemingly close before us. A cleft in the ridge, cut clean as if with a knife, showed us what we supposed to be the opening of the gorge through which we were to pass. The singular rock on the left or eastern side of this gateway, somewhat like the half of a sponge-cake cut vertically, we knew must be the one of which we had heard as La Roche a Myette, close to Jasper House.

Coming to Jasper House, which stood at the eastern entrance to the pass, they found it "a neat, white building surrounded by a palisade, standing in a perfect garden of wild flowers." It was a noted trading post in its day, and one of the principal avenues of the Edmonton of the present time is named after it.

It was after leaving the pass that the travelers suffered the most threatening dangers. Between the pass and the Thompson river were miles of forest labyrinth through which they had to cut their way. Their progress was slow and their supply of provisions now about exhausted. Starvation stared them in the face. They killed their pack-horses and managed to subsist on the flesh until they reached an Indian camp, where food was procured. They were now passing out of the forest, greater progress was made and soon after they came to a district where were many Indian camps from which fish and game were obtained. It was late in August when they reached Kamloops, the journey from Edmonton having occupied almost three months.

A PERFECT DREAM CITY.

The following pretty description of a sunshiny day in London appeared recently in an English publication:

London was yesterday a city of gold and green and white. Golden sunshine in the streets and parks, green foliage on every tree upon which the sun shone down, white buildings newly built or newly painted, with clear outlines under a sky of Oriental blue. What dream-city could be more perfect than London on such a day?

Truly it was an unforgettable day—a day on which it is good to be alive, very good to be young when the spring calls to the blood and when perfume steals into the senses; good even to be old and to sun oneself in the memory of other spring days as golden as this.

The London season is beginning! Good words to those who have the leisure and means to play the game, the merry game of the social whirligig, good even to those who are merely lookers-on.

Yesterday the fun had begun. The King was in town, the court was in the capital, the servants of society had pulled up the window blinds of town houses and the sun was shining.

So the streets were very full of life at its best and brightest. Down Bond street and Piccadilly—the highways of the lucky ones—there was an endless tide of carriages, and the sun gleamed upon brightly polished panellings, flashed fire from the brass head lamps and metal work of magnificent motor cars, and glistened on the smooth flanks of good horses, which went dashing by as proudly as though there were no such thing as petrol.

Women were in the carriages and walking on the shady side, and one man sighed because he could not wear salmon pink, or Madonna blue, or walk in lilac beauty like these ladies who were the flowers of the London streets. Flowers, literally because all their hats were in full blossom, brought out by this brilliant sunshine, and from the top of an omnibus one looked down upon moving bouquets of roses and daisies and forget-me-nots, as though all the flowers in Kensington Gardens had been plucked as the garlands of England's fair women.

Yet the men did their poor best, yesterday, to do credit to the divine day. Old Bucks had put on white waistcoats, and young bloods in new silk hats—bright and beautiful things—had put yellow gloves upon their hands. The Green Park was a paradise, into which had slunk many poor devils, against whom the gates of this paradise were not closed. These Weary Willies had come out of the slums, for spring called to them also, and they lay, in lazy happiness and seedy clothes, like corpses on the emerald greensward, which was a carpet worthy of Kings.

A Cool Deadhead.

Mr. Oscar Asche, the London actor, who, with his wife, Miss Lily Brayton, is on his way to Australia—his native land—which he left eighteen years ago, remarked just before he set sail, apropos of the slump in theatres, that the deadhead is a destroyer of drama. "Once give a man a free seat for a play," he said, "and you will have a difficulty ever after to make him 'pay to go in.' While I was touring with a certain highly-respected manager, we were playing at a long-famous old playhouse in an ancient town. We had billed 'Macbeth' for the Friday night, but during that day the theatre was burnt down. For our next week there our chief contrived to borrow a playhouse a little way out of the district. On reaching there to rehearse on the Monday the manager received a letter saying that the writer had been given two dress-circle orders for the performance of 'Macbeth,' but as that play was not performed owing to the destruction of the theatre, the writer surmised that the manager would remit the money value of those orders."

Clever People Who Can't See.

The history of the past assures us that there are few, if any, departments of human knowledge in which the blind have not distinguished themselves, says The War Cry.

Two of the world's greatest poets—Homer and Milton—were sightless; while Dr. Saunderson, once professor of mathematics in the University of Cambridge, lost his eyesight when twelve months old, but, although his parents were poor, he advanced so greatly in knowledge that he became an expert Greek scholar.

Then, John Metcalfe, of Knaresborough, another blind man, became a champion swimmer, a musician, and an engineer, who distinguished himself in building bridges and making roads.

There still exists, we believe, a monument to the memory of Dr. Hugh James, the blind physician of Carlisle; while in Birmingham there is a blind man who cleans and repairs clocks, and has even constructed new ones.

Queen Victoria's Journals.

Lord Esher has been giving some interesting particulars of Queen Victoria's journals. There are said to be over 100 volumes of them, all written closely in a small running hand. The last entry is dictated and was added just ten days before the Queen died. The journals, it is said, will never be seen hereafter in their complete form.

Bernard Shaw's Next Play.

Bernard Shaw has written another play since "The Showing Up of Blanco Posnet," says The Nation. It is entitled "Press Cutting. Compiled From the Correspondence and Editorial Columns of the Daily Press," and consists of an ironical discussion of woman's suffrage and universal military service.

England's Oldest Barber Dead.

Allen Batchelor of Guildford, England, who was reputed to be England's oldest barber, died recently at the age of 92. He claimed to have been patronized by kings, dukes, bishops, judges, policemen, politicians, publicans, "and sinners no end."

Unreasonable.

"Your baby cries a great deal at night. Can't you do anything for it?"

"Your dog barks a good deal. Can' you do anything to stop him?"

"Confound it, such unreasonable people as you haven't any right to live in a flat!"

The Result the Same.

"Gimme some of that prune pie."

"Son, you've had two kinds of pie already."

"Then another kind won't matter. There's only one kind of stomach ache."

THE STEALTHY TIGER.

When He Moves Quietly Death Does Not Seem More Silent.

I have seen a tiger, sitting up a hundred yards from me in the sunlight washing its face like a cat, move a couple of steps into the shade and fade away like the Cheshire cat in "Alice In Wonderland." But what is more extraordinary is that he can "move without some dry leaf or stalk crackling to betray" him. Often in a beat in the middle of the hot noon the inexperienced sportsman's heart is in his mouth as he hears the crushing of a dead leaf, the slow, stealthy tread of what seems some heavy animal, but it is only "man," the peacock, the first to move ahead of the beaters. Then after a period of strained watching, when the eye can and does detect the move of the tiniest bird, the quiver of a leaf, suddenly without a sound the great beast stands before you. He does not always care to move quietly, but when he does death is not more silent.

The question of how a white or otherwise abnormally marked tiger can take its prey is simplified by the fact that, as a general rule, the tiger kills at night or at dawn or dusk and that it is only the cattle killing tiger that takes his lordly toll of the village cattle by day. Again that wonderful voice, the most mournful sound in captivity, "which literally hushes the jungle and fills the twilight with horror," is a powerful aid to him in his hunting. Often as I have heard it the memory of one occasion is as vivid as the moment when it held me spellbound. I was stalking sambhur in the evening in a glade in the forest when suddenly, from not fifty yards above me, rang out a long, low, penetrating moan, which seemed to fill the jungle with a terrifying thrill and for a moment made the heart stand still. The native shikari, who, in spite of Mowgli's contempt, may know something of jungle ways, believes that the deer, hearing the tiger's voice and unable from the reverberating nature of the sound to locate the position of their enemy, stand — lie still and so give him the chance of stalking his prey. There is probably some truth in this, for unless you are following the tiger and have seen him it is almost impossible from the sound alone to tell with any certainty where he is.—Algernon Durand in London Times.

Harry Lauder's Stuff.

A pretty piece of "bluff" is attributed to Harry Lauder, the Scottish variety entertainer. During his first play in New York he was censured of stinginess. He heard that one journalist had severely commented on the manner in which he drew the purse strings. Not long afterward this man asked him for an interview. Lauder gave him an address and told him to come at 10 o'clock the following night. In the meantime the comedian rented a wretched room in the slum quarter of the city. When the caller came he was ushered into a garret. There sat Lauder, blue with cold, by the light of a single candle. "Arre ye goin' to put down what I say?" Lauder asked. The reporter assured him with pride that he never made notes during an interview. "My memory is excellent," he boasted. "Weel, then," said Lauder, "we'll npo save the light!" And he blew out the candle.

Would Have Done the Same.

Rudyard Kipling undoubtedly got his wit from his maternal grandfather, Rev. George B. Macdonald, a Wesleyan clergyman.

It is related of this gentleman that, in the days when he was courting the lady whom he afterwards married, the future mother-in-law—an aged Methodist with extremely strict notions in regard to the proprieties—was injudicious enough on one occasion to enter the parlor without giving any warning of his approach. The consequence was that he found the sweethearts occupying a single chair.

Deeply shocked by the spectacle, the old man solemnly said:

"Mr. Macdonald, when I was courting Mrs. Brown, she sat on one side of the room and I on the other."

Macdonald's reply was:

"That's what I should have done if I had been courting Mrs. Brown."

The Shirtless Poet.

Mr. Arthur Coleridge, speaking at the summer festival of the College for Working Women, Fitzroy street, London, at which the Bishop of London presided, related that the poet Coleridge once journeyed from Highgate to Holborn to visit a nephew, Sir Wm. H. Coleridge. It was very cold weather, and the poet had on a double-breasted waistcoat which met just below his neck. It was discovered that he had got no shirt. His nephew remonstrated with him, to which the poet replied: "I'm very sorry, William, very sorry; but I've forgotten my shirt." Upon this Sir William kindly lent his uncle a shirt, "and," said the speaker, "I regret to say that very necessary garment was never returned to its original owner."

Scotch Craft.

A drunken man was once lodged in the cell of a Scotch country police station, when he made a tremendous noise by kicking the cell door with his heavy hobnailed boots.

The constable who had charge of the police station, going to the cell door, opened it a little and said:

"Man, ye micht pit off yer baits, and I'll gie them a bit rub, so that ye'll be respectable like when ye come up afore the bailie the morn."

The prisoner, flattered at the request, at once complied and saw his mistake only when the constable shut the door upon him, saying coolly:

"We can kick awa' noo, my man, 'till as ye like."

HE CAST IT OUT.

W. Allward's Prescription For Rheumatism Discovered by Accident.

A story about Mr. Walter S. Allward, the noted Toronto sculptor, told by his friends, is too good to be missed even though in publishing it one runs the risk of involving him in trouble with the Ontario Medical Council.

Some years ago Mr. Allward was working on a certain statue, and engaged as a model an Irishman who was a very fine specimen of physical manhood, but who suffered to some extent from rheumatism. His malady was his constant thought and theme of conversation, for, being exceptionally healthy and strong otherwise, he made much of an affliction which other men might have thought little about. One day Mr. Allward was taking a cast of the Irishman's neck, and in putting on the plaster either he or his assistant overlooked the customary preliminary of a coating of grease. They did not notice the omission of this precaution until they came to take the plaster off; but on attempting to remove it they found that it had hardened, apparently to stay until worn out, on the model's neck. Then ensued an unpleasant experience for the Irishman, as with jack-knives and other instruments Mr. Allward and his helper cut and hammered away at the cast, having particular difficulty in getting it free of the lower part of the man's hair. Finally the task was successfully performed, and the Irishman was able to laugh with the others at his rather unenviable experience, but he did not forget it.

One day, quite a long time after, Mr. Allward ran across him, after losing track of him entirely.

"Well, well," said the sculptor, "and how are you anyway? Do you remember the day we got that cast on your neck and had such a picnic getting it off?"

"Do Oi remember it?" said the Irishman; "Faith an' Oi do. 'Twas a terrible time, wasn't it? But Oi've been long wantin' to tell ye that 'twas the grand t'ing for me afther all; for b'dad, Oi've niver had the rheumatics since."—Saturday Night.

POINTS ABOUT NEWFOUNDLAND

Island Colony Has Some Wonderful Agricultural River Valleys.

Newfoundland is a big country, a third larger than Ireland and twenty-one times the size of Prince Edward Island, and when one considers the smallness of the population — only about 235,000, and nearly all fishermen — the returns from agriculture are considerable, says Edwin Smith, in the July Canadian Magazine. Over a million and a half dollars' worth of farm produce is raised annually on a fraction of cultivated land, which bears no appreciable relation whatever to its tributary soil uncultivated as yet, but which can and will be cultivated in the years to come. Instead of importing $600,000 worth of farm produce each year from Canada Newfoundland ought to aim at raising it at home, and the present depression will not be without some benefit if it helps the people to see more clearly the logic and the wisdom of the governor's motto "back to the land."

During an extended visit to the colony last summer, the writer saw enough to convince him that, although Newfoundland does not compare with England or Manitoba as an agricultural country, it has nevertheless large tracts of the very finest farming lands, in its many river valleys and by the margins of its innumerable lakes. In the Humber Valley there is an interval twelve miles long and six miles wide, with a deep fertile soil, capable of raising large crops of hay, vegetables and grain, and which is still waiting the hand of the husbandman. It is the Annapolis Valley over again, only in scenery richer and more luxuriant. And what is true of the Humber is true to a greater extent of the Codroy, Exploits, Terra Nova, Gander, and many smaller rivers.

A Family Problem.

A noted Toronto educationist tells this story on himself. He has been twice married and has a numerous family. One morning at breakfast one of the girls of the younger family, who had just begun the study of vulgar fractions, was unusually silent. She was engaged in trying to work out in actual life the axiom that two halves equal the whole, for presently she propounded this question:

"Mary is my half-sister. Now if mother was to die, and father married again, his children would be my half sisters and brothers, but would they be any relation to Mary?"

How the educationist would have answered this mathematical and sociological question will never be known, for the five-year-old son settled it in a way that left no room for doubt as to the fairness of his solution, or his belief in his father's determination to play the game fairly. He stopped absorbing oatmeal long enough to remark:

A Mushroom Town.

Three months ago the new townsite of Stirling, Alta., consisted of the railroad station and two elevators. Today there are signs of lengthy streets of broad western width, new buildings, stores, hotels and dwellings are fast filling in the landscape. Ten or fifteen stores and homes have already been completed. Most of the newcomers are from Winnipeg and from Northern Alberta, although there are a good number of Ontario people already located and several Toronto and London families who purchased property in Stirling are now on their way west. This fall will see in Stirling one of the busiest towns in the west. There will be three elevators then in working order.

NEWCOMB A CANADIAN.

Washington Professor, Who Died Recently, Was Born in Nova Scotia.

The death of the illustrious astronomer, Prof Simon Newcomb, at Washington, a few days ago, has attracted very little attention, most Canadians being apparently unaware that he was a fellow countryman of theirs. In truth he was one of the many Canadians who have drifted to the United States and shed lustre on their adopted country. He, it is said, had more degrees than any man in the world. Sixteen universities had honored him. Dr. James Bryce, a British Ambassador at Washington, comes next with thirteen degrees, and Dr. Elliot, president emeritus of Harvard, third with nine. His career was a most unusual one. He was born in Wallace, Nova Scotia, in 1835, and in 1853 drifted to the United States and became a school teacher in Maryland, working himself through college by this means and early manifesting a phenomenal genius for the study of astronomy.

But his boyhood career before he became a school teacher was romantic. He early ran away from home and became a tenpinner and the apprentice of a quack doctor wandering through the settlements of New Brunswick. Perhaps it was this experience that turned his mind toward the mystery of the universe which he made it his life work to explore. His most herculean task is that of having accurately determined the elements of the solar system, and it would require an expert to define all that he did for his beloved science.

During his lifetime he had been voted into membership in almost every scientific society on earth. Toronto University was among those which had bestowed an honorary degree upon him and others included Princeton, Yale, Harvard, Johns Hopkins, Glasgow, Heidelburg, Padua, Christiania, Leyden, Dublin, Edinburgh, not to mention Oxford and Cambridge. His services to mariners were enormous, as fitting in a man who sprang from a sea-faring community and this gained him the honor of becoming an Associate of the Institute of France, the only English-speaking native of this continent to be so honored except Benjamin Franklin. Last summer he was entertained by the Kaiser at one of his palaces. Thus did the boy who wandered through the wilds of the Maritime provinces as a quack's assistant end his life as the guest of princes.

Drinking More Beer.

The people of Canada are drinking less spirits than they used to do, but at the same time the consumption of beer per capita is increasing.

This is the purport of a statement prepared by the Inland Revenue Department as to the consumption of articles which pay excise duty. For instance, while the per capita consumption of spirits in 1906 was .851 it was only .806 in the last fiscal year On the other hand, the consumption of beer, which was 5.255 gallons per head in 1906, rose last year to 5.345 gallons. The consumption of wine also shows a decrease from .091 in 1909 to .085 las year.

Tobacco, however, continues to grow in popularity. In 1906 the consumption was 2.777 lbs. per head. Last year it was 2.910 lbs. But a further examination shows that the falling away was largely due to the necessity for economy which was enforced upon the people of Canada in 1907-8. The same was true of the consumption of beer. The year before last it rose to 5.612 gallons, as compared with 5.255 in 1906, and with 5.345 last year. The drinking of wine reached its highwater mark in 1907-8, when the figure was .096, as against .091 in 1906, and .075 in 1908-9.

The short fiscal year of 1906-7 holds the record for the consumption of tobacco. In that period it was 2.953 lbs. per head, and it fell to 2.886 when the depression struck the continent.

A New Railway Centre.

Kamloops, the thriving town at the junction of the Fraser and Thompson Rivers in British Columbia, is at present the scene of great railroad activity, and all the indications point to its becoming a divisional point on three railway systems—the Canadian Northern and the Grand Trunk Pacific, as well as the Canadian Pacific. For the engineers on the Canadian Northern and Grand Trunk Pacific are discovering what Sir Sandford Fleming discovered thirty years ago—namely, that the natural connection between the Edmonton district and Vancouver via the Yellowhead Pass is through the Thompson Valley. The chief engineering difficulties are not between Kamloops and the Yellowhead, but between the Yellowhead and Edmonton, where 200 miles of muskeg country are baffling the graders, and may hold back transcontinental construction in this direction for some years to come.

Needs of Labrador.

Enterprises for seamen along the lines of the Rowton Houses are quite as sorely needed elsewhere for a solution of the ever-recurring liquor problem, writes Dr. Grenfell from his Labrador mission. For this reason we set about raising the sum of $20,000 (mostly in the United States) to afford just such a provision as we think we should like made for ourselves were we in the places of our sailors and obliged to come in after a long voyage on the Labrador coast or on the Grand Banks—a place to play, a place to rest, to get your kit and yourself washed and mended. The plans for this building are finished, and the work just about to begin on it, and it is greatly hoped the prophylactic results may save the need for subsequent treatment either judicial or medical.

RESOLUTION PASSED.

Law Association Met Yesterday and Expressed Sympathy.

At a largely attended meeting of the Law Association held at the secretary's office at noon yesterday, the following resolution accompanied by feeling reference to the late John Moloney, was unanimously passed and directed to be forwarded to Mrs. Moloney.

The members of the Legal Profession of Peterborough deplore the death of Mr. John Moloney for many years the clerk of the county and surrogate courts, and local registrar of the High Court of Justice.

Mr. Moloney during his tenure of office was a careful, conscientious officer, ever aiming to act in conformity with established practice, always obliging and always scrupulously careful in the discharge of his official duties. In private life Mr. Moloney was the friend of everyone, honest, upright and in his own quiet way, charitable and generously responsive to the appeal of the needy. In his death we lose one who was a good citizen and a personal friend of all who had the privilege of knowing the kindness of his heart, the genuinness of his friendship and the simplicity of his life.

We condolewith his bereaved wife, and direct that a copy of this resolution be sent to her, and that it be inscribed in the minutes of the local law association.

DIED FROM NEGLECT.

John A. Brown of Montreal. Lost His Life in Missouri.

St. Louis, Sept. 21.—The death of John A. Brown of Montreal after a week's suffering in a lonely spot near East Alton was in part due to neglect on the part of Chicago & Alton Railway employes, according to a coroner's jury in its verdict today.

"The crew of a Chicago & Alton train saw the man tossing about on the ground, near the track last Friday," Coroner Streeper told a reporter. "They reported it to the station master at East Alton, but the village authorities were not notified, and did not hear of it until yesterday, when Marshall Hawkins heard of it by accident. He sent a man, who found Brown dead. He apparently had been dead 12 hours. With medical attention I do not doubt that his life could have been saved.

A circularspace 15 feet in diameter gave evidences of Brown's struggles before he died. The ground had been torn up and the weeds beaten down. One foot had been cut, and the man had tied a handkerchief about the wound. Streeuer thinks blood poisoning resulting from this injury, and exposure to the weather, caused death.

In theman's pockets was found a letter addressed to J. A. Brown, written by his brother, C. R. Brown on the stationery of the Brown Co. in Montreal. The letter reproached Brown for remaining away from his family, and told of the death of his mother and daughter. His wife and other children, the letter said, were still in Montreal, and begged the man to return to them.

Wedding Bells

A very pretty, though quiet wedding was solemnized yesterday after noon at four o'clock at the bride's home in Campbellford, when Miss Isabella Florence Stevenson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Stevenson, of Campbellford, became the bride of Mr. Evelyn J. Dormer, one of Peterborough's popular young men. The young couple were unattended, and the bride entered the drawing room on the arm of her father, while her sister, Miss Bertha played Mendelssohns' wedding march. The ceremony was performed by Rev. G. A. Brown of St. Andrew's church, Campbellford, and was witnessed by a number of the friends and relatives of the contracting parties. The bridewas very becomingly dressed in a gown of ameythist travers cloth and carried a beautiful boquet of bride's roses. After the ceremony the bridal party partook of a dainty wedding supper, following which the happy young couple left on the 7.30 train for their future home in Peterborough, to which place they carry the well wishes of a host of friends.

The bride was the resipient of many beautiful and useful gifts and a few months ago the young people of St. Andrew's church gave her a kitchen shower.

Upon arrival at their new home at 363 Dalhousie street, Mr. and Mrs Dormer were received by a number of friends and a reception was tendered by Mrs. F. Dormer of the grounds. After refreshments an hour or so was very pleasant spent by the guests present.

VARICOCELE CURED

Confined to His Home for Weeks.

"Heavy work, severe straining and evil habits in youth brought on a decided varicocele. When I worked hard the aching would become severe and I was often laid up for a week at a time. My family physician told me an operation was my only hope—but I dreaded it. I tried several specialists, but none found out all they wanted was my money. I concluded to look upon all doctors as little better than frauds. One day my boss asked me why I was off work so much and I told him my condition. He advised me to consult Drs. Kennedy & Kennedy, as he had taken treatment from them himself and knew they were square and skilled. I wrote them and got Their New Hudson Treatment. My progress was somewhat slow and during the first month's treatment I was somewhat discouraged. However, I continued the treatment for three months longer and was rewarded with a complete cure. I would only serve $12 a week in a machine shop before treatment, now I am earning $18 and never lose a day. I think all sufferers know of your valuable treatment."

Moorish Atrocities Make Officer Quit

Englishman who Commanded Sultan's Forces Tells Why He was Forced to Resign —Horrible Torture of Prisoners

London, Sept. 23.—Kaid Belten, the English officer who was appointed commander of the Moorish troops by Mulai Hafid sixteen months ago, and who recently resigned his post owing to the atrocities practiced by the Sultan on his prisoners, has just arrived in London.

Mulai Hafid was most unwilling to lose the services of an officer who has been brilliantly successful throughout the fighting that has taken place in Morocco during the last twelve months, and offered him in writing an extended contract and increased emoluments.

The kaid is a sun-tanned, soldierly looking man, young—he is barely turning 27—spare, square-shouldered with the keen, steady eye and resolute mouth and chin of the experienced fighting man. Young as he is, he has seen as much active service as generally falls to the lot of the middle-aged soldier; and his recent campaign against Bu Hamara, the roghi, or pretender, has left him in iron-hard condition.

"I was sorry for many reasons," he said, "to leave the Sultan's service. But I think no self-respecting Englishman could pretend to ignore the very kind of barbarity that England herself has always been foremost in putting down all the world over; and as my representations in the matter were ignored, I judged it best to resign as soon as I decently could.

A FREE HAED.

"I would not leave the Sultan's service until the rebellion was put down and he was firmly established on the throne again; but, having seen the campaign through from first to last, I cannot, I think, be charged with having neglected my duty or with going back on the terms of my contract. And I must say that the Sultanhas always been exceedingly good to me, both in personal matters and in respect of my commandership. He insisted that I should be given a free hand in all field operations, and was most cordial in his appreciation of my successes.

"On my way through Fez I received the Sultan's thanks in public. His majesty placed his hand on my head and said: "May God be ever with you."

"I should like to say at this point, said Kaid Belton, "that in all these expeditionsmy troops had behaved beautifully. There was no head-taking, no looting, no complaints of any kind from the villagers. I don't claim the credit for that, though. Kaid Sir Harry Maclean spent 30 years of hard work on the Moorish army, and that is the fruit of it.

"Then a strong expedition was organized against the roghi, and utterly routed his troops. Bu Hamara himself was taken, and, as you know is now in a cage in Fez.

"It was at this point, and in the skirmishes of this last expedition, that the tortures, head-takings, and mutilations began. I sent protests in vain, and when I tried to see the Sultan personally, he, knowing my object, declined to grant an audience. He sent instead, when I threatened to resign, his offer of an extended contract and larger pay.

"But this was not what I wanted. I simply could not stand the treatment of the prisoners. On the last official parade which I attended in Fez, 93 human heads were held up before the Sultan on the ends of rifles. Later in the same day 20 of the roghi's officers had their right hands cut off at the wrist.

"The hands were taken to Mulai Hafid on a tray, as a proof that his orders had been carried out.

SUPERB COURAGE

"By the way, as an instance of the superb courage of the Moor, let me tell you of one incident I saw at these mutilations. After the hand of a prisoner had been severed, the stump was thrust into a caldron of boiling oil—not, you understand, by way of further torture, but simply to stop the bleeding. Well, I never heard so much as a whimper from a single one of those 20 men. That in itself was hardihood enough: but that is not all.

"One prisoner, having stretched out his right arm and suffered the mutilation, walked over to the caldron of oil, which was placed on a fire. The man had a cigarette between his lips, and while the stump of his arm was plunged in the boiling liquid he calmly stooped and lighted his cigarette at the flames.

"Later on 300 more heads were brought in. I tried to see the Sultan again, but in vain. It was no good protesting to the wazirs (the ministers). They said, probably with perfect truth, that if ther dared to say a word against the Sultan's orders they would lose their own heads.

"Next day, therefore, I left Fez without seeing the Sultan."

POSTMORTEM ORDERED OVER BODY FOUND AT SPRINGVILLE

Inquest Resumed Last Night—Only One Witness was Examined—Dr. Greer and Dr. Eastwood will Perform the Autopsy

New interest has been aroused in the Springville mystery. Since the skeleton of a man was discovered in the woods a week ago last Sunday. Detective Miller of the attorney-general's department has been detailed on the case and he is investigating every clew.

It was decided to reopen the inquest and Coroner Dr. Gray called the jury together last evening at five o'clock in Mr. Wilson's store at Springville. Crown Attorney R. E. Wood and Detective Miller were present and the coroner ordered a post mortem examination to be held over the remains and appointed Dr. T. N. Greer to perform the examination. The jury, upon request, granted Dr. Greer an assistant and named Dr. Eastwood. The autopsy will be performed at once and a report prepared for the jury at next meeting of the inquest on Thursday night, Sept. 30 h.

Only one witness was examined Mr. Geo. Bilgood, who with his wife discovered the skeleton in Mr. Campbell's woods. He told of the discovery but he could give no information which would lead to the identity of the man.

MORE CLOTHES FOUND.

Since the discovery over a week ago a thorough search of the woods has been made. A suit of clothes was found in a post hole but there were no marks on it to show who the owner was.

A razor case, presumably the one belonging to the razor found in the man's hand, was also picked up in the vicinity as was also a hat. But on none of the articles was found anything by which the identity of the owner could be established.

SAW THE MAN

A well known farmer who lives near the Kendry Station stated last night that a year ago last spring there was a gang of young Englishmen in the neighborhood who caused considerable annoyance to the residents. The leader, or who appears to be the leader, is supposed to be dead man. This farmer saw him several times and twice tried to talk to him but the fellow would walk away and only answered in a gruff voice. He was not an Englishman but was either a North of Irelander or a Canadian. He was about 5ft. 2 or 4 inches tall, and the clothes he wore correspond with those found upon the skeleton. The shoes particularly were referred to as the man seen had on a pair of new shoes.

Shortly after the gang left Springville a number of young Englishmen got into trouble in Belleville for breaking into a tailor shop there. These are believed to be the same gang.

STILL A MYSTERY.

The affair is still a mystery in Springville. The natives cannot give any explanation of the affair whatever, except the one given above and that is not generally known. The murder theory is not as strong as it was. The suicide theory is given more credence. It is not, however that quite a number of the residents favor dropping the inquest and allowing the thing to die. The claim it will never be solved and that it is a big and needless expense to the county. The coroner, however, has a duty to perform. A proper record of the affair must be kept in case of future developments and anyway the Province foots half of the expense.

The inquest adjourned until next Thursday night at 7.30 in the North Monaghan Town Hall.

Eloquent Harvest Home Sermon at All Saints'

One of the most successful and one of the most enjoyable and impressive ceremonies held in All Saints' church was the Harvest Home last night. The church was crowded to the doors and many were turned away although the night was anything but a pleasant one. The decorations were beautiful and artistic. There were fruits, grains, vegetables and flowers of all kinds and in great abundance, and much time was spent by members of the congregation in arranging the harvest emblems.

Rev. H. R. Trumpour, rector, was assisted by Rev. Dr. Langfeldt of St. Luke's. The choir was a feature of the service. The singing was exceptionally good and the anthem was "Break forth Unto Joy."

Rev. Canon Dixon of Trinity church Toronto, was the special preacher and he delivered a most eloquent and impressive sermon. It was purely of a nature in keeping with the harvest season. He spoke of the very bountiful crops that were being harvested all over the Dominion. There has been a good yield of all farm, garden and orchard produce this year, and the Canadian people as a nation and as individuals should sing praises of great joy that a kind God has given the country. Dr. Dixon said it was comparatively easy to be thankful as there was very little poverty. But had the crops been poor it would not be so easy yet it was just as essential to be thankful, and cheerful, we must expect to accept the bitter with the sweet and to be cheerful under all circumstances. True thankfulness was shown by obedience and cheerfulness.

The Black Hand After a Woman

Mishawaka, Ind., Sept. 23.—What is considered by the police one of the boldest attempts at blackmail ever tried in this locality has come to light with the receipt of a letter by Mrs. M. V. Beigher, wife of the late M. V. Beiger, millionaire manufacturer, of this city, demanding $5,000, with threats of death if she refused the request. Saturday morning Mrs. Beiger received a typewritten letter, which read:

"We are hard up. Unless you deposit $5,000 in a box at the end of Edgewater drive and Park avenue by the little tree tonight you will be killed. Don't delay; we mean business. THE BLACK HAND."

The police were notified and a man in woman's garb was sent to the scene in the Beiger auto, depositing an empty box, while the police kept watch. In some manner the blackmailers secured the box, opened it, and then fled. The Beiger mansion is being guarded by detectives.

Won't Double Track but Build New Line

(Special to The Times.)

Montreal, Que., Sept. 23.—It was announced this morning at the head office of the C.P.R. that the management had practically decided not to duplicate the line beyond Peterborough.

It is the intention to build a new line from that point to Toronto along the lake shore, taking in all the principal towns along the lake.

There was some doubt as to whether the line would be duplicated as far as to Toronto, and this announcement practically settles the question.

An official of the Canadian Pacific stated that the work of double tracking their line from Montreal to Toronto was gradually being accomplished.

"We are within twenty-five miles of Smith's Falls now, and by next season we will have the double track thrown open for traffic that far."

Widening a right-of-way is not an easy matter, infinitely more difficult than building a new roadbed, for the reason that brides have to be altered, culverts enlarged, or taken out, cuts widened, rock excavations blasted out to accommodate another track without endangering the other during passage of trains, and last, but not least, the acquiring of additional land along their highway.

LEADING CHIEFS KILLED.

Spanish Victory in Melilla Was an Important One.

Madrid, Sept. 22.—The latest despatches from Melilla state that more than 400 Moors were killed, including some of the principal chiefs. The celebrated chief, Mizian, was captured. The fighting is continued.

A NEW TRIBE.

Explorer Brings Story from Prince Albert Land.

San Francisco, Cal., Sept. 22.—On board the whaler Jeannette, which has arrived in this port heavily laden with furs, blubber and tales of the frozen north, was W. J. Bower, an Aretic explorer, who reports the discovery of a new tribe of people never before seen by the eyes of a white man.

The new tribe of Eskimos, according to Bower, live on a point of Prince Albert Land. The newly-discovered natives, who call themselves Nunacadlies, are tan, and look like the North American Indians. The explorer was cordially welcomed by the strange tribesman, and he procured many rich furs from them.

On this trip Bower lost one eye through the bite of a spider.

The Airship Line is Now Assured

Berlin, Sept. 23.—If present expectations are fulfilled Germany will have dirigible balloons and aeroplanes carrying passengers between Berlin and the principal cities of the empire by May, 1910. The Air Navigation Company, which is to perform this service, is being actively supported, and at least twenty financial institutions and men of wealth have subscribed to the company's stock.

Among the shareholders are several well-known banks. Prince von Fuerstenberg, Count Tiele-Winkler, Prince von Donnersmarck, Isador Loewg and the General Electricity Company. Herr Loewe is one of the active organizers of the concern.

It is not expected to make money from the start, but the hope is entertained that it will be possible to cover expenses from the tourist and other travel. The company has arranged to buy Zeppelin, Parseval and Gross dirigible balloons, as well as some of the Wright aeroplanes, if these machines can be adapted to long cross-country trips.

Several of the men interested in this new company are shareholders in the company that acquired the Wright patents for Germany.

Heard Cries of Strangling Infant from Mrs. Maude Turner's Room

"There can be no doubt that this Turner woman has been trafficking in this abominable business for some time, and we are receiving information right along now as to cases where she has taken children for adoption, and no one is able to say where they are now."—Walter Duncan, Inspector of Detectives, Toronto.

Toronto, Sept. 23.—Mr. Andrew Goldie, who keeps the rooming house, 39 Wood street, told the News reporter this morning that the Authers' baby, he believed, had been murdered in that house on Tuesday evening of of last week. It was at this house Mrs. Maud Turner was staying when she was arrested on a charge of murdering the infant. Here is Mr. Goldie's story,

HEARD THE CHILD'S CRIES.

"My wife and myself were sitting here on that Tuesday evening, when we heard these strangle little cries," began Mr. Goldie. "We were both startled for they seemed to come from Mrs. Turner's room. 'Why,' said I, 'there's something wrong with Mrs. Miller's child;' you see, we only know her as Mrs. Miller then. My wife agreed with me that the sounds came from this woman's room, and I suggested that she should go and see what was the trouble, and if she could be of any assistance. She, however, was rather nervous about it, and decided. So I went across to the door, and my wife followed me.

WENT TO MRS. TURNER'S DOOR

"I asked if there was any trouble, and Mrs. Turner, in an agitated manner, replied that everything was all right. Then I went in and asked what the noise was, and if there was anything wrong with the baby, meaning the one she had brought with her and which the police took charge of the one that we knew as the King baby. She denied that there had been any noise in the room, and said the baby was as well as could be. We, of course, never suspected anything. We never saw her bring any child into the house except the King baby. But she was in and out all the time, and we kept no track of her. She might easily have brought the child in. And then she was such a fine woman, in our estimation, and so good to the child, that any abuse of the babe was farthest from our minds.

NERVOUS AND HYSTERICAL

"So my wife said she thought it must be cats out in the back yard. At times cats make noises which it would be hard to distinguish from the cry of a child. She suggested that we should go outside, and see if that was the cause. It was such a queer noise, you see, that we wanted to find out who or what made it. Mrs. Turner, however, refused to leave the room. She suggested, in her turn, that my wife and myself should go out, trying, I now believe, to get us out of the room. All this time Mrs. Turner was nervous, and now she became hysterical. I could see no reason for her emotion and the whole thing seemed very strange. Then, either my wife or myself, becoming alarmed at the drivelic condition of the woman, called for a glass of water. A young lady, who also boards here, came with it. But Mrs. Turner, who was lying on the couch, would not let her enter the room.

CURED CONSTIPATION QUICKLY

Tells of a Remedy That is Safe for Young and Old, for all Stomach and Bowel Troubles.

Writing from his home in Barcelona Mr. Frederick G. Mayer states: "I think no one ever sufferec as severely from constipation as I did for nearly six months. So many serious symptoms were developing as a consequence of this evil condition of the system, that I realized I must find a remedy. The strong pills of various kinds I tried seemed after their first effects were over to make me far worse and I did not know which way to turn for relief. I saw Dr. Hamilton's Pills advertised, and the first box used satisfied me I found a true remedy. Instead of griping by undue activity, Dr. Hamilton's Pills acted as naturally as if physic had not been taken. I never had to increase the dose, and, indeed, within a month I reduced it and when the system finally acted of its own accord as a result of Dr. Hamilton's Pills, I took a dose twice a week only, just to make sure the old conhition would not come back."

No other remedy cures constipation and biliousness so easily or safely as Dr. Hamilton's Pills: they are an ideal family for all diseases of the stomach, liver and bowels. Sold in 25c boxes, all dealers, or The Catarrhozone Co., Kingston, Ont.

St. Andrew's Choir were Entertained

A pleasant time was spent by the choir at the close of the regular practice last night in St. Andrew's lecture room. Mrs. C. S. McClelland the organist entertained the members to supper in the Guild Room, after which a number of well known songs and choruses were given, and a very happy time spent.

Miss Olive Howell, who assisted in the children's day services last Sunday so ably has accepted the invitation to permanently assist the choir and her duties will begin at once. Miss Howell's vocal abilities are well known to Peterborough people, and she will prove a valuable addition to St. Andrew's choir.

Miss Winslow of Toronto, whose singing in St. Andrew's has been appreciated during her two weeks' visit will sing next Sunday morning.

Soreness of the muscles, whether induced by violent exercise or injury is quickly relieved by the free application of Chamberlain's Liniment. This liniment is equally valuable for muscular rheumatism, and always affords quick relief.

HON. J. S. DUFF BUSY.

Minister Invited to Open Many Fall Fairs in Ontario.

Toronto, Sept. 22.—Hon. J. S. Duff, Minister of agricultdre, is kept busy at present presiding at the opening of Fall fairs in various parts of the province. He opened the fair at Collingwood today and that at Paris on Friday. He has been forced to decline an even dozen of invitations because Government business prevents his leaving Toronto.

CREW WERE SAVED.

David Ritchie Crossed Stormy Waters of Hudson Straits.

St. John's, Nfld., Sept. 19.—The pluck and hardihood of a young Scotch harpooner, David Ritchie, who crossed the stormy waters of Hudson Strait alone in an open boat to the Moravian settlements on Northern Labrador, was the means of bringing, as from the dead word of the safety of the eight members of the crew of the Scotch whaling ship Snowdrop, which was lost in Frobisher Strait, Sept. 18, 1908. Further particulars of the hardships of the crew reached here tonight, the first definite news of the Snowdrop's loss came Wednesday from Indian Harbor, which point Ritchie reached on Dr. Wilfrid T. Grenfell's missionary schooner Lorna Doone.

The Snowdrop was given up for lost, with all on board last December, when a bottle was picked up off the coast of Scotland saying that the ship was sinking.

With eight men, the Snowdrop had left Dundee, Scotland, early in June, 1908, for a season's trading among the Eskimos of Baffinland. She made a good trip and secured a cargo of bearskins, walrus hides, and one whale, and was returning, when she was wrecked in Frobisher Strait.

The crewmanaged to reach the coast of Baffinland in an open boat, short of provisions. The Aretic winter approaching, cutting off the last small chance of a stray whaler coming along to pick them up, desperate efforts were made to cross the Hudson strait to the northern coast of Labrador in an open boat, but each time gales or big icefields drove them back to the barren shores of Baffinland. The men were put on an allowance of one ship's biscuit a day, and were suffering bitterly when they reached an Eskimo settlement, where they spent the winter.

With an Eskimo guide he traveled on foot and by dog sled five hundred miles, until he reached a spot on Hudson Strait suitable for crossing. There he found a boat, and fought his way through drift ice and storm single-handed to the Labrador coast where he found a Moravian settlement.

Ritchie says that all the crew are well, except one, whose feet were badly frozen.

In buying a cough medicine, don't be afraid to get Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. There is no danger from it, and relief is sure to follow. Especially recommended for coughs, colds and whooping cough.

Peterborough Deputation in Toronto re Route of Canadian Northern

It is doubtful if Peterborough will succeed in inducing Messrs Mackenzie & Mann, the Canadian Northern Railway magnates, to bring the main line of their roadfromToronto to Montreal brough here. The present route as said out by them is along the lake front and the great objection to coming this way is the very rocky nature of the country east of Peterborough. It is possible however that at some future time this firm will run a grain and freight route from Midland through Peterborough to tap their main line east of here. This statement was made by one of the owners and it may be accepted as a fact.

A deputation from the City Council, the Board of Trade and the leading manufacturers waited upon Messrs. Mackenzie & Mann in the offices in Toronto yesterday morning at 11 o'clock, and talked with them for about an hour. The deputation was composed of Mayor Rush, Ald. Morrow, Ald. Dunoan, Ald. Gillespie, president of the Board of Trade, Messrs. W. H. Denham and Mr. Richardson of Chicago, representing the Quaker Oats Co. Mr. J. H. Larmonth Mr. Jas. Kendry, Mr. B. F. Ackerman, and Messrs. F. Linton and John Thompson of the Peterborough Lumber Co.

The spokesmen were;—

Mayor Rush who introduced the deputation and who pointed out the many advantages of Peterborough as a distributing point and the fact that cheap electrical power was going to make this city one of the largest manufacturing centers in Canada.

Messrs Richardson, Linton and Ackerman all spoke of the large amount of shipping done now by the factories here and pointed out the great field for the company to draw business from.

Messrs Mackenzie & Mann were greatly impressed with the arguments produced and with the city of Peterborough and they so expressed themselves.

They showed their visitors the map of the proposed route laid out and it runs along the lake front. They did not however say that the road would not come through Peterborough.

Judge's Decision a Blow to Alabama Prohibitionists

Mobile, Ala., Sept. 23.—In the Inferior Criminal Court yesterday Judge Alford declared the section of the Fuller prohibition law, which prevents transportation of liquors for delivery inquestive and discharged Louis Earley and Matthew Cody who were arrested here on Saturday last, with wagons on which were barrels of whiskey and beer.

Judge Alford held that that portion of the law was not a reasonable exercise of police powers. He based his decision on one recently rendered by Judge Sayre of the Supreme Court.

This is a severe blow to the prohibitionists. The provision of the Fuller law was considered the most powerful weapon they had.

The French Crowd Out the Scotch

Cornwall, Sept. 23.—The constant inroad into Glengarry of French-Canadians from Quebec Province, who are buying the farms of Highland Scots who have heard the call of the West and migrating, to Manitoba, Alberta and Saskatchewan, has aroused the stay-at-home Glengarry Highlanders, and as a result a meeting was held in Alexandria the other day, when it was decided to organize a Highland Society, for the purpose of keeping alive the Gaelic language, encouraging Gaelic literature, fostering the traditions and customs of the Highlanders, and encouraging Glengarrians of the present day to retain the homes of their grandfathers and great-grandfathers cut out of the virgin forest a century ago. Mr. John F. McGregor presided at the meeting, and after it had been emphatically stated that there was no desire to be antagonistic to any other race, a committee was appointed to draw up a constitution and by-laws, to be submitted at a gathering of the clans in Alexandria on October 12.

The County of Glengarry was originally settled by Scottish Highlanders, and the Gaelic was at one time the prevailing language.

The Doctor's Wife

Agrees with Him About the Food

A trained nurse says: "In the practice of my profession I have found so many points in favor of Grape-Nuts food that I unhesitatingly recommend it to all my patients.

"It is delicate and pleasing to the palate (an essential in food for the sick and can be adapted to all ages, being softened with milk or cream for babies or the aged when deficiency of teeth renders mastication impossible. For fever patients or those on liquid diet I find Grape-Nuts and albumen water very nourishing and refreshing.'

"This recipe is my own idea and is made as follows: Soak a teaspoonful of Grape-Nuts in a glass of water for an hour, strain and serve with the beaten white of an egg and a spoonful of fruit juice for flavouring. This affords a great deal of nourishment that even the weakest stomach can assimilate without any distress.

"My husband is a physician and he uses Grape-Nuts himself and orders it many times for his patients.

"Personally I regard a dish of Grape-Nuts with fresh or stewed fruit as the ideal breakfast for anyone—well or sick."

In any case of stomach trouble, nervous prostration or brain fag, a 10 day trial of Grape-Nuts will work wonders toward nourishing and rebuilding and in this way ending the trouble.

"There's a Reason," and trial proves.

Steamer Burned, Crew Escaped

Sault Ste. Marie, Sept. 23.—Capt. S. M. Murphy and the crew of fourteen of the steamer Monteagle arrived in the "Soo" this afternoon on the tug Russel Stevens, and full particulars of the burning of the boat was learned. The Monteagle had been put into shape last night by divers to proceed to Detour, where further work was to be done preparatory to taking her to Port Huron dry dock. The captain, earlier in the evening, had been bothered by parties attempting to take away wheat, which constituted the cargo. To prevent marauding he ordered strangers off the boat and fastened down the hatches. Spontaneous combustion, caused by wet wheat, is now supposed to have caused the disaster. Fire started in the coal bunker on the port side, which was full of slack coal. About midnight the watchman had been near there only a few minutes before the flames broke out, but did not notice anything out of the ordinary. All others of the crew were asleep. When the alarm was given the hose was coupled up ready for action, but is was impossible for the engineers to get into the engine room on account of the smoke and gas. So rapidly did the fire gain headway that the men had barely time to get into the yawl boat. They reached Pilot Island lighthouse, where they were taken care of until noon.

About noon today while the steamer Nye, upbound loaded, was passing a drill scow near Sailor's Encampment she struck an obstruction thought to be a boulder thrown into the channel by blasting. A hole was punctured in No. 1 tank on the port side, which is full of water. She came on to the "Soo," where divers will make repairs.

A Great Season at South Beach

Mr. Brooks of the South Beach Hotel on Clear Lake, one of the most beautiful summer resorts on the Kawartha chain, was in the city yesterday and reports having had a most successful season. His business flourished all season and although he made extensive additions and alterations to his premises last season he finds it necessary to make still further extensions for next season and he is now planning for that work.

Gas Distended His Stomach

Caused Palpitation and Prevented Sleep. When Health Was Gone, Cure Followed Use of Nerviline.

"My last wish will be," writes Harry P. Pollard, a well-known boot and shoe traveller of Hartford, "that everyone with a bad stomach may learn as I did, before it's too late, that Nerviline is the one remedy to cure. Why, I was in mighty bad shape, my digestion was all wrong, and every night I would waken with a start and find my heart jumping like a threshing machine. This was caused by gas on my heart. When I started to use

TESTIMONIAL No. 4890

Nerviline I got better mighty fast. It is certainly a grand remedy for the travelling man, keeps your stomach in order, cures cramps, prevents lumbago or rheumatism, breaks up chest colds and sore throat—in fact there hasn't been an ache or pain inside or outside for the past two years that I haven't cured with Nerviline. Do you wonder I recommend it?"

For general household use Nerviline has no equal; it will cure the aches and ailments of the entire family—refuse anything but Nerviline, 25 cts. per bottle, five for $1.00, all dealers or The Catarrhozone Co., Kingston, Ont. 6

COST OF THE POLE

What Polar discovery has cost of suffering and sorrow is a phase of the great controversy which is pushed too much out of sight by the wordy war of partisans at this or that explorer. It is brought vividly before readers today by the account given by Prof. Donald B. McMillan of Worcester, Mass., at his work in the far north.

Much as Prof. McMillan may regret that invalidism brought on by his hardships kept him from taking part in the last "dash to the Pole," humanity is the gainer. In his experience there is nothing to controvert or conceal or withhold until some rival has shot his bolt. He has a scholar's gift of observation and description, and he followed in the traces of Lockwood, Nares and Amundsen, of Peary himself and of the ill-fated Hall, who died too soon to see the Polaris wrecked, his seamen scattered and starving.

Most pathetic are the mementos Prof. McMillan has brought from the camp of the Greely party at Fort Conger. The cold of the north guards and preserves such treasures — the food that might have saved seventeen men later, could their strength have been equal to carrying it; the little ocarina that some one played during the Arctic night; the book that Harry Kislingbury gave his doomed father; Sergt. Rice's photographs, and other effects of the seventeen men whose bones mark the starvation march of the Greely party.

Not of the past alone are such sad tales told. Prof. McMillan's story of the death of Ross Marvin is the most complete that has yet been printed. The Pole will still demand its toll of such men's lives. The spirit of adventure is quickened, not quenched by tales of privation, hardships and death. Along that hard road has progress come, and knowledge widened of the earth over which man asserts each year a dominion more complete.

CANADA'S GROWTH

The growth of the population of the Dominion is the subject of a report recently issued by the immigration department at Ottawa.

In the calendar year, 1897, the total immigration to Canada amounted to but 21,716 people. Then began Mr. Sifton's great propaganda. The people of the United States, Great Britain and continental countries have gradually come to something like a full realization of Canada's possibilities. The result has been one of the greatest movements of population known in modern times. The only event comparable to it in a century was the settlement of the Western States. Immigration into Canada reached its highest point in the fiscal year 1907-8. The record figure of 262,460 in that year dropped to 146,998 in the year following. The Government in view of the world wide commercial depression rather discouraged immigration. The current fiscal year, however, promises to make a satisfactory showing, particularly in the movement from the United States.

The number of immigrants from the United Kingdom in 1908-9 was 52,901; in the preceding year the number was 120,182. From the European continent last year there came 34,175 immigrants. Thirty per cent. of the arrivals from continental countries during the period since 1897 made entries for homestead, while many others engaged with farmers in domestic service. The number of homestead entries last year totalled 39,881.

The figures of immigration from the United States are particularly striking. In 1897 the total amounted to but 4,212; last year the number was 59,832. Forty-three per cent. of the immigrants from the United States since 1897 have made homestead entries. The value of the cash and settlers' effects brought in by these new comers is very great that for the year 1907-8 alone (the last year for which statistics are available), being placed at $52,000,000.

The number of English and Welsh immigrants received in the last two years was 128,894; of Scotch, 31,033, and of Irish, 10,150. That the arrangement made by Hon. Mr. Lemieux with the Government at Tokio is working satisfactorily is demonstrated by the fact that in the year just closed only 495 Japanese immigrants entered the country, as compared with 7,701 in 1907-8.

No less than 19,897 immigrants have been held for inspection and 3,803 rejected since 1902-3, when the medical act went into force. In April of last year the inspection of immigrants seeking admission to Canada from the United States was begun, and since then 4,580 have been barred from entering. Since 1902 3,116 immigrants have been returned to the countries whence they came having been found to be undesirable or likely to become a charge upon the public. Of these deportations 1,748 were made last year.

HOW MUCH OF THIS CAPITAL IS WATER?

A large number of Canadian cement companies have been formed into a combination to be known as The Canada Cement Company. The total capitalization of this consolidation is placed at $29,000,000—$13,500,000 in common stock, $10,500,000 in preferred stock, $5,000,000 in bonds.

If we had free trade in cement the question as to how much of this capitalization is water would be one affecting merely those behind the merger and prospective purchasers of the stock or bonds, says the Farmers' Sun. But we have not free trade in cement. There is a duty of 12 1-2 c. per 100 lbs. on that imported, and a tax of 20 per cent. on the value of the bags in which it is brought in. At the rate at which cement has lately been selling in the Canadian market this is equivalent to a protection of nearly 50 per cent. against foreign competition. Under these circumstances users of the article are clearly entitled to know whether the tariff is to be made use of to make possible the payment of dividends on capitalization that is in large part water. We know, from facts brought out during an official enquiry into a strike in Quebec cotton mills that this is what is being done in the case of cotton. This enquiry showed that $5,000,000 of common stock issued by the cotton combine cost the original purchasers only ten cents on the dollar, and that these holders have been paid five per cent. dividends on the same, or equal to 50 per cent. on the actual purchase price. The Government which has given a charter to the cement combine should let us know what is being paid for the new issue of cement stock to the end that we may learn if users of the product of this new combine are to be plundered under the cover of the protection accorded cotton manufacturers. The demand for information becomes all the more imperative in view of the partial disclosure made in the prospectus issued by the combine. We are told what some of the stock is to be sold for, but not what the rest is held at. Most important of all, we are without information as to what is represented by the stock now being offered the general public.

A TWELVE-MILE "PRO." RACE

Toronto, Sept. 22.—"What's Tom Longboat doing these days?"

"Loafing and boozing. He's a no account."

That is the question and answer and comment all over the town these days.

But it is not true!

Longboat is over the loafing and boozing. He is getting the long green in little wads of $100 and $200. He and Sol Mintz of Hamilton, his manager, have already taken part in a dozen exhibition runs so far, and his route book is so well filled that Sol hesitates about saying yes to a U. S. wire to this effect.

"A thousand guaranteed for Longboat to start in a 26-mile race here."

Mintz says that to send the Indian to this big race in shape would necessitate the cancellation of four or five exhibition races, and he figures that four or five exhibitions are better to the Indian than a little more money and a tough race.

The professional racing game opens up again here on Oct. 2 at Scarboro Beach, when Tom Flanagan will bring Al. Herlberg's new wonder, Mueller of New York, over for an open 12-mile race. Percy C. Sellen, Fred Meadows and Frank Nebrick of Buffalo, are all sure starters against Mueller, and Flanagan says that Shrubb, Longboat, or any one else that likes can come in. There will be two prizes, 40 per cent. and 20 per cent. of the gross receipts.

A Thrilling Case of Somnambulism

A number of years ago the community of Liverpool, England, was much interested in a case of somnambulism, which occurred on a vessel bound to that place from India. It was reported, on the arrival of the vessel, and subsequently a communication on the subject was made to one of the local papers. Its thrilling and peculiar character renders it well worthy of a place in print.

As passengers on board of this vessel were Mr. Mills, wife and child. Mr. Mills had for a long time occupied a lucrative mercantile position in Calcutta, and was now returning to his native land to remain. The child was a bright boy of 12 years. They made a merry party on board the ship, and were popular with passengers, officers and crew. John Mills, the boy, was an especial favorite, and had the liberty of every part of the vessel.

One day the weather-beaten captain and Mr. Mills were on deck, looking at the boy as he ran about.

"A noble lad," said the captain. "Mr. Mills, you ought to be a proud father."

"Thank you, captain," replied Mr. Mills with tears of honest pride and joy standing in his eyes. "I am proud, I can assure you. But do you know that at times I feel great distress about him."

"Distress!" repeated the captain. "Why, what about, I should like to know? He is in the best of health—he is intelligent—his prospects in life are good. What more do you want?"

"I will tell you the trouble," said Mr. Mills, with a serious face. "Ever since John was five years of age he has been a somnambulist. His mother and myself are in constant apprehension that in some of these spells harm may come to him."

The kind-hearted captain at once set to work to quiet the fears of the father.

"He'll outgrow it—I am sure he will," he said. "I don't think anything will happen. But," he added as he looked again upon the boy as he bounded by: "but I'd watch him, especially on board ship, for he is too noble a lad to be exposed to danger."

Days passed on. The weather was favorable and every one on board was consequently in good spirits. The deck and cabin were scenes of constant social interchanges and amusement. In fact, the good old captain declared over and over again that in all his experience at sea he had never had a more agreeable company, or more satisfactory weather.

Matters were in this happy condition one afternoon when there came a sudden exclamation from Mrs. Mills: "Where's John?"

"John—John, where are you?" shouted Mr. Mills, springing to his feet and rushing through the main cabin.

"He's safe on deck, undoubtedly," said one.

"He's with the captain," suggested another.

By this time Mr. Mills was on deck, where he soon confronted the captain.

"Great Heaven, captain, where's John?" exclaimed the father.

"I do not know," replied the captain. "He is not on deck."

The faces of both men were blanched. In an instant the ship was in an uproar. No one had seen the boy. With frantic cries the father and mother searched in every possible place in the cabin, and the crew searched the decks. A dreadful apprehension was settling upon all. This was that the boy had fallen overboard.

At this particular time the captain looked aloft. Not with any idea of seeing the boy, but as a matter of habit and duty. All the sails were set, and it was not easy to see all parts of the rigging. To the captain's surprise and joy he discovered John perched on one of the upper crosstrees.

"Look aloft! look aloft!" he cried. "There's the lad on the crosstree."

The passengers and crew at once crowded near him.

"My boy is asleep! oh, Heaven!" was the wailing exclamation of the father.

Mrs. Mills fell to the deck unconscious at the terrible danger of her son. All were aghast with horror.

The ship plowed on. Every sail was full of the fair and steady wind, and not a sound was now heard except the noise of the ropes in the blocks and the falling of the waves from the bow. There sat the boy on the crosstree, with one arm around the mast. He was evidently asleep, and at any instant, by suddenly awaking, might fall to the deck or into the sea.

No one uttered a word—not an order was given—but in an instant the captain himself was seen ascending the rigging. He went up nimbly and quickly. Every eye was bent upon him, and then upon the boy. Hearts almost ceased to beat; and tears ran down the cheeks of passengers and sailors.

Up and up went the captain. At last he reached the place where the boy was seated. Cautiously he raised his hands, and in another instant they held the boy in their firm grasp. With a start he awoke, and fell back into the arms of his preserver.

In a few moments more he was safe in the arms of his weeping and yet overjoyed father. The passengers and sailors rent the air with cheers for the captain and boy. The good ship seemed to dash forward with new speed and reached port with all on board safe and well.

ADVERTISE IN THE TIMES.

IF SICK--WHY PAY

Unless Health First Returns.

Here is what should and can be done!

Now you would not willingly pay for food that was worthless—would you?

Then why pay for medicine until that medicine first proves to you it is actually worth it?

Positively knowing what Dr. Shoop's Restorative can do for the sick, I say to all "don't pay unless health first returns." And I back my Restoratives with a signed and sealed 30 day "No pay" contract.

I positively pledge to the sick everywhere that "Dr. Shoop's Restorative is absolutely free if it fails". Let others do the same—or pass up my good name by.

If you need more strength, more vitality, more vigor or more VIM, use my Restorative a few days and note the immediate improvement.

When the Stomach, Heart, or Kidneys are weak, then use Dr. Shoop's Restorative. I do not dose the Stomach, nor stimulate the Heart or Kidneys, for that is wrong. Nervenge I cast away that old-fashioned idea in medicine. The blacks below will tell you how I am succeeding.

These books are full of a tiny hidden "inside nerve," no larger than a spider thread. They tell how that nerve, until it fails, actually gives to the Heart its power, its tone, its never-ending action or impulse.

These books will open up new and helpful ideas in the sick who are not well. They tell how the Stomach, and kidneys each have their "inside" or power nerves. They tell how the Restorative was especially made to reach and revitalize these weak or failing inside nerves. All of these facts tell why I am able to say, "It is free if it fails".

This is why I say "take no chance on a medicine whose maker dare not back it just as I do by this remarkable offer".

So write me today for the order.

I have appointed agents and responsible druggists in nearly every community to whom you may apply for it.

But write me first for the order.

All druggists sell Dr. Shoop's Restorative, and all have authority to give the 30 day test offer. If you have a fine picture and item envelope, inclose it and I will send you a free sample package and booklet. Tell me also which book you need.

A postal will do.

Besides, you are free to consult me on your case—your physician, My advice and the book below are yours—and without cost.

Perhaps a word or two from me will clear up your whole case. I have helped thousands since I formulated my private prescription or formula. Surely more than my best effort is surely worth your simple request. So write now while you have it fresh in mind, for tomorrow never comes. Dr. Shoop, Box 12, Racine, Wis.

GRACEFUL HANDS.

Ways In Which a Woman Can Make Them Show to Advantage.

With judicious care and management of the fingers, etc., hands that are not pretty may sometimes be made to appear so, for this effect is usually given by long and tapering fingers and general grace. Every woman knows it, though few are born with it.

Close observation of the proper way to use the hands will show that the most grace is gained by bending from the knuckles instead of the finger joints when necessary to use the fingers. This is easily illustrated by picking up a book. A person who has a broad, square hand and short fingers naturally takes the volume between the tips, bending at the middle joint to make the contact. If the bend comes from the knuckles it necessitates taking the object between the cushions of the finger ends instead of the tips, so a straight finger line, giving an effect of length, is secured.

You hear much of "daintily taking an object with the finger tips." In point of fact it is not with the tips, but with the ends that any article should be lifted and by the ends is meant that soft section between the top joint and the tip. It is an odd fact that long fingered persons, who could afford to bend their fingers, do not, invariably using the ends. It is this attitude which emphasizes the natural grace of the hands.

Affectations with the fingers are absurd and at no time can be called lovely. Curving the little one sometimes verges on the grotesque when it is done to extremes. A woman should always try to use her hands easily and without stiffness. Beyond that she must let the movement be spontaneous.

When the hands are being loosely held in the lap the fingers take on a pose of their own which is not always pretty. They curve as the muscles relax, but the bend is too apt to come from the middle joint instead of from the knuckles, the two forefingers being left straight and the others held against the palms. A hand in repose in this fashion appears attractive.

It is not well to grasp an ordinary object with all four fingers and thumb, for again awkwardness will result. Unless the article to be raised is really heavy it should be taken by the thumb and fore and middle fingers. The last two are allowed to bend under slightly, as they will of their own accord. This gives a far narrower effect and is much more attractive.

SUFFRAGE NOTES.

Oklahoma women are working to secure the submission of a suffrage amendment by initiative petition.

A bill to make women eligible as school directors has been defeated in the Missouri senate by a vote of 15 to 9.

Six towns and cities of Colorado have elected women as treasurers in the last few weeks. Two women have been elected as town clerks.

The Progressive Woman Suffrage union of Brooklyn offers a prize of $100 for the best design for a suffrage banner. The competition will close on June 15.

Among the constant attendants at the international congress of women suffragists in London were the Duchess of Marlborough and her mother, Mrs. O. H. P. Belmont of New York.

A bill has been introduced in the Austrian parliament to abolish the old blue law which forbids women to attend political meetings; also a bill to grant them the parliamentary vote.

Sow Lucky Coins in Hats.

Strange as the incoming fashions in millinery may seem, a fad has appeared with them that is certainly much stranger if less apparent. This is the practice of having coins of small value, such as cents, nickels and dimes, sewed into the lining of hats. Although such an idea at first appears more the inspiration of a lunatic than of a sane person, even if she be of the fashionable world, it is known that in many of the larger hat establishments customer after customer after carefully selecting one, two or three specimens of the "peach basket" or "coal scuttle" shapes will draw the saleswoman aside and whisper, "Please have this sewed into the lining of my hat." At the same time she will hand over a piece of money of little intrinsic worth. Most of the women, one milliner remarked the other day, are loathe to give their reasons for such curious requests, but the fad is spreading wonderfully. How, why or when it started is unfathomable, although it has been observed only since the introduction of the spring styles. "The only explanation that seems possible," said the head of another big millinery shop, "is that the superstitious belief in lucky coins has freakishly spread among women to such an extent they even insist on having coins concealed in their headgear."

Keeping the Hall Unfluttered.

The mother of a family of growing children spent many unhappy moments because those children threw their playthings, garden tools, baseballs and bats, tennis rackets and other belongings in the first spot in the hall they could find.

Talking did no good; neither did punishments. Finally a friend suggested making a box of the wooden benches that stood on each side of the front porch. This proved such a convenient storing place, easy to put away and equally easy to find again, that the hall and downstairs rooms noticeably improved in neatness.

Another mother had boxes built into the steps of a side porch, and here the children kept all their outdoor belongings.

SACHET PERFUMES.

Toilet Waters Are Good Tonics For Oily or Flabby Skins.

A delightfully fragrant mixture to be placed in sachets may be prepared as follows: Two ounces of lavender flowers, one-half ounce of finely powdered orris, one ounce of bruised rosemary leaves, ten grains of musk and ten drops of attar of rose.

Violet sachet powder is largely composed of powdered orris or Florentine iris, and this alone put among the linen in the bureau drawers will impart a faint very sweet odor of violets.

Many people mix different sachet powders together and thus produce exquisite odors. For instance, heliotrope and white rose is a popular combination; violet and rose, rose and musk, jockey club and jasmine and so on through the list. Often one comes in contact with a dainty odor that seems difficult to discern. No doubt the user has her own special, yet simply mixed, sachet powder.

All first class druggists keep a good assortment of sachet powders which are not expensive, and one can also be assisted by the suggestions of the druggist, who learns of many new combinations from his customers.

The true value of toilet waters is that they are a good tonic for oily or flabby skin and if continually used will reduce large pores. They are not, as is often thought, drying to the skin unless they should be improperly blended; but, on the contrary, they cleanse, tone and make the skin firm wherever there is a tendency to become stringy. Once or twice a day is all that is necessary to use these waters. Florida water, with which so many people love to bathe the forehead, is also simply made and inexpensive. Mix one dram each of oil of neroli and tincture of tumeric and two drams each of oil of lemon, oil of bergamot and oil of lavender, add a quarter of an ounce of oil of balm and ten drops of attar of roses; then pour over this mixture one quart of rectified spirits. Shake well for about five minutes and allow to stand for about a month before using.

Extract of violets may be made by blending six ounces of deodorised alcohol, one-half ounce of ground orris root and six drops of oil of violets. After mixing well, cork tightly and allow the mixture to stand several weeks. It keeps indefinitely and improves with age. If necessary, it may be filtered through blotting paper before using.

At Cobweb Corner.

Madam Rickrack built her house;
Then, sitting down within it,
She saw Miss Bussy walking by
And said, "Pray, stop a minute!"

but, oh, dear me, a silken snare
Was stretched before the door,
And Bussy caught her pretty feet
And fell across the floor!

Madam Rickrack wept aloud.
But Bussy stopped her ears
And said, "A helping hand is worth
Much more than all these tears."

Just then a cyclone rushed along—
'Twas Medes, her brushes plying.
It laid the Rickrack mansion low
And sent Miss Bussy flying.

RAIN SPOILS PAGEANT

FIRST DAY OF CHURCH SPECTACLE PROVES RIDICULOUS.

Bad Weather Mars Effect of Great Historic Object Lesson in London—Mud Bedraggled Saints and Monks Make Scene of Reverence Almost Comical—Retrospect of Church is Given by Huge Company.

After many months of hard work, of enduring enthusiasm, and of those little troubles which are inevitable in a great assembly of amateur actors, the English Church Pageant a few days ago gave its opening performance.

Alas! the elements were not propitious. The day was the worst we have had this summer—cold, rainy, utterly dismal. It was most unfortunate, because the pageant depended so much on the weather, not only for the comfort of actors and audience, but for its propriety.

The colors wanted the sun to bring out their richness and harmonies. All the colors on the field were dimmed and drabbled by the dank, dull atmosphere which clung about the actors. Instead of the joyousness and gaiety of those living pictures of medieval crowds on the green field, with its encompassing trees in heavy foliage, there were rather somber effects of poor people in unfamiliar garments, bedraggled in the heavy rain and moving through the mist. This somber tone was deepened as the afternoon wore on and the light failed.

Then, too, the weather robbed the pageant of some of its revenue and dignity. It made some of the scenes fall from the sublime very near to the ridiculous, because the sympathy of one's imagination was shocked a little by the sight of saints and monks paddling about the soddened field, and getting into position at the wings of the open-air stage under the shelter of umbrellas. Roars of laughter greeted an episode in which British virgins were chased by savage Saxons with long spears, when, on the slippery, slushy ground, "Jill fell down, and Jack came tumbling after."

The great choir, gowned and hooded in medieval garb, were bound to abandon the dignity of history, and to commit wilful anachronisms in the full sight of the audience, and they sang the old litanies and dirges under a very forest of umbrellas.

In many ways the pageant itself, in spite of the bad weather, which tried hard to spoil it, was full of interest and supremely successful. The huge stand, with accommodation for many thousands of people, was packed to the last seat, and the enthusiasm of the audience, among whom were hundreds of clergy, was not to be damped. And the pageant pictures in the field rewarded them. Undoubtedly there was an appeal to the imagination, to the eye, and to one's sense of reverence, in this pictorial drama representing by living figures in vivid scenes the history of the old Church of England. The very field on which this drama was played is historic ground. The moat of Lambeth Palace was dug out many centuries ago, and on the field which it surrounds many great scenes, many most vital episodes in the history of our church and country, have been really enacted by men strong in spirit, whose flesh has long since gone to dust.

Thinking of that and of old things half forgotten, it seemed to one that the people on the pageant ground yesterday, vague as they were in the dank mist, were the ghosts of those who once played their parts and went their way to death and bequeathed their ideals and purposes to those who followed on this soil of England.

The prelude, with St. George in the silver-shining armor, and with the early British saints, Alban and Ninian, David and Patrick, stirred in one's memories of the dream-stories of the dawn of Christian faith in Britain—legends made true only by tradition and by a few old stories here and there.

The first scene of "The Publication in Britain of the Edict of Constantine, 313," is not recorded in history, but at least it was a reminder of the Roman occupation of Britain and of the little bodies of Christians, scattered outposts of the Faith, who lived between the rule of the Roman gods and of the Druid nature-worship, and to whom a liberal emperor granted freedom of religion as to all citizens of the empire. That was all a ghost-story yesterday, but one which took one's imagination back to the dim half-light of the early world.

And so as the scenes followed—the visit of St Germain of Auxerre to the British Christians who had fallen into heresy, the founding of Iona by St. Columba the coming of St. Augustine to the Saxons, who had driven the British to the West and destroyed the Christian outposts, the conversion of those Saxon people who were truly the first of the English, and the strong and real foundation of the Church in England—one had before one on the field a drama, full of color, in which one saw, as on an illuminated scroll of history, the foundation of the faith of our fathers.

One was shown the influence of monasticism in England before and after the Conquest, and the martyrdom of Becket reminded one of the long struggle between the Church and State—marked not once or twice only by brutal injustice and bloody tragedies, inevitable, perhaps, in a conflict between the spiritual and the temporal powers, each seeking to break down the other's prerogatives, each claiming perhaps more than was due.

The episode of Magna Charta was to prove that the old Church was sometimes, if not always, on the side of liberty. The later episode of the suppression of the monasteries and the establishment of the Reformed Faith proved one thing to one man and one thing to another, according to his religious convictions and his knowledge of history.

STUDYING ESQUIMAUX.

Government Will Make Further Investigations In North.

The Canadian Geological Survey, under the late Dr. G. M. Dawson, gathered from time to time a large amount of interesting and valuable information regarding the native races. Since the death of Dr. Dawson this portion of the work of the department has been allowed to languish, but this year a fresh start was made in a direction which cannot but prove to be of great historical and ethnological interest, as well as being of particular value in allowing the people of Canada to become better acquainted with their fellow citizens who occupy the vast frozen territory which forms our northern boundary.

The present subject of ethnological research by the department is the Esquimaux race; and it is deemed especially desirable that this work should be resumed amongst them just now, because their habits are rapidly changing and becoming more difficult for scientific study, as the white man penetrates the Far North.

The Esquimaux is perhaps by his natural gifts the most admirable of the native races of Canada. There are no more intelligent and kindly people than the Esquimaux of Northern Canada, and none that so readily respond to courtesy and good will; and yet they are probably the most misunderstood and misrepresented of all native races. The expedition which was fitted out last year for the study of the Esquimaux, consists of Mr. V. Stefansson and Dr. R. M. Anderson. The undertaking is by no means a new task to Mr. Stefansson, as it is the second of a series of journeys he has planned to carry out within the next fifteen years, during which period he hopes to visit and study every Esquimaux settlement from East Cape, Siberia, to the east coast of Greenland and the shores of of Labrador.

The present journey is planned to cover two years, one of which Mr. Stefansson expects to spend between Cape Brown and Bathurst Inlet, Canada, the other on the Colville river, Alaska. He believes that near the mouth of the Coppermine river there is a group of Esquimaux who have never seen a white man; these he desires to study while as yet they are uncontaminated by white influence, and before "civilized" ways change their system of living.

Dynamited by Dog.

The news of a very remarkable accident at a mining camp at Hanging Stone Lake, near Gowganda, by which one man was killed and two injured, was brought to Montreal recently by Frederick Dunn, a resident of St. Johns, Quebec, who accompanied from Northern Ontario the remains of Andrew Dunn, the principal victim, for interment at his old home just outside that city.

Andrew Dunn and companions were dynamiting a vein. The fuse was ignited and the men ran, followed by Dunn's collie dog, which picked up the dynamite stick in his teeth. The explosion came just as the dog reached the cabin and dropped the explosive.

Dunn was killed almost instantly, his skull being fractured in two places, and one of his arms and two ribs being broken. One of the other men, Sims, was stunned and badly cut about the neck, while the other miner, Hackett, escaped with a few bruises. The dog, which was the cause of the disaster, bounded away and escaped injury.

A Man of Weight.

People in many Ontario towns know Mr. Holland, of Whitby, who has done excellent work as grand organizer of the Sons of Temperance. Mr. Holland is a big man—not only big in achievement, but big in person. He related on one of his tours how he had gone into a certain place to be weighed, but as the scales went up to only two hundred and fifty pounds, he could not succeed.

One time he went to the little village of Port Robinson, where the lodge was presided over by a demure but droll Worthy Patriarch. After the customary preliminaries Mr. Holland was admitted, and as he made his ponderous way to the platform the halting Worthy Patriarch remarked dryly:

"Well! they told me Holland was coming, but I think it's all of Holland and part of Belgium."

She Didn't Go Back.

Miss Agnes Laut, whose address on "yellow journals" and how they may be got rid of, created such a stir at the International Congress of Women, has ever been noted as one with views of her own and with a courage of her convictions. In Winnipeg she is remembered as a delicate girl with definite opinions and an independent spirit that entirely belied her looks.

When Miss Laut left Winnipeg to try her fate in the big world of journalism and literature, there were not wanting those who predicted that she would soon be back at her desk in The Free Press office. Her first work was the reporting of the meetings of the Joint High Commission in Quebec, and in this she succeeded in a way that ranked her work with that of the ablest Ottawa and Washington correspondents. From that time her rise has been steady, and though she has several times visited Winnipeg, she has evinced no tendency to occupy her old desk.

The Moose.

The moose is the largest animal now existing of the deer family, standing often as high as six feet, and sometime weighing 1,200 pounds; but notwithstanding its great size, it is very fleet of foot. When brought to bay, a blow with its fore foot or horns is a very serious matter for the huntsman. Often when pursued by man they have their intelligence to thank for their escape, for sometimes, if closely followed, they double in their tracks and stand motionless in some thicket until the hunter has slipped by, when they quickly glide away. At other times they make such a commotion as to [illegible] an experienced hunt[illegible] escape.

Cheap Living.

She—I'm living on brown bread and water to improve my complexion. He—How long can you keep it up? She—Oh indefinitely, I guess. He—Then let's get married.

Result of Rashness.

"Out of a job, are you?" asked the first girl. "Boss catch you flirting?"

"No; I caught the boss. Say, what sort of a wedding dress do you think is real swell?"

Truly this world can go on without us, if we would but think so.—Longfellow.

Cosgrave's Beer

Wordsof praise have ever prevailed in advertising "copy." That a producer should wax enthusiastic over his own wares is but human. But it's the praise of the consumer that counts—and it is to a discriminating and critical public that "Cosgrave's" refers you.

It is safe to say that no product, of any kind, enjoys a more enviable reputation than does this same Cosgrave Beer of Toronto in markets where it is offered.

Its self-evidenthonesty of purpose, purity, brilliancy, body, and every other attribute that goes to make a perfect beer are ever in evidence.

VISCOUNT KITCHENER

A Brief Biography of Soldier Who May Visit Canada.

General Horatio Herbert, first Viscount Kitchener of Khartoum—who has just completed the great work he undertook in 1902 of reorganising the British Indian Army—was born on Midsummer Day at Ballylongford, in the County Kerry.

During his exceptionally brilliant military career the retiring Indian commander has asserted himself with characteristic confidence and unbending will, and Lord Kitchener must be accounted one of the most strenuous soldiers that the British Empire has ever possessed.

Coming of a military family, Lord Kitchener passed thirty-eight years ago from Woolwich into the Royal Engineers. Since then his career has been one of scintillating brilliance for "K. of K."—as he is now often called "for short"—has been to the fore in many expeditions and campaigns, and has "built himself an everlasting name" for thoroughness in the profession of arms.

A veritable "glutton for work," he assisted in the Palestine survey in 1874-78 and that of Cyprus of 1878-82.

Then he was sent to Egypt, and entrusted with the command of the Khedive's cavalry and the remodelling of the native army. Having effected this to his own exacting desiring, he, as Sirdar, conducted a vigorous opposition to the forces of the Khalifa. He found it necessary to build a railway to Omdurman before he finally broke the power of the prophet, annihilating the Khalifa's army in 1898.

By this time he had reached the rank of major-general and been made a K.C.B., and he came home covered with Egyptian honors, to receive the thanks of the British Parliament, a peerage, and a grant of £30,000.

In the year following, when matters seemed to be going wrong with our forces engaged against the Boers in South Africa, Lord Kitchener was sent out as Chief of Staff to Lord Roberts. Here, again, he distinguished himself for determination and dash in combination; and when Cronje had been circumvented at Paardeberg and the British flag hoisted in Pretoria, he was promoted to the commandership of the forces in South Africa on Lord Roberts' return to England.

Kitchener brought the long campaign to a close. Again the gallant fighter and fine organizer was thanked by Parliament, given a further £30,000 from the country's public purse, and raised in the peerage to a viscounty.

As a full general he was sent out in 1902 to India as Commander-in-Chief with practically a free hand to reform the army of our great Empire of the Orient. His ideals of duty brooking no civilian interference in matters military, Viscount Kitchener soon came into conflict with the then Viceroy, Lord Curzon, and the friction ensued in the resignation of that able statesman in 1905.

Since then Lord Kitchener has practically been permitted to have his own way at headquarters in India; and on the completion of his task in the Orient, he is credited by some with hankering after overthrowing the influence of the non-military element in the War Office for good and all.

Barrister's First Brief.

My first brief I have the best of reasons for remembering particularly clearly. I was engaged for the defence in a case of robbery. Two men, the prisoners, had seized the prosecutor on the platform of Shrewsbury Station, and while one of them held his arms the other quietly rifled his pockets.

They were caught red-handed, and I had a brief to defend the prisoner who had held the prosecutor by the arms. I made the obvious defence. I urged that it was vindictive to sacrifice two victims to justice when one would suffice, that the distinction between the two prisoners was manifest, and as the one I defended had not taken any money at all it was impossible to pretend that he was as guilty as his companion.

To the amazement of everybody, not excepting the chairman—who had been careful in his summing up to sweep away my sophistries—the jury made the distinction I suggested to them, and returned a verdict of "Not guilty" against my prisoner.—"Reminiscences of Mr. A. C. Plowden," in The Strand Magazine.

A Pageant of Priests.

Pageants have so far illustrated the history of a single town or city but the one held recently in the grounds of Fulham Palace, London was unique. It depicted the growth and history of the Church of England.

It was split up into a number of episodes, and, beginning with the publication of the edict of Emperor Constantine, came right down through the ages to the acquittal of the Seven Bishops in 1688. A final tableau, representing the church "throughout the world," concluded the gigantic spectacle.

The grounds of Fulham Palace lent by the Bishop of London, were well fitted for such a purpose.

The spectators were housed in a grand stand, 304 feet in length, 98 feet in depth, and covering an acre of ground. In addition to a large royal box, there was seating accommodation for 6,750. His Grace the Archbishop of Canterbury performed the opening ceremony.

OUT ON THE COD BANKS

A DAY IN THE LIFE OF THE LUNENBURG FISHERMAN.

The Men Who Supply the World With Its Codfish Have a Hard and Dangerous Life—Fifty Tons Is the Average Size of Schooners—Squid Is the Favorite Bait—Casting Is All Done From Dories.

Like that of a policeman, the life of a "Banker" is not a happy one. It is a long record of toilsome endurance, of simple heroism, of the bearing of incredible hardships, of but scant reward.

The great banks of Newfoundland are a rich harvesting ground, and year in, year out, thousands of men exploit them to the full. Not alone do the fishing towns of Canada and the United States send their representatives to the warfare of man against nature; Scotland sends its quota, so does France; in fact, during a good season few seafaring countries but are represented there in some form or other. Cod is the spoil, the wily, elusive cod: valuable as a food, exacting of chase; cheap as to price.

On the principle of fitting the back to the burden, Bankers do not fare forth in little luggers or smacks. They ship themselves aboard large, seaworthy schooners, capable of weathering the hardest gales that ever blow.

These schooners vary in tonnage, but fifty tons is a fair average size. They are manned by eight men usually, sufficient to handle the vessel comfortably in going from port to fishing ground and back, and also in following the fishes they travel from point to point. But this is not their only work; it is a very small part of it. Their real work is to catch fish.

Imagine yourself for the nonce aboard a schooner out of Lunenburg. She is well-found, a comfortable vessel, once possessed of a good turn of speed, for she has been a racer in her day, though now her glory has departed. This speed will serve her in good turn when the holds are full and the homeward race for market commences. The captain is a grizzled veteran, with a down east drawl that you could cut with an axe. But he has a reputation for being able to play the elusive cod at his own game; to "think cod," in short, which means that he can place himself in the position of the fish, and meet every move they make.

It is not a very long journey to the Banks, for the schooner is fast. Once there, the skipper begins to cast about for fish, watching the crested waves narrowly as if he could read their most cherished secrets, as indeed he can. There are certain signs and tokens, known to the Banker, which indicate the presence of cod, or, failing their presence, the direction in which they have traveled; and these signs your skipper reads as an open book. The schooner slips away on its own appointed course, and morning shows a deserted sea.

"Waal, I guess we're here or hereabouts," says the skipper, and the word is passed for work to commence. The schooner's decks have been filled with a number of small boats called dories; double-ended craft, a cross between a ship's dinghy and a Canadian canoe; easily managed by one man, fairly safe in rough weather, and as light as a feather.

Meanwhile the spare hands have been busy for days in baiting vast lengths of cod-line—stout, tough stuff, strong enough to hold a runaway whale in its flurry. Squid or cuttlefish is the favorite bait, for cod loves squid as a trout loves the May fly. At stated intervals along the line hooks are firmly hitched, and each hook receives its piece of bait, after which the line is coiled away into shallow tubs; one tub to each dory, and the material is ready.

The complete equipment of a dory consists of a small anchor, a coir cable, for anchoring the boat, a heavy maul for stunning big fish as they are hauled aboard; a gaff, an axe; a compass, a stock of provisions, a tin horn for fog signals, a pair of sculls, and rowlocks, lamp and oil. All is in readiness, and a start is made at once, for the longer you wait the greater possibility of other schooners encroaching on your chosen ground. Each line is fitted with floats and sinkers at intervals, and your dory is swung outboard by a single whip from the masthead. You lower yourself into it as it touches the water, fit bottom boards and thwarts in place, receive your impedimenta, and start off.

Arrived at the spot you have selected, you commence to throw out your lines, which sink from sight as you pull back on the way you have come, until the entire line is submerged, after which you pull along to your first float, grapple the line—and probably receive some cruel jags from the hooks in so doing, and under-run the apparatus; pulling your dory along by the line, hand over hand, and as each hook comes into view it is more than likely that it holds a big fish.

One by one you pick off the spoil, tossing them expertly into the dory until you are up to your knees in fish, and when the last hook has been reached you are ready to go back aboard, though as you unhooked each fish you rebaited the hook from the bait tub in the bows, and let the line drop out of sight again.

Such is the Banker's life in fine weather; but in a storm it is full of the grimmest dangers. The blinding blizzards of the Banks sweep down in howling fury, and woe betide the ship that is caught unawares. The mighty Atlantic seas rage on crabbingly, and the spray freezes where it falls, so that the schooner becomes but a floating mass of solid ice.

But no matter what the weather he work goes on.

England Increasing.

In England births outnumber baths by 5 to 3.

It's a pity when sick ones drug the stomach or stimulate the Heart and Kidneys. That is all wrong! A weak Stomach, means weak Stomach nerves, always, And this is also true of the Heart and Kidneys. The weak nerves are instead crying out for help. This explains why Dr. Shoop's Restorative is promptly helping Stomach, Heart and Kidney ailments. The Restorative reaches out for the actual cause of these ailments—the failing "inside nerves." Anyway test the Restorative 48 hours. It won't cure so soon as that but you will surely know that help is coming. Sold by all dealers.

BUSINESS METHODS.

A man may have several carloads of ability. He may have brains and ideas and other desirable things. But all the ideas ever "dreamed" will not avail to raise a man who neglects that all important item of advertising. You simply must get attention. Of course you can get attention by firing off a revolver during office hours or you can do it by wearing loud clothes and proclaiming your kinship in the sporting fraternity. But most men who have risen from the ranks have carefully neglected to use methods of this kind.

Every office man must act as his own salesman. He must first prepare himself by increasing his efficiency. He must be able to do the work for which he is hired. Not only should he do that for which he is hired, but he must do that work better than it ever was done before. When that item has been attended to it is then time to look about for more work.

The wise employee will keep his eye on the job ahead or, better still, will look at a job which does not exist, but which should exist for the good of the business. The next step is to think out a selling talk that will get the attention, arouse the interest, create a desire and bring about in the mind of the employer a desire to do what the live employee desires him to do.—Bookkeeper.

FORGOT HIS OWN LINES.

A Quotation That the Poet Campbell Failed to Recognize.

That poets, like other folks, sometimes forget their own creations is shown by an incident related by Sir Frederick Pollock. At a dinner where Thomas Campbell and Lord Nugent were present the conversation drifted from the use of Latin words in English to monosyllabic verse. Some one expressed a doubt whether two consecutive lines composed of words of one syllable could be found in our language. Lord Nugent at once quoted:

"By that dread name we wave the sword on high,
And swear for her to live—with her to die."

Campbell said he did not believe in the lines and asked where they came from. Lord Nugent said, "From your own 'Pleasures of Hope.'" "How do you know that?" asked the poet. "I know it all by heart," replied Nugent. "I'll bet you a guinea you can't repeat it," said Campbell. The bet was taken and Nugent started declaiming. The poet soon got tired and said: "I see you know the poem. Don't go any further." The other insisted upon repeating the whole poem or claiming double stakes, and Campbell paid the extra guinea in order to be spared the recital of the poem which had made him famous—which he had forgotten.

How to Patch a Canoe.

There are several different "homemade" methods by which to repair a crack or leak in a canoe. Perhaps the most permanent is varnish or shellac and silk. Put a little varnish over the crack, place a small silk patch over the varnish, letting it dry, then varnish or shellac over the silk. Two coats will be sufficient. If it is a varnished canoe, use white silk, and the patch can hardly be detected, the silk being transparent. This may be put on both inside and outside if necessary. White lead and varnish mixed well and put in the crack is also a good permanent repair. If on a cruise in the woods and without the necessary articles to make a permanent repair, get a little spruce gum off the trees, heat and add a little grease and put over the crack. The grease has a tendency to keep the gum from getting very hard, and it will not break so easily. The silk and shellac repair is the usual remedy for a puncture in a canvas covered canoe.—Recreation.

The Dogs of Turkey.

In the matter of kindness to animals it is said that the Turk cannot be surpassed. Thus at Stamboul the wandering dogs are treated with great gentleness, and when puppies come into the world they are lodged with their mother at the side of the street in improvised kennels made out of old boxes lined with straw and bits of carpet. And frequently when a young Turk happens to be flush of money he goes to the nearest baker's shop and buys a quantity of bread, which he distributes among the dogs of the quarter, who testify their gratitude by jumping up at him with muddy paws and snuffing muzzles.

When Youth Wanes.

Old age has many definitions, and middle age more. But you may take it that you are not really an old man so long as you take an interest in your personal appearance. There is not a nurse who does not know the sign of convalescence—when the patient wants to be shaved and put a good appearance in this world. And so long as the man of sixty can take an interest in the latest tie—and tie it—he is preserving his youth.—London Chronicle.

He Had a Reason.

"I notice you are very cautious in what you say about people."

"Yes."

"Why is this?"

"Well, I ain't prominent enough to claim I was misquoted."

Big Price for Hogs

Mr T. M. Hunter brought to Peterborough yesterday, from his farm in North Monaghan, seven hogs fresh from the stubble. These seven hogs weighed 1470 lbs. for which he received 8 1-4c. per lb. or $121.27 for the seven hogs. This is not only a good price for bacon, but it shows that the farmer receives a good price for his hogs when he produces the right kind of stock.

Preliminary Hearing

This morning at ten o'clock the preliminary hearing of Fred and Harry Jopling, charged with manslaughter, will be proceeded with at the county court rooms. Magistrate Edmison will preside. The Crown will be represented by County Crown Attorney Wood, and Mr. D. O'Connell will look after the interests of the Joplings. Both young men, who have been out on bail since their arrest, will be present at the hearing.

Want Good Men

At a meeting of the Peterborough Law Association, held in the office of the secretary Wednesday, a committee was appointed to draft a resolution or memorial to be presented to the Ontario Government urging upon the said government the desirability and necessity, in the interests of the profession and in the public's interests of appointing an incumbent of the office of county court clerk, now vacant, who shall be possessed of the legal qualifications and experience necessary to the effective discharge of the duties of said office.

Free Methodists

Miss Babcock and Miss Clarke, the two young women who have been in charge of the Free Methodist church here during the past year, have been instructed by conference to remain in Peterborough another year. They have been earnest workers and have striven assiduously for the advancement of the church in this city. It has also been decided that the new church will not be constructed this year. The proposed building will be erected on Aylmer St., opposite the G.T.R. station, but the work will not be commenced until next spring. The funds have come in very satisfactorily but it has been deemed wiser to delay actual building operations until 1910.

OBITUARY

JOHN KINCAID.

One of the best known and most highly respected residents of Peterborough passed away at eight o'clock yesterday morning at his home, 556 Harvey street, in the person of Mr. John Kincaid. He had been ailing for the past year having never recovered from an operation. He was seventy-four years of age. He was born in Donegal, Ireland, but came to Canada when quite young and but for an interval of six years when he lived in Cincinnee he had resided practically all his life in this city. For many years he was a successful contractor. Later he was appointed assessor which office he held for some time. During the two years of the construction of the Collegiate Institute, he was inspector. He was a man of retiring disposition but one who won universal respect and esteem. The funeral will take place on Saturday afternoon at 2.30 o'clock to the Little Lake cemetery.

SENSATIONAL MARRIAGE.

Successful Elopement of Whiskey King's Son and Stella Talbot.

Pittsburg, Pa., Sept. 19.— One of the most sensational marriages in years was brought to light here today, when the family of Fred Mugele, one of the whiskey kings of Pittsburg, announced the successful elopement of Fred Mugele, jr., aged 17, with Miss Stella M. Talbot of Niagara Falls, N.Y., also aged 17. The elopement is admitted by the family to have taken place from a convent at Toronto, Ont., where the young girl and heiress was at school. Young Mugele is a son of Protestant parents, while his intended wife was a Roman Catholic, and it was necessary to get a special dispensation for the marriage, but this the youthful lover, himself a student at the Bellefonte, Pa., academy, got around in some way and on last Wednesday the couple were quietly married by Rev. Father T. J. Roche of the Sacred Heart church of Niagara, N.Y., The ceremony was performed in study of the pastor.

The very young couple at once went to Buffalo, N.Y., where they sent a message to the elder Mugele at Pittsburg, asking forgiveness. The family here thought their son at Bellefonte studying engineering and were much surprised. Mr. Mugele went to Buffalo, extended forgiveness and brought the couple to Pittsburg, where they now are.

The elder Mugele is worth perhaps $1,000,000 himself.

VARICOCELE CURED

NO NAMES USED WITHOUT WRITTEN CONSENT.

Confined to His Home for Weeks.

"Heavy work, severe straining and evil habits in youth brought on a double varicocele. When I worked hard the aching would become severe and I was often laid up for a week at a time. My family physician told me an operation was my only hope, but I dreaded it. I tried several specialists, but soon found out all they wanted was my money. I commenced to look upon all doctors as little better than rogues. One day my boss asked me why I was off work so much and I told him my condition. He advised me to consult Drs. Kennedy & Kennedy, as he had taken treatment from them himself and knew they were square and skilful. I wrote them and got THE NEW METHOD TREATMENT. My progress was somewhat slow and during the first month's treatment I was somewhat discouraged. However, I continued treatment for three months longer and was rewarded with a complete cure. I could only earn $12 a week in a machine shop before treatment, now I am earning $21 and never lose a day. I wish all sufferers knew of your valuable treatment.

Jopling Boys Remanded Three Witnesses Called

Evidence Given Followed Very Closely that Given at the Coroner's Inquest —No New Testimony

There were no new features involved in the preliminary examination of Fred and Harry Jopling of Bridgnorth, the two brothers who are charged with manslaughter in connection with the death of Arthur Bollard at Chemong Park on Aug. 23rd. The evidence given followed very closely that given at the Coroner's inquest, and there was no new testimony that was of much importance. Only three witnesses were examined. Dr. Scott, who performed the post mortem examination, assisted by Dr. Greer, and Blake Cullen and Gordon Long, who were spectatorsof the fight.

The preliminary hearing was taken before County Police Magistrate Edmison, in the County police court yesterday morning. There was not the same large crowd of spectators as attended the inquest proceedings, but as the morning wore on the attendance perceptibly increased, indicating that there is considerable interest being taken in the now famous case. The Jopling brothers, who have been out on bail since their arrest a week ago were on hand when the court opened and their father, G. T. Jopling and older brother, James Jopling, were also present. The accused were represented by Mr. D. O.Connell, while Crown Attorney R. E. Wood appeared for the Crown.

When the court was opened Crown Attorney Wood announced that as the court had no jurisdiction to try the case it was not necessary for the accused to elect or plead, and therefore that it was possible to go ahead with the taking of evidence.

Dr.Scott was the first witness called. His testimony was practically the same as at the inquest. He told of being called to attend Arthur Bollard onThursday, Aug. 26; of the condition he found the patient in,and of his death the following day. He testified to the findings at the post mortem and again gave it as his opinion that the struggle and the injury received were contributory to the death of Bollard.

The witness was cross examined at considerable length by Mr. O'Connell who elicted the opinion from Dr. Scott that irregularity of habits and other causes might leave the body in the condition described without being discovered by the physicians in making the post mortem examination. He stated that he did not find sufficient in the stomach and bowels unless that the fact that the constitution was otherwise weakened were taken into consideration.

Blake Cullen of Bridgenorth, told the same story of the affair that he has given on his several examinations before. He was closely examined by the Crown attorney,who objected that he was not accurate in his statements.

"You will not be accurate," said Mr. Wood to the witness. "You are here on your oath and you are a friend of the accused. Those young men are here on trial and you are not helping them very much by the way in which you are giving your evidence."

Cullen told of being informed of Bollard going to give H.Jopling a thrashing, of telling Fred about it, and of Fred and Harry going down into the park after Bollard. He described the fighting and the wrestling that ensued, and denied hearing Bollard say "Dirty!": or "Let go."

Gordon Long testified to being present at the fight and of hearing Bollard cry out "Dirty!" twice, and "Let go" three times. His evidence was in every essential detail the same as given at the inquest.

The examination was then adjourned until Wednesday next, September 29. Crown Attorney Wood stated yesterday that he did not think he would call any more witnesses.

Peterboro' Girl was Arrested in Rochester

Rochester, N.Y., Sept. 23.—"I will never go home, I will commit suicide first," said pretty 17-year-old Mabel Jobe, with tears streaming down her cheeks last night after being taken to police headquarters on a charge of vagrancy, the warrant for her arrest having been sworn out by her mother.

The girl resides with her mother in Peterborough, Ont., and came to to this city some time ago to accept a position in a paper box factory.

The girl's mother came to Rochester yesterday to get her daughter to return to her home in Canada, and again take up work as a domestic. This the girl refused to do, and as a result the warrant was sworn out for her arrest. The mother told the police her daughter had been frequenting places where liquor is sold, and is not keeping the best of company. The girl says that this is not true, and when the North street family, where she rooms, were interviewed, they stated that she never went out at night.

The girl was almost heartbroken at being placed under arrest and insists that she will kill herself if she is compelled to return to Canada and again become a domestic in a private family.

Chief Rossel said that the girl had no police record here.

Tenders Advertised for the Isolation Hospital

The first matter taken up by the Property Committee last night was the Isolation Hospital which the council ordered to be built at once. The chairman stated that it would be necessary to determine how the tenders would be called and when it was necessary to have the tenders in. The council meets again on Monday, Oct., 4th, and the tenders should be ready for that meeting.

Ald. Hicks saidthat as the specifications were ready, the advertisement should be put in the press on Saturday and to receive the tenders up to Monday afternoon when the committee can meet and prepare its recommendation.

The committee then decided to place the cheque to accompany each tender at $1,000.

It was moved by Ald. Duncan and seconded by Ald. Morgan that tenders be called for to be in by four o'clock on Monday afternoon, Oct. 4th, and that a marked cheque for $1,000 accompany each tender.

The above motion carried.

The walls of the hospital will be of brick. The outside wall to be good hard burnt red brick and red mortar and all the other walls of sandstone brick.

THE AMBULANCE.

The members tried hard to get the ambulance painted this year. The sick wagon needs painting very badly and really should be fixed up.The committee, however, has not the money. There is only a little left and it will in all probability be used up by incidentals. The aldermen suggested a nice maroon color with three coats of paint. Each member of the committee had something different but the chairman refused to allow them to talk about it any longer, so the ambulance must wait until next year.

PUBLIC LIBRARY.

The committee took up the specifications for the lighting, heating and plumbing contracts for the public library. The lighting arrangements and specifications were left with the chairman and Ald. Duncan.

The heating and plumbing specifications were accepted with a few minor changes. Tenders will be asked for.

OVER-WORKED KIDNEYS.

Cause, Rush of Blood, Fulness, Dizziness.

J. T. Chetland, the well-known railway engineer of Hamilton, found the strain always resting upon men of his occupation vastly intensified by a tendency of the blood to rush to his head, and often at times when clearness of vision and great steadiness were demanded. Finding some difficulty in heading—a stiffness with pain having settled in his back, it occurred to him that his kidneys might be at fault. "This was a happy idea, for by it I not only got rid of the pain but many other troubles as well I took a full dose of Dr., Hamilton's Pills and was glad to note that some obstruction of the kidneys which I had lately noticed, was at once relieved. The flushed appearance of my face gave way to a more rational color and there was a perceptible improvement in my appetite. Dr. Hamilton's Pills certainly act splendidly upon the blood, removing heat and fulness and that sort of dizziness that makes a man at the throttle wish when it seizes him that he were elsewhere."

No medicine gives such unquestionably good results for stomach, liver and blood troubles as Dr. Hamilton's Pills; they are mild, certain, and always curative. Refuse any substitute All dealers sell Dr. Hamilton's Pills, 25c per box, or The Catarrhozone Co., Kingston, Ont.

Washington, Sept. 23.—A net increase of 573,551 in the population of the United States by the arrival and departure of aliens was scored during the last fiscal year, against an increase of 209,867 the previous year. There was a falling off in immigration from 782,877 aliens during the previous fiscal year to 751,786 the past year, and the total inward passenger movement, represent.

ARRESTED WITH GIRL.

Striker and Rich Man's Daughter, Held for Ransom, Captured.

Scottdale, Pa., Sept. 23.—John Leary was arrested here this afternoon with Mary Cimimero, the 13-year.old daughter of a rich Niles, Ohio, hotel-keeper, whom Leary is charged with kidnaping. The arrest ends a chase that took Detective H. A. Walsh of Niles through half a dozen cities. The girl's father, who says she was kidnaped for ransom, is hurrying here in answer to a telephone message. Detective Walsh is trying to persuade his prisoner to accompany him to Ohio voluntarily, and, failing to do this, application will be made for requisition papers. Leary is a striking tin-worker.

NOTED BANDIT SHOT.

Man Who Committed Over Three Hundred Murders.

Salonicai Sept. 23.—Sandan, the notorious Bulgarian comitadji and leader of insurgent bands in Macedonia, was shot here at midnight yesterday.

He was walking in the street in the very middle of the town, when he was attacked by two members of the rival Bulgarian faction once led by the notorious Sarafoff. Shot in the chest, he was taken to a hospital,and is now lying in a precarious condition.

Sandansky was responsible for the most horrible outrages during the Madedonian atrocities, when thousands were murdered at his orders.

He is reputed to have committed over 300 murders with his own hand.

Sandansky thus falls a victim to the party whose leader, Boris Sarafoff,the famous revolutionary, was assassinated, it is said, at his orders nearly two years ago. It is not the first attempt at revenge, for last October he was shot in Salonica and seriously wounded.

EAT SUBMERGED TIMBER.

Important Discovery of New Fresh Water Wood Destroyer in Iowa.

Clinton, Iowa, Sept. 23.—Engineer Green, of Green Bay, who is placing dynamite under the cribs which supported the old bridge of the Chicago and Northwestern, recently wrecked, today discovered that myriads of worms had attached themselves to the timbers far below the low water line, and had eaten into the wood. The worm is half an inch long and white. Specimens have been sent to the company's offices in Chicago and probably will go to the university there for examination. It is believed by Engineer Frank Bainbridge, in charge of the construction company's new bridge across the Mississippi, that the discovery will attract national attention and may revolutionize the method of under water construction, as no worm of the kind was ever before known to exist in fresh water.

BRITISH PLANS SOLD.

German Spy Said to Have Got Warship Secrets.

Pekin, Sept. 23.—The report that closely guarded naval construction and artillery secrets have been sold to Germans has precipitated anxious British official inquiries into the who recently appeared in Pekin,bearing credentials from several foremost English manufacturers of warship arms and ammunitions, claiming to transactions and movements of a young man assuming a military title be a confidential instructor in the Chinese army. This man succeeded in convincing leading British concerns of his ability to place large orders here. He was given contracts and entrusted with secret details and drawings. He succeeded in securing considerable sums from local representations of these concerns before the disclosure that he was wholly unknown to Chinese authorities hastened his disappearance from the scene.

The belief that the drawings were sold to Germans is responsible for the active search throughout China and Japan now being made by British authorities.

Ball of Electricity Passed Through Room

Kingston, Ont., Sept. 24.—A ball of fire shot through Convocation Hall at Queen's University yesterday during a heavy electric storm. It came in through an open window after a severe flash of lightning, and banged through a window on the opposite side, breaking the glass, passing near to a young man and shocking him.

The room was occupied by almost twenty persons, who were engaged in writing at the supplemental examinations, and great alarm was created by the episode.

Will Joseph Hunter be Sent to Asylum?

That an effort was being made to have Joseph Hunter declared insane and to commit him to an asylum without a trial was the pith of a statement made to a Warder reporter today.

Hunter is to be tried on Monday next at the Fall Assizes. If he were to be declared at the present time to be declared insane at the present time by specialists who have examined him it is probable that the judge would grant an order committing him to an asylum.—Lindsay Warder.

Everybody Should Take a Peek at Planet Mars

Washington, Sept. 24.—Nearer to the earth by 15,000,000 miles than it has been for fifteen years, the planet Mars today the object of immense interest to the astronomers throughout the world, particularly at the U.S. Naval Observatory here.

Its average distance from the earth is 50,000,000 miles. Its distance from the earth today was obly 35,000,000 miles.

With this proximity interest in the planet, which is always keen, will be come, even among those who cannot claim to be students of astronomy, all the keener on account of the probability that new discoveries concerning matters Martian will be made.

FATHER OF 30 AT 58.

Farmer Weds Woman With 12 and They Now Have 32 in Family.

Lansing, Mich., Sept. 23.—Through the receipt of a birth certificate at the secretary of state's office today Joseph Tatro, a farmer, living in Pinconning township, Bay County,is shown to be the father of twenty children and the stepfather of twelve other, making a total of thirty-two children in the family, all of whom are alive.

At the time of his marriage to Hattie Chabineau some time ago Tatro had fifteen children of his own,while she had twelve. Since then they have added five more to the list, the last being named Virginia Sylbia Tatro. The father is 58 years old and was born in Michigan. The mother's age is not given. She is evidently a French Canadian.

BORING FOR GAS.

Mr. R. H. Leary Stated That They Were Making Good Progress.

Mr. R. H. Leary, president of the Peterborough Central Fair, was a visitor to town today. He was asked by a Post reporter how the drilling operations for gas and oil were progressing on the Kincaid farm. "We are to a depth of over 500 feet at present, but operations have been temporarily suspended until Mr. Dettman returns from the States with a new drilling machine. We feel confident that we will secure gas in abundant quantities—in fact we have already struck a flow of gas yielding many cubic feet every twenty-four hours." "When will you begin operations in Lindsay?" queried the reporter.

"We had intended boring here the same time as we started operations in Peterborough," said Mr. Leary. You will hear from us pretty soon." —Lindsay Post.

Blythe Hanging May be Postponed Again

Toronto, Sept. 24.—It looks very much as if the hanging of Walter Blythe, set for one week from today, will be once again postponed, and thatultimately he will be granted a new trial.

Such seems to be the result of the decision of the Court of Appeal handed out this morning on the application madeby Blythe's counsel. T. C. Robinette. The court told Mr. Robinette to again ask the trial judge, Mr. Justice Riddell, for a stated case, on the ground that Blythe was under the influence of liquor when he killed his wife. and that therefore the offence is one of manslaughter and not murder. If Mr. Justice Riddell once more refuses a stated case, as he has done twice in the past, then Mr. Robinette can again come before the Court of Appeal and argue the point there for a new trial.

IT WILL TAKE TIME.

And this will take time, and even if the Court of Appeal refuses a new trial they will have at least to postpone the hanging, as the argument and all cannot be done in a week's time.

The textof the judgment is as follows:

"The grounds for a stated case in this matter mentioned to the trial judge on the application for a stated case were not argued here, as Mr. Justice Riddell practically conceded that they were not maintainable. A new ground was taken, that there was not sufficient direction given to the jury of the condition of the prisoner atthe time he committed the crime to allow the jury to render a verdict of manslaughter. Now the Crown was willing that we should look into this point, but we have decided not to deal with it as it is not regularly before us, and we therefore suggest that a new application be made to the trial judge for a stated case upon that point, and if this is refused, another appeal to that court may betaken."

Cobalt Miner Killed.

Cobalt, Ont., Sept. 23.—While earning his first dollar in Canada, E. E. Lindel, a Swedish miner, was struck on the head by the descending cage on the fourth level of the Cobalt Central Mine and killed instantly. He and some other Swedes were sent out to the mine this morning after their recent arrival at Cobalt.

Lindel was 23 years old and had had experience in Swedish mines. He had no relatives in this country.

300 Met to Wait End of the World

West Duxbury, Mass., Sept. 24. — Quietened today by the conviction that today would bring the end of the world, the 300 and more members of the Latter Reign of the Apostolic Church, or Triune Immerelonists, as they prefered to be called, assembled about their place of worship early in the forenoon to await the destruction and purification of the world by fire, in fulfillment of their own prophecy.

The majority of the denomination early today still expressed confidence that the end of the world would come at the appointed hour, 10 o'clock, while others said that if it did not occur at that exact time it would not be delayedmore than a day or two.

As the appointed time drew near the believers filled the chapel and devoted their time to the singing of hymns.

Shortly before 10 o'clock the skies darkened, and those who had been watching for a sign appeared convinced that the milenium was at hand. Ten o'clock came but the sky brightened and the millenium, in the opinion of the believers was apparently postponed for a brief period of time.

It was then explained that a revelation which was made to one of their number last night, indicated that the destruction was to be deferred until some time during the 24 hours, beginning at six o'clock this evening. The faithful still continued confident that their prophecies would be fulfilled and they spent the remainder of the forenoon in prayer and singing hymns.

One Shot Wounded Two.

Belleville, Ont., Sept. 23.—While Fred Mills and Bert Bell, of this city were hunting in a bush just west of the city limits yesterday, they were getting through a fence, when the gun carried by Mills was accidentally discharged. The bullet penetrated the fleshy part of Mills' thigh, passing through it, and struck Bell on the tip of the right thumb, taking off a portion of it. The injuries sustained by Mills are not considered of a serious nature. He was brought to the city and taken to the hospital.

ADVERTISE IN THE TIMES.

Fled in Night Robes from burning Hotel

Many Narrow Escapes at the Burning of the Royal Hotel, Hepworth—Brother Pluckily Rescues His Two Sisters

Hepworth, Ont., Sept. 24.— The Royal Hotel, an up-to-date temperance house owned and managed by J. J. Downs, was completely gutted by fire early this morning. The fire is supposed to have originated in a frame cook house which adjoined the main building in the rear.

Mrs. Downs was awakened about 1.30 by a strong smell of smoke and, opening the kitchen door the flames and smoke immediately forced themselves into the main building. She then gave the alarm. The boarders gathered together as much of their belongings as was handy and got out. Some partly dressed in their room, while others took no chance, but got out in their night robes and dressed afterwards. Although mourning the loss of some of their property, and in some cases nearly everything, they feel grateful that they are alive today.

R. Morrison, traveler for W. B. Sherling & Co., Winnipeg, lost his clothes, samples, and two hundred dollars in cash, and got out by dropping from a side window, as all means of escape were then cut off.

F. S. Clark, another traveler,crawled through his bedroom window to a balcony and then dropped.

Two daughters of Mr. Downs were not missed until nearly every person was out. Their brother made a dash for their rooms amd found them overcome by the smoke and dragged them out.

The loss will be about two thousand, which is here on Mr. Downs the insurancels trifling. The hotel was an ideal temperance one and was liberally patronized by travelers.

NEGRO IS A HANDFUL.

Laughable Encounter of Darkey and Police.

New York, Sept. 23.—George M. Lampkins, a Jersey City negro, gave the New York police a chase today which has won for him the reputation of being able to sprint faster, kick harder, and turn quicker than any prisoner they have captured in many a day. Tonight Lampkins is safely locked up and under guard, charged with stealing $200 from the trouser pockets of a friend.

Late this afternoon the big negro defeated three relays of patrolmen in a cross-town race to the North River and, diving in, swam powerfully for the Jersey shore. Half way across he was overhauled in a rowboat, but after being taken aboard, he tipped five officers into the water and only gave up fighting when he had been held under the surface until exhausted.

Mr. Blackstock will Act at Murder Trial

Lindsay, Sept. 24.—It is learned that Mr. George Tate Blackstock, K.C., who represented the Crown at the Kinrade inquest, has been appointed Crown prosecutor at the Assizes, which open here next week.

The attorney-general's department this morning corroborated this despatch. The chief case when will come up at Lindsay is that of Joseph Hunter, the late proprietor of the Royal Hotel at Bobcaygeon, who shot and killed his wife six weeks ago.

Inspector Greerwas in Lindsay assisting the local officers in the collection of evidence.

WAR DOES GOOD.

It is Aid to Humanity—Remarkable Idea Presented by Great Bavarian Statesman.

Berlin, Sept. 23.—"The World-State and the Peace Problem," a remarkable book designed to popularise war, as about to be published in Berlin. The author, Baron von Stengel, a distinguished Bavarian jurist, was one of Germany's delegates to the first Hague Peace Conference. The preface declares that the book has been called forth by the conviction that "the growth of the peace movement involves a national peril."

A chapter entitled "The Significance of War for the Development of Humanity" makes the following striking statements:

"War has more often facilitated than hindered human progress. Athens and Rome, not only in spite of, but just because of their many wars, rose to the zenith of civilization. Great states like Germany and Italy are welded into nationalities only through blood and iron.

"Storm purifies the air and destroys the frail trees, leaving the sturdy oaks standing. War is the best of a nation's political, physical and intellectual worth. The state in which there is much that is rotten may vegetate for a while in peace, but in war its weakness is revealed.

Germany's preparations for war have not resulted in economic disaster, but in unexampled economic expansion—unquestionably because of our demonstrated superiority over France. It is better to spend money on armaments and battleships than luxury, motor-mania and other sensual living."

RUGBY

The local Rugby season will commence today when the Rough Riders and Collegiate teams will play the first game in the Junior City League. The game will beplayed at Riverside Park and should be an interesting exhibition inasmuch as the teams are old rivals, and last year had several very hard-fought contests. The teams are practically same as last year and as none of the rivalry is lacking the contest will be fought out from the first toot of the referee's whistle. Both teams will be strong and will be in good shape, as they have been holding afternoob practices. The game will be called at 2.30 sharp.

Australia's Big Fighting Force

Melbourne, Sept. 22.—As a result of the recent Imperial defence conference, the Government of the Commonwealth has begun to give effect to the decision to train and equip a military and naval force. The Minister of Defence today in Parliament moved the second reading of the Defence Bill. He compared the trifling British strength in the Pacific as compared with that of Japan or the United States, and said that Australia wished to have a large share in defending British possessions there. It would therefore provide one armored and three unarmored cruisers in addition to smaller vessels, having altogether a complement of 2 300 officers and men.

The military arrangements would eventually provide 260,000 trained adults as a striking force, in addition to 115,000 reservists. Both naval and military training would be compulsory, but the compulsion would be initially confined to closely populated areas. It was estimated that the whole scheme would cost £2,500,000 annually.

He opened the fair at Collingwood today and that at Paris on Friday. He has been forced to decline an even dozen of invitations because Government business prevents his leaving Toronto.

Sprained Wrist and Ankle

After Being Laid Up With Great Pain for Ten Days, Relief Was Gained Instantly By Applying

NERVILINE.

One of the most soul-distressing accidents that can befa.l one is a bad ankle or wrist sprain. "If I had only known of "Nerviline" earlier, I could have saved myself an enormous amount of pain, and many agonizing nights of sleeplessness." Thus writes P. Q. Quinn, a young farmer living near Brockville. "I tumbled from a hay loft to the barn floor and sprained my right ankle and left wrist They swelled rapidly and caused excruciating pains. It was not convenient to go to the city and the liniment in the house was useless. When I got Nerviline relief came quickly. It took down the swelling, relieved the pain, and gave me wonderful comfort.

TESTIMONIAL No. 4266

"I can recommend Nerviline for strains, bruises, swellings, muscular pains, and sore back. I have proved it a sure cure in such cases."

Think what it might some day mean to you to have right in your home, ready for an accident or emergent sickness, a bottle or two of Nerviline. Get it today, 25c., or five for $1.00. all dealers or The Catarrhozone Co., Kingston, Ont. 7

AN EXTRAVAGANT AGE

Secretary Wilson of the United States Agricultural Department, declares that the average laborer today lives better than Queen Elizabeth did, remarks The Woodstock Sentinel-Review. The statement may involve some exaggeration; but certainly a the average laborer today and the comparison between the condition of condition of the average laborer in Queen Elizabeth's time would show a wonderful change. How much the improved concitions have added to the sum of human happiness is another question. The luxury enjoyed for a time becomes a necessity. Civilization has marvellously increased man's means of supplying his needs; but it has also marvellously increased his needs. It is said to be much harder for a man to live on $3 a day than on $1.50, and harder still on $5. It is not impossible to understand that it is so.

This is certainly an age of extravagance. A writer in the last number of the Technical World Magazine figures out that the people of the United States spend on a few of the more important superfluities of life that have come to be regarded as necessities over two billions three hundred millions a year. He estimates that the money paid in these superfluities, figured at the actual retail cost, would run the Government of the United States for nearly eight years. Some of the figures are startling enough: Liquors and mineral waters, over $600,000,000; cigars, tobacco and smokers' articles, over $300,000,000; candy, over $100,000,000; silks, jewellery, millinery, laces, embroidery and cosmetics for women over $350,000,000; amusements, which cannot of course be all regarded as superfluous, cover $400,000,000. Nearly $20,000,000 is burned up every year in powder for ammunition, for firecrackers and fireworks. It is estimated that the people spend $150,000,000 a year on moving pictures alone.

Most of the superfluities for which these enormous sums are expended were unknown to the people of Elizabeth's day, and doubtless they were able to get along very well without them.

Talents Fostered

Often Turned Wrong Course

By JOHN A. HOWLAND.

SOME time ago an acquaintance of mine, who finds pastime in looking a little into sociological conditions, announced it as his opinion that educational institutions, for the masses at least, do not go far enough in the work of equipping the young man for his occupation in the world.

Why should not the schools, colleges and universities—perhaps even the state itself—establish a commission which should examine the student body on practical lines and give to the individual student its best opinion as to the line of work for which he is best fitted? Thousands of young men fail, not because of incompetent bodies and brains, but because of misdirected ambitions. They are the round pegs in the square holes.

Probably a thousand reasons could be advanced to show how and why such a commission inevitably would fail of such a purpose. Under an absolute monarchy, where government asserted absolute ownership of its citizens, the idea might be carried out—and fail. But under democratic government, where the individual citizen is slow to yield his individuality in any degree, even to the public good, such a commission might sit for ten years without having an applicant upon which to pass its constituted judgment; and after that lone applicant had received this judgment, the chances are that between himself and advisory friends the findings would be disregarded.

A fact too little regarded to-day is that our complex civilisation is such as to discourage talent and genius as it never before was discouraged.

When a young man has had four years of college work, he is eligible for matriculation in a medical school of standing. After which, according to estimates, it will cost him $1,000 to $1,500 to acquire his medical degree.

Do you see where the scheme of my friend would fall in this instance? Suppose that in the grammar grades of a public school some boy were discovered who showed unmistakable evidences of genius in surgery. What would it avail that boy if he were one of four or five children in a family of a father who drew a salary of $20 a week? There are a hundred chances to one that instead of ever becoming a noted surgeon, that boy will gravitate from the eighth grade in grammar school to the position of driver for a grocer's wagon.

Follow your bent if you can! Take no one—not ten—negatives for final answer! But if, in the face of the inevitable, you are forced to accept the next best thing, honest earnestness must bring its compensations.

A New Use for the Genus Cat

By HARRIS DICKSON

At the end of a winding and climbing red road, an old red brick house clung to the Allegheny mountains. A slashing scar of red against the green—that was Chestnut Crag. The hams here had a different flavor; the apples had a peculiar fragrance; the musty old library could have existed nowhere save in Virginia. In truth, the Sinclairs lived only ten miles from the University of Virginia; and Monticello, the home of Thomas Jefferson, was on their road to town.

The quaint, pre-revolutionary house had got an absent-minded start. Its builder provided parlors and dining room, library and guest chambers—but forgot a staircase. "Oh, well," he said, "it doesn't matter; we'll cut off a piece of the hall and a corner of the library." This he did, and ran a sort of stepladder to the upper floor.

Ever since that day the people in Chestnut Crag have been forgetting things and losing things. In the bosom of the family they call themselves the "Ju-cose."

At one end of the colonial dining room is an alcove for the sedate and richly carved sideboard; to the left is a linen closet; to the right a silver closet, both opening inward to the sideboard. Those doors were kept locked, and those keys were lost. Once a week Mrs. "Ju-cose" sent to town for a locksmith to come and open her silver closet. "Well," said Katherine Ju-cose, "there is just one thing about this house that doesn't get lost; that's old Tom." The big gray cat always sat in the corner of the fireplace. She tied the keys around his neck. So whenever the Ju-cose wanted silver or linen, old Tom was there with the keys.

Moral of the Cash Register

By JOSEPH G. ROGERS

In the small office where retail sales across the counter were a part of the clerk's business there once dwelt an original cash register. Daily this register showed different results, sometimes being short and sometimes being way over.

The sales made were small, seldom averaging more than eight cents to the customer, and when some plutocratic person invested in 25 cents' worth of goods it was noted as a large sale. The necessity of handling pennies and making small change for nearly every purchaser may have accounted for the original trend of the register. There was, however, no suspicion of dishonesty because the machine about balanced month in and month out. The amount of the shortage when it was short was too small to tempt a thief, and the only explanation was that in the hurry and bustle of waiting on a number of customers at once, with a number of different clerks "ringing up" on the register, mistakes were frequently made.

After several months of this "high and low and closing quotations" on the part of the register the proprietor became extremely angry. Shouting that it was a shame that his clerks couldn't handle a simple thing like a cash register, he declared that he would look after it himself, just to show them how it should be handled.

No one else touched it. As was to be expected—by every one but himself—at the end of the first day the machine was $1.68 shy, and at the end of the second day 86 cents over, and at the end of the fourth day the proprietor gave it up in disgust.

With this test as proof the proprietor now declares that where a number of small sales are handled in a hurry, and where the clerk must sell the goods and handle the register one man, no matter how faithfully he works, may make frequent errors.

The Transcontinental

The steel has been put down for 40 miles west of Cochrane on the Transcontinental Railway and will be extended twenty miles further within the next thirty days.

Two temporary bridges had to be built, the permanent steel structure will be put in place during the winter. The grade practically completed for 100 miles west of Cochrane.

East of Cochrane contractors have had some trouble with a kolter dam at the Abitibi where the high bridge is to be built.

Because there is no temporary structure here the contractors Foley, Welsh and Stuart are now engaged cutting out a tote-road sixty-five miles long through the forest northeast of Lake Abitibi. Across this Lake and over this new made trail they will carry supplies during the winter. These supplies will be cached at intervals along the line for use when spring opens again. About sixty miles of the first 100 miles of grade has been completed. The steel is down and the track is being ballasted for the first eight miles east of Cochrane to the Abitibi River.

Mr. Martin MacAuliffe of Atcheson, Kansas, has returned home after an enjoyable visit with friends here.

Get Well First

Don't risk even a penny—until health first returns.

And I mean just exactly that.

I am the one physician who says to the sick "I will out of my own pocket, pay for your medicine if it fails to bring you help."

And for 20 years Dr. Shoop's medicines have been used and recommended in every city and hamlet in America. They are positively endorsed in every community—and everywhere.

When the Stomach nerves, or the Heart or Kidney nerves fail, it means sick ness know how quickly Dr. Shoop's Restorative will bring them back to health again. But best of all, they positively take no money risk whatever. They know that when health fails to Then Shoop will restore, Dr. Shoop will pay the drug gist for time and test a full 30 day treatment is freely granted. But write me first for an order.

This will save delay and disappointment.

All druggists sell Dr. Shoop's Restorative and Dr. Shoop's Rheumatic Remedy, but all are not authorized to give the 30 day test. So drop me a line or please—for I have appointed an honest and responsible druggist in almost every community to hand out in whose store you may Pay, every day, medicines to the sick. Perhaps a word or two from me will clear up some serious ailment. I have helped thousands upon thousands For by my private prescription or personal advice plan. MARRIAGE IN MOROCCO.

Negotiations by the Parents—Fortune Telling Made Easy.

Negotiations for the marriage of, say, Ali Mahmoud are now in progress. The parents are arranging the whole affair. Probably Ali will not see his future bride until after the ceremony. The wild, passionate stories of the east do not occur in Morocco. Moor says that "a woman is like unto your shadow—run away from it and it will always follow you; run after it and you never catch it."

Ali Mahmoud's, indifference to the personal appearance of his intended spouse is not shared by the young lady. Zaida is just fourteen years of age and, following the usual custom, has recourse to magic to gain an idea of the appearance of her future lord and master. The marabout, whose services at this juncture are indispensable, is now requisitioned. This saintly person finds it an easy matter to practice on the ignorant superstitious females.

Without any difficulty he ascertains the identity of the bridegroom and carefully studies his personal appearance. He then repairs to the residence of the bride on the day appointed. A Thursday is set apart for these seances. The prospective bride smears the left side of her face with khol and rouge and prepares a huge plate of couscous with her left hand. Then she pays successive visits throughout the city to seven baths, seven mills, seven bakeries and to the banks of seven streams to invite the genii to supper.

At midnight the females of the house assemble at the gate of the house and in total darkness go through the prescribed formula of welcome to the ghostly visitants. The couscous is already set out for the delectation of the supernatural guest. When a reasonable time has elapsed for the supposed genii to finish their meal all present ascend to the housetop.

Fires are lighted, and the marabout, with great solemnity, throws small pellets of various drugs upon them on behalf of the girl for whom the oracle is to be interrogated. By the various forms assumed by the flames and smoke the marabout then professes to describe the future husband of the girl. The ceremony concluded, he takes his departure with a substantial reward and a further enhancement of his reputation as a magician and holy man.

A few days later Zaida receives a present from her future father-in-law, and the contract of marriage is definitely arranged.

A deputation of the bridegroom's relations now come to fetch her, and the procession is formed to lead her to her new home.

Ali Mahmoud and Zaida eyed each other curiously, for it is the first time they have met. The long and tedious ceremonies and the six days of feasting over, they take up their quarters in his father's house until such time as he can afford to set up an establishment of his own. Zaida is relegated to the monotonous indoor life of the Mohammedan women. She is never allowed to leave the house. Like most of her class, she has very little culture. She can neither read nor write, while she is denied the solace of prayer from sheer ignorance of the prescribed. Her prime is passed in trivial household duties until such time as her husband can afford to buy a negress slave. Her amusements consist of futile embroidery and long hours at eventide spent on the terraces reserved for the women.

A New Railway Centre.

Kamloops, the thriving town at the junction of the Fraser and Thompson Rivers in British Columbia, is at present the scene of great railroad activity, and all the indications point to its becoming a divisional point on three railway systems—the Canadian Northern and the Grand Trunk Pacific, as well as the Canadian Pacific. For the engineers on the Canadian Northern and Grand Trunk Pacific are discovering what Sir Sandford Fleming discovered thirty years ago—namely, that the natural connection between the Edmonton district and Vancouver via the Yellowhead Pass is through the Thompson Valley. The chief engineering difficulties are not between Kamloops and the Yellowhead, but between the Yellowhead and Edmonton, where 200 miles of mucking country are baffling the graders, and may hold back transcontinental construction in this direction for some years to come.

Queen Victoria's Journals.

Lord Esher has been giving some interesting particulars of Queen Victoria's journals. There are said to be over 160 volumes of them, all written closely in a small running hand. The last entry is dictated and was added just ten days before the Queen died. The journals, it is said, will never be seen hereafter in their complete form.

Bernard Shaw's Next Play.

Bernard Shaw has written another play since "The Showing Up of Blanco Posnet," says The Nation. It is entitled "Press Cutting. Compiled From the Correspondence and Editorial Columns of the Daily Press," and consists of an ironical discussion of woman's suffrage and universal military service.

England's Oldest Barber Dead.

Allen Batchelor of Guildford, England, who was reputed to be England's oldest barber, died recently at the age of 88. He claimed to have been patronized by kings, dukes, bishops, judges, policemen, politicians, publicans, "and sinners no end."

A PERFECT DREAM CITY.

London on a Glorious Day of Sunshine and Blue Sky.

The following pretty description of a sunshiny day in London appeared recently in an English publication:

London was yesterday a city of gold and green and white. Golden sunshine in the streets and parks, green foliage on every tree upon which the sun shone down, white buildings, newly built or newly painted, with clear outlines under a sky of Oriental blue. What dream-city could be more perfect than London on such a day?

Truly it was an unforgettable day—a day on which it is good to be alive, very good to be young when the spring calls to the blood and when perfume steals into the senses; good even to be old and to sun oneself in the memory of other spring days as golden as this.

The London season is beginning! Good words to those who have the leisure and means to play the game, the merry game of the social whirligig, good even to those who are merely lookers-on.

Yesterday the fun had begun. The King was in town, the court was in the capital the servants of society had pulled up the window blinds of town houses and the sun was shining.

So the streets were very full of life at its best and brightest. Down Bond street and Piccadilly—the highways of the lessy ones—there was an endless tide of carriages, and the sun gleamed upon brightly polished panellings, flashed fire from the brass head lamps and metal work of magnificent motor cars, and glistened on the smooth flanks of good horses, which went dashing by as proudly as though there were no such thing as petrol.

Women were in the carriages and walking on the shady side, and one man sighed because he could not wear salmon pink, or Madonna blue, or walk in lilac beauty like these ladies who were the flowers of the London streets. Flowers, literally because all their hats were in full blossom, brought out by this brilliant sunshine, and from the top of an omnibus one looked down upon moving bouquets of roses and daisies and forget-me-nots, as though all the flowers in Kensington Gardens had been plucked as the garlands of England's fair women.

Yet the men did their poor best, yesterday, to do credit to the divine day. Old Bucks had put on white waistcoats, and young bloods in new silk hats—bright and beautiful things—had put yellow gloves upon their hands. The Green Park was a paradise, into which had slunk many poor devils, against whom the gates of this paradise were not closed. These Weary Willies had come out of the slums, for spring called to them also, and they lay, in lazy happiness and seedy clothes, like corpses on the emerald greensward, which was a carpet worthy of Kings.

A Cool Deadhead.

Mr. Oscar Asche, the London actor, who, with his wife, Miss Lily Brayton, is on his way to Australia—his native land—which he left eighteen years ago, remarked just before he set sail, apropos of the slump in theatres, that the deadhead is a destroyer of drama. "Once give a man a free seat for a play," he said, "and you will have a difficulty ever after to make him 'pay to go in.' While I was touring with a certain highly-respected manager, we were playing at a long-famous old playhouse in an ancient town. We had billed 'Macbeth' for the Friday night, but during that day the theatre was burnt down. For our next week there our chief contrived to borrow a playhouse a little way out of the district. On reaching there to rehearse on the Monday the manager received a letter saying that the writer had been given two dress-circle orders for the performance of 'Macbeth,' but as that play was not performed owing to the destruction of the theatre, the writer surmised that the manager would remit the money value of those orders."

Clever People Who Can't See.

The history of the past assures us that there are few, if any, departments of human knowledge in which the blind have not distinguished themselves, says The War Cry.

Two of the world's greatest poets—Homer and Milton—were sightless; while Dr. Saunderson, once professor of mathematics in the University of Cambridge, lost his eyesight when twelve months old, but, although his parents were poor, he advanced so greatly in knowledge that he became an expert Greek scholar.

Then, John Metcalfe, of Knaresborough, another blind man, became a champion swimmer, a musician, and an engineer, who distinguished himself in building bridges and making roads.

There still exists, we believe, a monument to the memory of Dr. Hugh James, the blind physician of Carlisle; while in Birmingham there is a blind man who cleans and repairs clocks, and has even constructed new ones.

Governor's Son as Boy Scout.

Roderick Dudley, son of the Governor-General of Australia, has joined the Boy Scouts, and has, says The British Australasian," qualified in Sydney and received his uniform. One of the rules provides that the Scouts shall record at least one good action every day, and as "cleaning up the back yard" at their homes is the popular good deed, the lad's fellow members are somewhat curious to see what good action he will report.

HAYBUILD LINE.

The Lindsay Warder says:— Mr. S. Anderson, who is now operating 40 miles of electric railway and represents large interests, is looking into the possibility of a street railway system from Fenelon Falls to Bobcaygeon passing through Sturgeon Point, and it has been suggested that a large hotel and pavilion may be erected on the beach at the east end during the coming winter. This would materially increase the earnings of the railway, and also make Sturgeon Point one of the most popular resorts in Canada.

HUNTING THE RHEA.

Ostrich-like Bird Furnishes Exciting Sport in Patagonia.

Down in Patagonia one of the principal sports is the chase of the rhea, a member of the ostrich family, but not quite so large as the ostriches we see in the circuses and the zoological gardens. The bird, however, is a swift runner and can set a fast pace for a horse—or a greyhound. It has also wide sagacity, for frequently it will double on its course and sometimes in that way succeeds in eluding its pursuers altogether. The requisites for the rhea hunter are a horse, a fast dog and a bola. The dog finds the scent of the bird, and the hunter pursues as fast as he can on the horse. When he comes close enough he makes use of the bola. This instrument is made of two or three balls of lead or stone attached to a throng which is six or eight feet long. When it is hurled at the fleeing bird the balls wind about the part where the bola strikes and serve to impede its progress. The hunters and dogs then rush forward and dispatch the rhea.

When the bird sees that it is in danger often it will crouch down flat on the ground and stretch its neck out under the grass and wait until the dogs pass. If the wind is blowing against the scent this ruse often saves the life of the game. If it is discovered it usually is so startled that it makes no effort to escape. The rhea will run for five or six miles on a stretch, and it gives dogs and riders all they can do to keep up with it. But when the game is captured the hunters feel that the chase is worth while, for the wings of the birds are not unlike turkey meat in flavor, and the meat of the thigh has a taste not unlike that of horseflesh, which connoisseurs pronounce very fine.

THE PIPE OF PEACE.

Etiquette of the Calumet Observed by the American Indian.

When you read an account of the conclusion of a treaty with the Indians you are pretty sure to find that the calumet was brought out and handed around. The calumet is a pipe of peculiar construction. The bowl is of red sandstone, and the stem is of reed, about two and a half feet long. The stem is decorated with women's hair and feathers, which hang from it like a fringe.

This pipe is the famous "pipe of peace," used by the American Indian. After a treaty has been concluded the pipe is produced and filled with tobacco. It is then handed to the representatives of the party with whom the treaty has been made, and they must take at least one whiff of it. It is afterward passed around among the Indians present, who also take a whiff of it, and that ceremonial ratifies and makes sacred the compact that has just been entered into. The passing around of the calumet is an act of hospitality, and a refusal to take it is considered a dire offense.—Chicago News.

A Fireside Game.

Word guessing is a good game to play in the evening. One of the players thinks of a word and says, "I have a word of six letters; the first letter is 'p' and the last is 's.'"

The guessers are allowed to ask any questions they like, which the leader is bound to answer, if he can do so without actually telling the word. The player who guesses the word correctly chooses the next one, and a prize is given by the player guessing the longest number of words.

An Order For the Grocer.

Good morning, Mr. Grocer Say! My order's long today.
My pantry's nearly empty now, because I've been away.
I want a pound of nice white flour and yeast to make some bread,
A pounds of currants for a cake, some baking powder red.
But butter give me half a pound, of sugar most a ton.
I must make candy right away, before the morning's done.
Credit? Why, of course I don't. And cashin? No, indeed!
Don't interrupt and bother me. I know the things I need.

A quart of cream vanilla bring, and beware, too, and spice.
A pound of nutmegs—don't forget—it makes things taste so nice.
Want ten dozen freshest eggs, some "Vegetated cream"
Apples, "least a peck or two; some dumplings I must steam.
Take a box of oranges and chocolate, five cakes,
And delicious caramel—such lovely ones I makes!
Don't do my order, please. I want none badly soon,
I can get them all cooked up by luncheon time this noon.

AMONG THE CANNIBALS.

British Force Goes Into Wilds of Northern Nigeria.

Details of the expedition lately concluded by the southern Nigerian Government, by which some 5,000 square miles of hitherto unknown and unadministered country in the north and on the borders of Northern Nigeria have been brought under effective control, have been received by Reuter's Agency.

These operations, which were carried out among tribes who for the most part had never previously seen a white man, proved entirely successful, and were so managed that there was practically no serious fighting. They began early in November last, and only concluded in the middle of April.

The British force consisted of 700 men of the southern Nigeria Regiment, under the command of Colonel Trenchard, who had with him thirty officers, six Maxims and 700 carriers.

The Yala people, in whose country the columns remained for a month, gave a good deal of trouble. When their villages were entered they were found to be deserted, the women and live stock having been removed. The men meanwhile had formed bush camps in the open yam fields, where they could see the approach of the British, and had also hidden in the branches of trees scouts, whose duty it was to fire signal guns.

The people then took to their heels and encamped elsewhere, but fired on the column when they were in what they regarded as a tight corner. This tribe, like most of those encountered, was armed with flint locks and carried poisoned arrows, but, fortunately, the country was fairly open and the aim not very accurate.

After some weeks of this kind of thing the Yala came in, but declined to give up their arms.

In places the natives, hearing of the approach of a large force, dug pits and planted stakes to prevent their progress. What little hostility there was occurred during the earlier part of the operations in the Okpoto country and among the northern Ibo tribes.

Colonel Trenchard's force started in two columns—one from the Niger and one from the Cross River—with instructions to make for an unknown spot marked X, the two afterward joining at Ibem, where the first base camp was formed. From this base small columns were sent out in various directions, each being responsible for a definite district, which was to be mapped, and where the officers' duty was to get into touch with the natives and to show them how to make good roads.

In each case the commanding officer of the column summoned the local chief and explained the Government terms, emphasizing the fact that all human sacrifices must stop, that good roads must be made, and that a British commissioner would be appointed, who would settle all disputes.

On these occasions there were impressive gatherings of thousands of natives, in many cases cannibals, and for the most part naked, or practically so. They did not show undue delight at the advent of the British, and, as a rule, silently listened to the recital of the Government terms, and then slowly dispersed.

The various columns report that they found far less human sacrifice and juju rites in the hitherto unknown north than among the tribes of the delta, and, on the whole, the people were of a better physical type. Several juju places were seen, and a big centre was destroyed. It was impossible to discover the nature of the juju rites practiced, but in the vicinity of one big juju house discovered in a bush clearing there was found a good deal of blood—whether human or not was not ascertained.

Wasting Valuable Time.

An old farmer died in a little village in the neighborhood of Paris. His fortune, the fruit of years of patient toil, was invested in a nice compact little farm. A nephew of the departed, believing himself to be heir, called a few days later on the lawyer and before saying a word about the succession thought it only right and proper to shed a few tears.

"Poor uncle!" he murmured. "So kind, so affectionate—to think that I shall never see him again!"

The notary allowed the young man to give full vent to his sorrowful emotions, after which he quietly observed:

"I suppose you are aware that your uncle has left you nothing!"

"What!" exclaimed the nephew, suddenly changing his tone. "I'm not down in the will? Then why on earth did you let me stand weeping there and making a fool of myself for a good half hour!"

An Editor's Woes.

Editing a paper is a nice thing and no mistake. If we publish jokes people say we are rattle-brained. If we don't we are fools. If we publish original matter, they say we do not give them enough selections. If we give them selections, we are too lazy to write. If we don't go to church we are heathens. If we do we are hypocrites. If we remain in the office we ought to be out looking for news. If we go out, then we are not attending to business. If we wear old clothes, they laugh at us. If we wear good clothes, they say we are extravagant. Now, what are we to do? Just as likely as not someone will say that we purloined this from another paper. So we did.

Sir Wilfrid and Family Prayer.

The death of Rev. Dr. Williams of Montreal, recently, recalls a circumstance that concerns Sir Wilfrid Laurier, and that is vouched for by a prominent public man of Toronto, says a religious exchange.

Mrs. Williams was a daughter of Mr. Murray of Quebec, one of the old Puritan stock. Up to the age of eighteen Wilfrid Laurier could not speak a word of English, and he went to live in the home of Mr. Murray for the purpose of learning English. It was Mr. Murray's habit to read a portion of Scripture and have family prayer every morning, and the French-Canadian boy was told that he might remain during these devotions if he wished to. He did so, and was a member of the family circle for about four years.

After he had become distinguished in the public affairs of the Dominion, a friend who knew of his association with the family of Mr. Murray, asked him what effect it had on him, and his answer was at once an honest appreciation of good living and a tribute to principle. Said Sir Wilfrid:

"The sterling integrity of character and uprightness of life displayed in the home of Mr. Murray made such an impression upon me that I will never shake it off as long as I live."

Words of praise have ever prevailed in advertising "copy." That a producer should wax enthusiastic over his own wares is but human. But it's the praise of the consumer that counts—and it is to a discriminating and critical public that "Cosgrave's" refers you

It is safe to say that no product, of any kind, enjoys a more enviable reputation than does this same Cosgrave Beer of Toronto in markets where it is offered.

Its self-evidenthonesty of purpose, purity, brilliancy, body, and every other attribute that goes to make a perfect beer are ever in evidence.

COOK DECLINED CIGAR.

Offered By Clergyman—Said He Did Not Smoke.

New York, Sept. 23.—The welcome home accorded Dr. Cook by his family, after over two years' absence, was very affectionate. The Oscar III. was half way up the bay when the tug John K. Gilkinson, which had been chartered for Mrs. Cook, approached. Dr. Cook surveyed the craft through his binoculars, and as she came nearer he started to the companionway.

"Fred, here I am!" called Mrs. Cook from the pilot house. "Here are the children."

Dr. Cook was half way down the companionway, when, owing to the heavy sea, the rail of the tug came into collision with the steps and he made a hasty retreat. The next trial was successful. As Dr. Cook walked down the companionway the ship's band played "Hail to the Chief," which is followed a second later by "For He is a Jolly Good Fellow."

The physician leaped lightly across from the ladder to the hurricane deck of the tug, and affectionately greeted his wife. Two years had passed since they had last met—years fraught with anxiety and uncertainty and then at last the triumph which had brought to him fame throughout the civilized world.

"Where are the children?" asked Dr. Cook, and as they approached he caught Ruth, a child of ten, in his arms and kissed her. The younger child, Helen, came sidling up to him, a wistful youngster of four. She knew her father from his pictures only, for her recollections of him two years ago had almost faded.

"Hurrah for my papa and the Pole!" she cried, as she rushed to his arms.

"OH YOU UNCLE FRED."

It was with difficulty that Dr. Cook made his way through the crowd of photographers, who, not content with photographing him in every possible position, wanted to snap him some more. There were 30 reporters on board and twice that many camera artists.

"Oh, you Uncle Fred!" screamed an excited young woman who forced her way through the dense mass to the railing at the expense of her new fall gown.

"Hello, Lillie!" answered Dr. Cook with a big smile.

"Oh, mama, he recognized me, and I was the first to greet him over the boat rail!" about the delighted young woman. She was Miss Ladian Cook, a niece, who lives with her parents in the Bedford avenue section, Brooklyn.

John Weber's automobile had been drawn up within fifty feet of where the Grand Republic was roped to the end of the pier, but it was several minutes before the committee, one hundred policemen, and the military guard could place Dr. Cook and his wife in the tonneau because of the jam.

No such ovation to a private citizen in Brooklyn is remembered by even the oldest inhabitant of that borough who saw the greeting showered upon Dr. Cook. From the water to Bedford avenue in South Fifth St. human beings were packed on the sidewalks on both sides of the street so that walking, or even moving, was practically an impossibility.

PASSING THE ARCH.

As the long line of noisy automobiles turned into Bushwick avenue they were only two blocks from the triumphal floral arch which had been erected by the Celebration Committee in front of Dr. Cook's old home. Tears filled the explorer's eyes as he moved along, rapidly passing familiar scenes and coming now to the most cherished of all the spots in his native land.

Dr. Cook glanced over the side of the automobile as the car passed beneath the arch and looked long and steadily at his old home. The front of the building being covered so that scarcely a brick was discernable, with flags, bunting, and pictures of the former occupant. On the lawns and at the top of the iron picket fences surrounding the top were several hundred persons who had climbed there to better view the parade.

The parade passed on through Bushwick avenue in a straight line to the end of the route of march, at Highland Boulevard, where the automobiles swung about and returned through the same thoroughfare to the Bushwick Club at Hart street.

There was gathered perhaps the largest crowd that Dr. Cook has seen in his lifetime. For blocks the thoroughfare was practically impassable. Long lines of policemen, however, with Inspector Sweeny in charge, drove the more persistent ones back, and the explorer's automobile was given a small lane in which to draw up to the carriage stone, and Dr. Cook dismounted.

Shouts of "Oh, you, Dr. Cook! Say something!" greeted the explorer. His escorts, however, refused to permit him to stop long enough to make a short speech, and he merely turned, waved both his hands, and was carried off into the building. [illegible] the crowd yelled itself hoarse in its enthusiasm.

The shouts that went up when the explorer was recognized at the ballpark of the club were deafening, and continued for ten minutes, while Dr. Cook waved his hands and bowed and smiled his acknowledgments to the cheering thousands. Through all this turmoil Helen and Ruth Cook, Dr. Cook's two children, occupied prominent positions on the balcony. Several times Dr. Cook remarked that he did not think such a demonstration to a private citizen was possible. He stood bareheaded in full view of the shouting crowd, his arm thrust through that of his wife.

LONE ST. KILDA.

How the Inhabitants Live on Isolated Little Island.

Surrounded for eight months of the year by an isolating veil, which hides it almost impenetrably from the outer world, St. Kilda casts its mists in May, and comes forth to join the chorus of the isles again. With the resumption of the tourist traffic, the furthest fling of the Western Hebrides enters upon its summer "season." From now till August its people live in the stir of coming and going steamers. It is only within the last 15 years (says The Scotsman) that the Lone Isle began to be included in the itinerary of the tourist. In earlier days the islanders had to be satisfied with the certainty of a call from the factor's smack once or twice a year. It brought the factor on board. He came, as he comes yet, to collect the rents in kind—cattle, grain, cheese, sea bird feathers, fulmar oil, dried fish, and other limited products—and he supplied them with their fresh stock of meal, flour, salt, tea and sugar, and shawls. Tea and sugar are still comparatively modern luxuries, with only 20 years' familiarity to spice their pleasure. Shops are unknown on the island, so each householder must calculate the exact quantity of goods and merchandise he will require to tide him over the winter. There remain, of course, the dairy produce of the island, and the mutton which its sheep supplies. Beef or pork are never eaten.

The St. Kildians give all their cattle to the proprietor for rent, and, unlike the Irish, they don't keep pigs. Comparatively modern illustrations show the fashion in dress to have been distinctly bizarre, but it is much more up to date now. The men manufacture their own tweed and cut out their own tailors. Occasionally, indeed, they ply the needle on behalf of the women, who are fond of bright colors, a not unknown feminine idiosyncrasy. Scarlet is their favorite shade. Imported shawls are worn on the head in winter time, and Turkey red napkins in summer. Some of the younger women order their costumes from the "mainland," but the majority are content with dresses of their own making. Education is now on an organized basis, although it is only within recent years that the Ladies' Association in Edinburgh began to send students to teach English to the children. Previously the children were taught Gaelic by the most proficient individual among the adults; obviously a haphazard method.

There are about 1,000 sheep scattered over the islands on common pasturage, and every owner has his private mark on his possessions. The sheep are small and wild, and can only be caught by dogs. That accounts for the number of dogs which are kept. In June, the shearing season, all the sheep are driven to ledges on the rocks, where they have a choice of being caught, or of jumping over the precipice. The latter alternative is not infrequently accepted. Tweed making is the principal industry, and it provides the women with the classic occupation of spinning the wool derived from their own sheep. The men do all the weaving, contrary to the custom in Harris, where the women weave as well as spin. At this work the long winter nights are spent, spiced with rivalry. The spinners and weavers of one house vie with those of others as to the quantity and quality of the tweed which will be produced, and it is a case of sitting up and rising early almost to the limit of endurance. In April the land claims attention, and the tweed is laid aside pending the arrival of the Glasgow steamers in May. With the first boat this year has gone out the Glasgow agent, who disposes of the manufactured tweed.

Shipwrecked Thirteen Times.

Mr. John Beveridge, of Kirkcaldy, who recently passed away, had an unusually adventurous career, and was quite a "character." At an early age he ran away to sea, and started as a ship's boy. For the forty-two years following he was only on shore for short periods and at long intervals, and thirteen times suffered shipwreck. Once, when wrecked in St. Andrew's Bay, he saved his life by swimming ashore, hanging to a live sheep. Beveridge sailed in many of the vessels which belonged to the Kirkcaldy whaling fleet, and when the last three whalers belonging to that port were wrecked he was a member of the crew on each occasion. For fifteen years he was a naval reservist, and twenty years ago he sailed his last voyage in the Esperance of Dundee to the Baltic. To the end he always wore the sailoring garb.

At Cobweb Corner.

Madam Rickrack built her house;
Then, sitting down within it,
She saw Miss Bunny walking by
And said, "Prue, stop a minute!"

But, oh, dear me, a sillous snare
Was stretched before the door,
And Bunny caught her pretty foot
And fell across the floor!

Madam Rickrack wept aloud.
But Bunny stopped her care
And said, "A helping hand is worth
Much more than all these tears."

Just then a cyclone rushed along—
'Twas Madge, her brushes flying.
It laid the Rickrack mansion low
And sent Miss Bunny flying.

Two Female Quixotes.

Two women in Natal are at present engaged in fighting the whole force of the British Government. The battle waged by the Misses Colenso—two sisters—is carried on without visible signs of outward warfare, and yet it is a struggle as daring, as strenuous, and a adventurous as any real engagement. Embarked in a quixotic attempt to rescue the native chief, Dinizulu, from the coils of British diplomacy, they have spent almost every cent they had in the world. For the last five years the elder sister, Harriet, has been the guide, philosopher and friend of the native chief, and remained near him while he waited in prison until her efforts got him out, only to be tried and re-convicted on another count. The devotion of the Colenso sisters to the cause of the black chief has won the respect of even their inveterate enemies, the English foreign wire-pullers, who wish to turn the land of Dinizulu over to white explorers.

No white people in the whole of South Africa have greater knowledge and experience of the Natal natives than the two sisters. They are the daughters of the famous Bishop Colenso, first and last Bishop of Natal, who devoted his life to studying the needs and ministering to the spiritual wants of the black men.

Lady Bancroft's Lovebird.

My wife had lost a little green parrot, for the return of which I offered a reward of ten shillings, giving our address, but no name. One of the newspapers, however, had a paragraph headed, "Lady Bancroft's Lost Lovebird." It was my privilege, with others, to receive at this period our present King and Queen—then Prince and Princess of Wales—at the Botanical Gardens, when His Royal Highness produced a newspaper cutting and said, "I think I have Lady Bancroft's lost bird. One of the bread was flying about for some days in the garden at Marlborough House, and a gardener succeeded in catching it this morning. Pray go and see if it is yours, as I hope it may be; but, mind, I shall claim the reward." I replied, "Certainly, sir; it is small, but appropriate, being—half a sovereign."—From "The Bancrofts: Recollections of Fifty Years."

It's a pity when sick ones drag the stomach or stimulate the Heart and Kidneys. That is all wrong! A weak Stomach, means weak Stomach nerves, always. And this is also true of the Heart and Kidneys. The weak nerves are instead crying out for help. This explains why Dr. Shoop's Restorative is promptly helping Stomach, Heart and Kidney ailments. The Restorative reaches out for the actual cause of these ailments—the failing "inside nerves." Anyway test the Restorative 48 hours. It won't vary so soon as that but you will surely know that help is coming. Sold by all dealers.

Found Gold.

It is believed that gold has been discovered in Peterborough County. While working on a piece of land on the Peterborough Lumber Company's limits in Cavendish Township, a short while ago, Elias Windover, whose home is in that vicinity struck rock that upon examination showed the presence of something that looked very much like gold. Mr. Windover brought samples to Peterborough and was advised by local gentlemen to send them to Toronto to the assayers. Mr. Windover is now awaiting a report from Toronto.

PE-RU-NA SCORES
Another Triumph in Canada.

"A Relief to Breathe Freely Once More."

MR. G. W. MARTIN, Hartford, Ont., choir leader at St. Paul's Episcopal church, writes:

"Peruna is a wonderful remedy for catarrhal troubles.

"I have been troubled with catarrh for a great many years, and always trying something for it, but was able only to secure temporary relief until I used Peruna.

"Only five bottles rid my system of all traces of catarrh, and I have not noticed the slightest trouble for several months.

"My head was stopped up, my breath offensive, and it is a relief to be able to breathe freely once more."

Were Scalded.

Ernest Hensley and Harry Chapman, two employes of Adam Hall's, were painfully scalded yesterday afternoon while engaged in making connections from a hot water boiler in the cellar of the Nicholls Hospital. Both men were working on top of the boiler when two nipples flew off, and each received the full force of the escaping steam about the body. The unfortunate workmen were taken into one of the wards where their injuries were attended to. Chapman was able to be out this morning, but Hensley who was the more severely scalded will be confined in the hospital for some days.

Signed the Contract.

Messrs. E. & F. Conroy signed the contract on Thursday for the Smith street bridge at the original price in their tender. The council would not grant any increase on account of the increase in the price of cement. The contractors are now preparing to get started on the work and to get as much done this year as possible.

Dysentery is a dangerous disease but can be cured. Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy has been successfully used in nine epidemics of dysentery. It has never been known to fail. It is equally valuable for children and adults, and when reduced with water and sweetened, it is pleasant to take. 9

Inspector Pleased.

Mr. Stevenson, inspector for the London, Liverpool & Globe Fire Insurance Company, was in the city yesterday on business. He was a casual visitor at the fire hall and was shown about. He was greatly pleased with everything and made many complimentary remarks on the way the hall is kept, the drill of the men and the apparatus. He asked to see the ladder drill and the men were turned out. As a result the inspector was much pleased. Ald. Phelan was present at the time and he was also greatly pleased.

An Investigation

A formal investigation of the collision which took place between the steamers Otonabee and Rainbow on August 31st, will be made today by Commissioner Captain Demers of Kingston, at the court house, at 10 o'clock. It will be remembered that the Otonabee and Rainbow collided just below Hale's bridge, the last named steamer being damaged by the meeting. It is an unusual case in Peterborough and will attract considerable attention.

Wedding Bells

BOLAND—O'KEEFE.

A very pretty wedding took place on Tuesday morning at 9 o'clock at St. Paul's church, Norwood, the Rev. Father Conway officiating. The contracting parties were Miss Helen F. O'Keefe, youngest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Michael O'Keefe of Norwood, and Mr. John P. Boland of Asphodel.

The bride who was given away by her father looked charming in a gown of cream Gloria satin and wore the customary tulle veil and white blossoms. She was assisted by Miss B. Herr, cousin of the groom, who wore a dress of blue silk mull over taffeta. Mr. Thomas O'Keefe, brother of the bride, performed the duties of groomsman.

After the ceremony the bridal party drove to the home of the bride's parents "Rath More," Norwood. After congratulations the party adjourned to the dining room where a dainty dejeuner was served the room being beautifully decorated, the color scheme being pink and white.

After the party had done justice to the good things served several toasts were proposed, which were responded to by the groom in a few well-chosen words.

To House Troops.

Glace Bay, N. S., Sept 23.—Col. Fages, commanding the troops in the strikestrike town, has sent a communication to the authorities there advising them that unless they take steps at once to furnish winter quarters for the military he will proceed himself to build the same, and in the latter even it will likely cost the town considerably more than if the authorities did the work.

The Coal Company has offered to the town to erect buildings at the net cost of labor and material. The estimated cost is $7,900. The company also offers to supply a site without charging rent for these dwellings The company also offers to buy back the houses at the termination of the stay sbtay of the soldiers, and will allow themdere, 20 per cent. of the original cost. The matter will come up at a special meeting of the Town Council.

War Almost Impossible, says Admiral Sir Edward Seymour

At Hudson-Fulton Celebration—He Declares That an Almost Unbreakable Bond Exists Between Nations of the Earth.

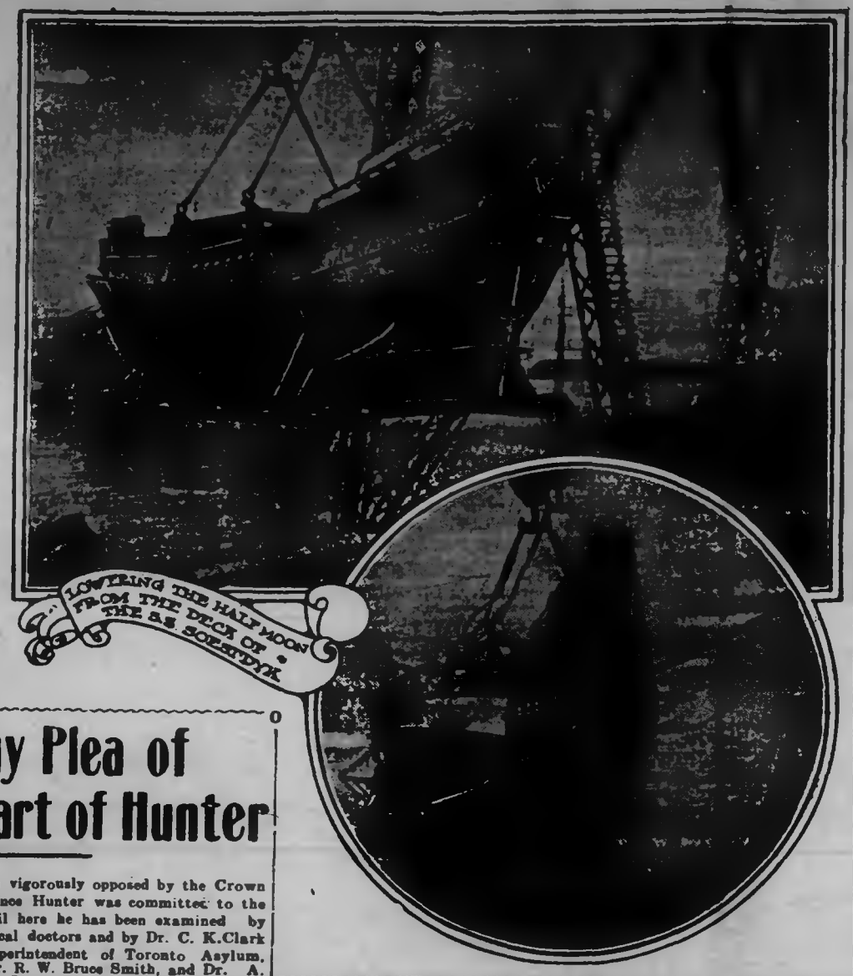
BATTLESHIPS SAFE-GUARDS OF PEACE

Present Assemblage of Fleets of all Nations is a Great Factor in the Promotion of Peace.

New York, Sept. 25.—Admiral Sir Edward Hobart Seymour, who is here in command of the British fleet with the giant cog of war, Inflexible, as his flagship for the Hudson-Fulton celebration, declared yesterday in an interview for the American, that battleships are the greatest safeguards for peace.

"The present assemblage of the fleets of all nations is a great factor in the promotion of peace," he said. "It gives each nation an opportunity to see for itself how strong and well prepared the other nations are, and that prevents war or thoughts of war.

"It is not difficult to understand that with the growth of the navies of the civilized nations the possibilities of war have been so greatly decreased that an armed conflict of any kind seems hardly with the bounds of possiblity. The interests of the civilized world are becoming more and more united every day. The great nations are all in harmony. I see nothing but peace and advancement in the future.



Will Oppose Any Plea of Insanity on Part of Hunter

Lindsay, Sept. 26.—The trial of Joseph Hunter, who, while proprietor of the Royal Hotel at Bobcaygeon, killed his wife, will begin on Monday afternoon at Lindsay, when the case will be presented to the grand jury. The court proceedings will begin on Tuesday morning, when Mr. George Tate Blackstock, K.C., will be the Crown prosecutor. This is the only criminal case at this assizes.

The defence will be based chiefly on a plea of insanity, but this, will be vigorously opposed by the Crown Since Hunter was committed to the jail here he has been examined by local doctors and by Dr. C. K. Clark superintendent of Toronto Asylum, Dr. R. W. Bruce Smith, and Dr. A. J. Johnson. Two at least of these, it is understand, will go down on Monday and give rebuttal evidence at the trial.

Inspector Wm. Greer has been assisting the local police in making a thorough investigation into the circumstances of the murder and will take part in the trial.

No Reserve Case for Blythe, wife Murderer

Toronto, Sept., 25.—Mr. Justice Riddell this morning refused, for the second time, to grant a stated case for the Court of Appeal in the matter of Walter Blythe, tried before him, convicted, and now at Toronto jail under sentence to be hanged on Friday.

Mr. T. C. Robinette, K.C., will make another application to the court of appeal next week. He still hopes to save his client from the gallows.

In giving judgment his lordship says:

"No one at the trial having made any pretence that the mind of the prisoner was affected by intoxication in the direction indicated, and there being no evidence in that direction, it would have been idle for me to have charged the jury upon what, of course, is undoubted law in the case of a prisoner proven to have been drunk at the time of committing the offence and told them that the presumption, that a man is taken to intend the natural consequences of the act, is rebutted in the case of a man who is shown to have been so affected by drink, that he was incapable of knowing that what he was doing was dangerous. No one doubts the law, but the law stated does not apply in the present case. "When a judge sums up to a jury he must not be taken to be inciting a treatis on the law." Rex. vs. Meade, 1909.

"The fact alleged that the prisoner had taken intoxicants, was urged in the view that being partially insane the mind of the prisoner. . .

The question of soundness or unsoundness of mind was fully dealt with in the charge, and no objection of any kind was raised.

No such case was made or alleged, nothing of the kind had been even suggested, till now, after months of consideration and two reprieves subsequent or incidental thereto. I must refuse the application on its merits.

The Hudson-Fulton Celebration Under Way

New York, Sept. 25. —The boom of guns aboard the warships in the North River awoke New York today to the first day of the celebration, long planned and long awaited, which honors the deeds of Henry Hudson and Robert Fulton. The river that Hudson found and where Fulton set his steamboat was the place towards where five million persons turned today for the most impressive pageant that ever floated in the New York harbor.

Bodies of the Gilding Bros. Found Clinging Together

Toronto, Sept. 25.—With the arms of the younger brother clasped about the legs of the elder, the bodies of the Gilding brothers, drowned in the bay Sunday afternoon last, were brought to the surface at 10 o'clock Saturday morning by the dragging party under the direction of Mait Aykroyd.

For nearly a week Mait Aykroyd has directed the efforts of a dragging party in search of the bodies.

The bodies, locked together as described, were found about a hundred yards from the island shore and between the R.C.Y.C. dock and the channel to Island Park. There were few weeds at the spot. From the position in which the bodies were found it is evident that when Joseph Gilding dived to rescue his younger brother, Hunter, the latter grasped him in a death grip which so crippled him that he was unable either to save himself or his brother, and thus both perished miserably at the bottom of the bay.

CHARLES C. McCARROLL.

The friends of Mr. and Mrs. Bert McCarroll, 490 George street, will sympathize with them in the loss of their infant son, Charles Clinton McCarroll, who passed away at 3.30 o'clock Saturday afternoon, at the age of one year and seven months. The funeral will be held this afternoon at 3.30 and interment will take place in Little Lake cemetery.

REV. DR. CODY.

Will Speak on National Issues at St. Luke's.

On Thursday night Rev. Dr. Cody, rector of St. Paul's church Toronto, will deliver the sermon at St. Luke's annual harvest home. His subject will not be of the harvest home nature but will be on National Issues. Rev. Dr. Cody is a recognized eloquent and scholarly speaker and probably no one could handle such a topic as well. It will be a real treat for the large congregation which will undoubtedly be present.

LANGUAGE WAS OFFENSIVE.

Sir Wilfrid Laurier Rebukes Vancouver Labor Body.

Ottawa, September 26.—The Trades and Labor Council of Vancouver having sent a strongly worded protest to Sir Wilfrid Laurier against the importation of Oriental labor to be used upon the mountain section of the Grand Trunk Pacific, the Premier has sent the following reply, which ought to settle the matter once for all :—

"Quite disregarding the offensive language I beg to inform you that no request has been made to this Government by anybody for the importation of Asiatic labor."

The now famous election protest trial in West Peterborough will open this morning at 11 o'clock before Mr. Justice Magee and Mr. Justice McMahon. It is the first election protest that has ever come to trial in West Peterborough, although several have been entered. The heavy weights of the legal profession arrived from Toronto last night and are ready for the fray. There is the greatest interest in the affair and undoubtedly the court room will be crowded every day the court is in session as all kinds of sensation are anticipated. A very large number of witnesses have been ordered to answer when called upon, and there is every reason to believe that the trial will last for several days at least

Collegiate Defeated Rough Riders in Opening Game

The Rugby season was ushered in on Saturday in Peterborough with a junior league game between the Collegiate Institute team and the Rough Riders at Riverside Park. The students had all the better of the clash, winning by 21 points to 1. Though lighter man for man they broke through repeatedly and after the first quarter started to pile up the score. About a hundred enthusiasts saw the game and were pleased with the fine article of Rugby that the youngsters put up.

The first quarter ended without any scoring. In the second period the game had not gone on many minutes before the P.C.I. boys got over for a touch down. It was not converted. Rough Riders got one point on a kick to the dead line. Score 5—1.

The students added seven more on the third quarter, getting a touch down, which was converted and a rouge.

In the final quarter they brought their total up to 21 by getting a try which was converted, a safety touch and a rouge.

Richardson, Gibson, Geale and Matthews were prominent on the Collegiate line-up.

"Ab." Quinlan was umpire and J. D. Clarke referee. They were very satisfactory.

The teams were:—

Shamrocks Tied for N. L. U. Championship

Montreal, Sept. 25.—"Will Shamrocks have to play a saw off with Montreal?" was the question that was on the tongues of all followers of lacrosse this morning, and the only answer was "Wait till this evening." Charlie Querrie was around bright and early and prophesied a win for the Indians, Just the thing the Montrealers, who were represented in force at the stands and club house, are looking for.

A goodly crowd was in attendance by the time the game was billed to start. The Tecumsehs were out on the grounds sharp at three o'clock, but the Shamrocks were tardy in following.

Eventually when both teams lined up, some remarkable changes were seen in the Irishmen's team, especially on the defence end. Dillon was put at point and Howard was shifted out to the defence field. The home was also changed about considerably.

The teams lined up as under:

Shamrocks — Muir, goal; Dillon, point; Kavanagh, cover; Howard, Tobin, Richford, defence; Munday, centre; Robinson, Hyland, O'Reilly, home; Hogan, outside, Brennan, inside.

Referee—W. Foran.

Judge of play—W. McIntyre.

For the first few minutes it looked to be all Shams. Sheer luck saved Tecumsehs on two occasions and then the Tecumsehs took a turn. Durkin took a long shot, but a force of sticks kept the rubber out of the net.

Jim Muir saved a hot one just after, but it was left for the Irish to score first through J. Brennan in 9.30.

The final score was Shamrocks 6, Tecumsehs 4.

A Millbrook Farmer Committed Suicide

Millbrook, Sept. 25.—Edward Widdows, a farmer residing about a mile west of Millbrook committed suicide this morning between ten and eleven o'clock by cutting his throat from ear to ear. This morning Widdows in company with his wife came to the village. He went to a barber shop, had a shave and then immediately returned to his home leaving his wife here. Upon arrival at the house he committed the rash act. His two small children and Mrs. Widdow's mother were in the house at the time. Drs. Turner and Montgomery of Millbrook, were summoned but Widdows only lived a few minutes.

The unfortunate man is said to have been suffering from nervous trouble for some time.

No inquest will be held.

NOT TO ENLARGE.

Peterborough Canoe Company Do Not Like the City's Offer.

The Peterborough Canoe Company will not enlarge their premises as a result of the council granting a lease on the property on the water front in the rear of their present buildings.

In conversation with Mr. Claude Rogers it was learned that the proposition of the council was not a favorable one to the company. Last spring when the lease was asked for and when the company was ready to build no action was taken by by the council and the fact of the proposed lease being subject to termination at the end of each year does not give the company the necessary confidence to build. Then again considerable expense would be incurred in filling in part of the property, and then by the time 20 feet were taken for a roadway, the size of the property would be considerably lessened. Instead, the north building which has been formerly used as a storehouse, will be used to relieve the overcrowded conditions existing at the present time and probably some time in the future the company will acquire other property to meet the demand of their flourishing business.

Not a minute should be lost when a child shows symptoms of croup. Chamberlain's Cough Remedy given as soon as the child becomes hoarse, or even after the croupy cough appears, will prevent the attack. 12

RALLY DAY AT KNOX.

Large Congregations and Interesting Services All Day.

The annual Sunday school rally day at Knox Presbyterian church was very successful and very gratifying to the teachers and officers. The church was decorated for the occasion. The morning service was devoted to the children and they were in attendance in large numbers. The special service provided by the general committee in Toronto was used and the singing was led by a juvenile choir, and Misses Jessie Miller and Clara Bartley rendered a duett. Rev. Mr. Keith took as his text, "What has the Bible done for us?" He pointed out that it has taught us seven things in contrast to our countries that have not yet received the Bible, viz.:— It has taught us about God, about ourselves, about Christ, about the Sabbath, how to live, about our home and about heaven.

In the afternoon there was a very large congregation and the feature was three addresses by Mr. R. F. McWilliams, Mr. J. F. Morrison and the secretary, Mr. Wallace Patten.

In the evening Rev. Mr. Keith addressed a large congregation on the text taken from St. Luke's 4-6. He delivered a special message to men and divided his talk into three parts viz., Religion is vital, it is personal and it is social. He appealed to the men to be loyal to the Church. Special music was given by the choir and included an anthem, a quartette, and a solo by Miss Robson.

ILL HEALTH, ITS CAUSE.

Sluggishness of Liver and Bowels.

It took me a long time to learn, and big doctors' bills in the bargain writes Mr. Ogilby, of Winnipeg, that the disturbance of my system was due simply to liver and bowel inactivity. A sleepiness and languor extinguished my old time ambition. I fear irritability of temper added little to the comfort of my family, yet the headaches, general misery and melancholy forebodings that weighed me down ought to be considered. Tonics, electric treatment and mineral waters in turn failing to cure me, the advertising of Dr. Hamilton's Pills and the testimonials supporting the claims of great medicinal virtue induced me to try them. The result of even the first box made clear that my own body was making its own poison, that by driving it from the system and removing the cause which undoubtedly resided in the liver and bowels, by Dr. Hamilton's Pills, my health would be as good as ever.

It seems certain to me that more than half the sickness we see about us is caused by carelessness in keeping the bowels open and the liver active. Dr. Hamilton's Pills I found do both, and do it better than other remedies. 25c. per box, at all dealers or The Catarrhozone Co., Kingston, Canada.

When the digestion is all right, the action of the bowels regular, there is a natural craving and relish for food. When this is lacking you may know that you need a dose of Chamberlain's Stomach and Liver Tablets They strengthen the digestive organs improve the appetite and regulate the bowels.

Heaviness at Pit of the Stomach

A Feeling of Uneasiness Before and After Meals is Quickly Cured With Nerviline.

Nearly everyone gets an occasional attack of indigestion and knows just what that heavy feeling means in the stomach. "I was subject to stomach derangements and my health was seriously hampered on this account. After meals I belched gas, had a weighty sensation in my stomach and over my left side. The first relief I got was from Nerviline— I used it three times a day and was cured. I continue to use Nerviline occasionally, and find it is a wonderful aid to the stomach and digestive organs."

NERVILINA RESTORES WEAK STOMACHS

The above letter comes from Mrs. P. R. Stetson, wife of an important merchant in Brockton, and still further proof of the oeptional power of Nerviline is furnished by A. E. Rossman, the well-known upholsterer of Chester, who writes: "Let everyone with a bad stomach use "Nerviline," and I am sure there will be few sufferers left. I used to have cramps, rumbling noises, gas on my stomach and severe fits of indigestion. Nerviline was the only remedy that gave me relief, and I found it so entirely satisfactory that I would like to have my letter of recommendation published broadcast in order that others may profit by my experience."

DOING BUSINESS WITH MARS.

A few days ago Thibet was explored for the first time. Now the north pole has been stepped on. The south pole has been approached to within little more than a hundred ground it is definitely known. Geography retains but a few small sections of untouched territory. Within a decade men have gained well-controlled means of transporting themselves beneath the surface of the ocean and thorough the air. Within a generation the heavens have been mapped out with much minuteness, and even the chemical constitution of many distant suns has been established. The surface of the moon has been well explored, and it is not at all improbable that before long the study of Mars will give us what may properly be called an exploration of that planet.

Just at present, indeed, Mars is rather a black sheep in the public eye. It is quite true that a good many foolish things have been written about it. But the foolish things have been given unnecessary importances by some sour-faced critics. All the yellow that stains them does not make them as marvelous as the facts that have been learned and the possibilities of further knowledge that astronomers now have. It has been established that Mars shows on its surface certain uniformities in contour of a kind which men inevitably class as artificial in contrast with the hap-hazard disorder of the things they call natura.. Who or what the artificers may be is mere speculation. but the phenomena, of artificiality are established. A year ago the discovery of water vapor on the surface of Mars was announced, and elaborate observations on Mount Whitney have just been made for further tests. Now Professor Lowell and Professor Very, by exceedingly fine processes of spectroscopic analysis, have discovered oxygen in the atmosphere of Mars. There is nothing yellow either about these discoveries or their announcement, and they unquestionably mean that life of some kind on Mars is a possibility

Certainly the further exploration of Mars is no absurdity. The body of the explorer need not travel to the planet if his eyesight can travel and if his instruments can make tests finer far than the ordinary tests we make with our senses on the surface of the earth. The mountain top of science is incomparably more wonderful than the mountain top from which one may look across an earthly landscape.

By way of illustrating the wonderful minuteness of physical measurements, Sir Joseph Thomson, president of the British Association, said at Winnipeg that the mountain top from which one may look across an earthly Landscape.

By way of illustrating the wonderful minuteness of physical measurements, Sir Joseph Thomson, president of the British association, said at Winnipeg that the smallest particle of unelectrified matter that can be identified is that amount of the gas neon in the atmosphere which at atmospheric pressure would occupy a space of one two-millionth of a cubic centimeter, or about one thirty-millionth of a cubic inch. But in testing electrified matter the physicist can divide his unelectrified matter by a million and then by a million again and still not be outside of his range.

AN ENCOURAGING CONDITION.

Iron is the barometer of business. Accepting this as a proverb founded on fact, the condition of the great iron-producing concerns in Canada and the United States is highly encouraging. All Canadian iron and steel works are in operation on full time, with all the orders they can handle for a year ahead. In the United States the prospects of the trade may be truly described as magnificent. The Iron Trade Review, which has exceptional sources of information, estimates the business of the United States Steel Corporation for the year 1910 at a thousand million dollars. That amount of business, it is stated, would be an increase of 32 per cent. over the business of the best year the corporation has heretofore known. One can hardly realize the magnitude of the volume of industry indicated by these stupendous figures. When the expenses of the United States amounted to the same sum that the product of this one concern will reach next year, a great cry was raised at its enormity. Yet here is a private industrial enterprise which, in response to a trade demand, produces iron and steel in value as great as the sum required to carry on the affairs of the nation. This comparison will give an idea of the wonderful development of industry at the present time, ior iron and steel are the basic raw material of all other industries, without which even agriculture could not be conducted with success. Truly this has been well named the age of iron and steel.

Physicians Who Know Recommend Algonquin Park.

Many people have chosen resorts by the sea for their vacation this summer, others the mountains, and many the inland waters of the "Highlands of Ontario" for that much needed rest that one should take at least once every twelve months. In many cases the desired haven was found, but in others, the more fashionable resorts did not give the restful quiet which in most cases is needed and good accomplished. There is one return to the office with only half the place, however, which offers unlimited inducements to those whose health is run down, or those who are in need of relaxation from worry and work. This place is known as the Algonquin National Park of Ontario, situated 205 miles north of the City of Toronto and 168 miles west of Ottawa. Here the conditions are Ideal. The altitude at the Park station, your objective point is 1700 feet above the sea level. The "Highland Inn," built for the accomodation of 100 people on a bluff over-looking Cache Lake, is a comfortable hotel set on one of the beauty spots of this charming reserve.

Modern with bathrooms with hot and cold water, large, bright sleeping rooms, cosy lounging rooms with large, bright open fire places, are a few of the special features. The "Inn is also heated by furnace.

ADVERTISE IN THE TIMES.

"Love-All"

By J. Sackville Martin

The week's rain was over, the sun was gloriously, the surface of the court had dried. Charlie Acton flourished his racket exultantly. The prospect of an afternoon's healthy exercise set the blood tingling in his body.

Inside the netting the tutelary genius of the place had chipped, plaster and drew his bow at a venture and sent the height of his pedestal. Charlie returned a ball at him and laughed as the fragments of plaster fell off.

"Come on, Edie!" he shouted. "Are you going to be all day?"

The level of protest for it was nothing less evoked a vision of a slender maiden, fair-haired and slenderly attire in white pique, carrying a racket.

"What a noise you make!" she said reprovingly.

"You girls take such a lot of time getting yourselves," he answered.

"Horribly speech," she retorted. "But I was very quick."

"Come on, then," the plaster of Cupid "Come on there," said Charlie, and sent a second ball at the statue. His aim was true, and a section of plaster fell.

"Poor Cupid!" said the girl. "It's not to have nothing put around it."

"A lot better for the world if he were," said Charlie grimly).

"Charlie! What's wasting time now? What are you going to give me?"

"Fifteen and a licking."

"But you're not."

"What? Not 15?"

"No. I'll take 15. Not a licking."

"You won't be able to help it. Come on."

They took their places on opposite sides to the net. The service fell to Charlie. Gently he sent the ball over.

"If you insult me with another service like that," said Edie, ignoring it, "I won't play, so there!"

"All right then, take that!" Charlie sent in an express. "Got you that time, I think."

"Try it again."

"I will. Take that. Oh, pretty!"

"Do you mean me?" asked Edie, demurely.

"I'm dashed if I do, my dear! I meant your return."

"Yes. It did make you look a bit silly, didn't it?"

"Think I look silly?"

"You did."

"All right, my fair cousin. I'll make you look sillier before I've finished with you."

"And I," murmured the damaged Cupid, unheard, "will make you both look silly before I have finished with you. I'll teach you to spoil my plaster."

Service, return, and rally went on through the afternoon. Charlie was cool; Edie flushed and panting. Her hair was no longer the perfection of neatness, but its stray curls framed her face adorably. At length, as she rushed across the court to take a short forehand drive, she stumbled, and, putting out her hand to save herself, fell with her palm against the pedestal upon which Cupid perched his bow.

"Oh, oh dear!" she cried. "I've hurt my wrist!"

"What's up now?" said Charlie, standing over her and looking at the flushed face upturned to his with lively admiration. "You're not really hurt, are you?"

"I am. It's that statue."

"Confoundedly in the way, that Cupid!" growled Charlie. "Sure you're not shamming?"

"I'm not. You can look if you like. See my wrist!"

Charlie knelt down.

"It's frightfully swollen, isn't it?" she said, extending it.

"It's an awfully pretty wrist," he said, taking it tenderly.

"It isn't. It's swollen."

"I never knew it was so pretty before," he continued.

"It's the swelling that makes it that shape," she explained. "It will go down in time."

"Edie, you little humbug, it isn't swollen at all!"

She tried to snatch her hand away.

"I must say you haven't much sympathy," she said. "Let it go if there's nothing the matter with it."

"There is nothing the matter with it; that's why I'm keeping it."

"I can't see what my wrist is to you."

"No? Suppose I was to ask for the hand?"

"Charlie!"

"Yes?"

"You— What do you— Why do you— Oh, don't you think we had better go on with our game?"

"Couldn't allow it, my dear. Your wrist is sprained. Besides, you haven't answered my question."

"You shouldn't ask such silly questions."

"Is it a silly question?"

"Yes."

"And why?"

"Because because you ought to know the answer."

"Ah!"

Conversation became incoherent, except perhaps to Cupid, whose language it was. It was at least 15 minutes before English was spoken again.

"I wonder what the score was when we left off," said Edie, with a fine air of detachment.

"Love—all," murmured Cupid to the rosebushes. "I said I'd teach them to spoil my plaster."

It's a pity when sick ones drug the stomach or stimulate the Heart and Kidneys. That is all wrong! A weak Stomach, means weak Stomach nerves, always. And this is also true of the Heart and Kidneys. The weak nerves are instead crying out for help. This explains why Dr. Shoop's Restorative is promptly helping Stomach, Heart and Kidney ailments. The Restorative reaches out for the actual cause of these ailments—the failing "inside nerves." Anyway test the Restorative 46 hours. It won't cure so soon as that but you will surely know that help is coming. Sold by all dealers.

Don't Risk even a penny—until health returns. And I mean just exactly that. I am the one physician who says to the sick, "I will, out of my own pocket, pay for your medicine if it fails to bring you help!" And for 30 years Dr. Shoop's medicines have been used and recommended in every city and hamlet in America. They are positively standard in every community—and everywhere. Then why pay the cash, and at your risk, for other unwarranted and uncertain medicines? Thousands upon thousands have in the past successfully used Dr. Shoop's Restorative. When the Stomach, with nerves for the Heart or Kidney nerves fail, a new nerve, Shoop's Restorative will bring them back to health again. But last of all, they positively take no money risk whatever. They know that when Health fails to return Dr. Shoop will himself gladly pay the druggist for that test. And for that cost a full 30 day treatment is freely granted.

RAIN SPOILS PAGEANT

FIRST DAY OF CHURCH SPECTACLE PROVES RIDICULOUS.

Bad Weather Mars Effect of Great Historic Object Lesson in London—Mud Bedraggled Saints and Monks Make Scene of Reverence Almost Comical—Retrospect of Church is Given by Huge Company.

After many months of hard work, of enduring enthusiasm, and of those little troubles which are inevitable in a great assembly of amateur actors, the English Church Pageant a few days ago gave its opening performance.

Alas! the elements were not propitious. The day was the worst we have had this summer—cold, rainy, utterly dismal. It was most unfortunate, because the pageant depended so much on the weather, not only for the comfort of actors and audience, but for its propriety.

The colors wanted the sun to bring out their richness and harmonies. All the colors on the field were dimmed and drabbled by the dank, dull atmosphere which clung about the actors. Instead of the joyousness and gaiety of those living pictures of mediæval crowds on the green field, with its encompassing trees in heavy foliage, there were rather somber effects of poor people in unfamiliar garments, bedraggled in the heavy rain, and moving through the mist. This somber tone was deepened as the afternoon wore on and the light failed.

Then, too, the weather robbed the pageant of some of its revenue and dignity. It made some of the scenes fall from the sublime very near to the ridiculous, because the sympathy of one's imagination was shocked a little by the sight of saints and monks padding about the soddened field, and getting into position at the wings of the open-air stage under the shelter of umbrellas. Roars of laughter greeted an episode in which British virgins were chased by savage Saxons with long spears, when, on the slippery, slushy ground, "Jill fell down, and Jack came tumbling after."

The great choir, gowned and hooded in mediæval garb, were bound to abandon the dignity of history, and to commit wilful anchronisms in the full sight of the audience, and they sang the old litanies and dirges under a very forest of umbrellas.

In many ways the pageant itself, in spite of the bad weather, which tried hard to spoil it, was full of interest and supremely successful. The huge stand, with accommodation for many thousands of people, was packed to the last seat, and the enthusiasm of the audience, among whom were hundreds of clergy, was not to be damped. And the pageant pictures in the field rewarded them. Undoubtedly there was an appeal to the imagination, to the eye, and to one's sense of reverence, in this pictorial drama representing by living figures in vivid essence the history of the old Church of England. The very field on which this drama was played is historic ground. The moat of Lambeth Palace runs long east many centuries ago, and on the field which it surrounds many great scenes, many most vital episodes in the history of our church and country, have been really enacted by men strong in spirit, whose flesh has long since gone to dust.

Thinking of that and of old things half forgotten, it seemed to one that the people on the pageant ground yesterday, vague as they were in the dank mist, were the ghosts of those who once played their parts and went their way to death and bequeathed their ideals and purpose to those who followed on this soil of England.

The prelude, with St. George in the silver-shining armor, and with the early British saints, Alban and Elidan, David and Patrick, stirred in one's memories of the dream-stories of the dawn of Christian faith in Britain—legends made true only by tradition and by a few old stories here and there.

The first scene of "The Publication in Britain of the Edict of Constantine, 313," is not recorded in history, but at least it was a reminder of the Roman occupation of Britain and of the little bodies of Christians, scattered outposts of the Faith, who lived between the rule of the Roman gods and of the Druid nature-worship, and to whom a liberal emperor granted freedom of religion as to all citizens of the empire. That was all a ghost-story yesterday, but one which took one's imagination back to the dim half-light of the early world.

And so as the scenes followed—the visit of St. Germain of Auxerre to the British Christians who had fallen into heresy, the founding of Iona by St. Columba, the coming of St. Augustine to the Saxons, who had driven the British to the West and destroyed the Christian outposts, the conversion of those Saxon people who were truly the first of the English, and the strong and real foundation of the Church in England—one had before one on the field a drama, full of color, in which one saw, as on an illuminated scroll of history, the foundation of the faith of our fathers.

One was shown the influence of monasticism in England before and after the Conquest, and the martyrdom of Becket reminded one of the long struggle between the Church and State—marked not once or twice only by brutal injustice and bloody tragedies, inevitable, perhaps, in a conflict between the spiritual and the temporal power, each seeking to break down the other's prerogatives, each claiming perhaps more than was due.

The episode of Magna Charta was to prove that the old Church was sometimes, if not always, on the side of liberty. The later episode of the suppression of the monasteries and the establishment of the Reformed Faith proved one thing to one man and one thing to another, according to his religious convictions and his knowledge of history.

In the Senate.

The Senators of Canada are variously distinguished. Boucher de Boucherville, from Quebec, is the oldest, though only 87, a mere infant compared with some of his confreres, recently deceased. Hon. Hewitt Bostock, from British Columbia, is the youngest, just 45, almost too young for the company he keeps. There are also the wittiest—Domville, of New Brunswick, is our choice — and the wealthiest; and though all are wise, there must be one wiser than the rest.

W. Dell Perley, from Saskatchewan, whose death last week still further reduced the rapidly-thinning ranks of the Conservatives in the Upper House, was the biggest physically. Originally, a St. John River farmer, he went west in the first boom days of Manitoba, ignoring the maxim that a man is a fool who moves after forty. His first attempt at prairie farming was unsuccessful and he decided to return to New Brunswick. In a crowded shack at Brandon, which did duty for a hotel, on a cold, wet October night, he met Dr. Silas Alward from St. John, who talked Mr. Perley out of his fit of homesickness, and he returned to Assiniboia to prosper beyond his most sanguine hopes, and to become eventually member of Parliament and Senator for his adopted home.

Summer in Greenland.

Among the interesting observations made by the Danish northeast Greenland expedition is one on the sudden oncoming of summer in that land of ice and fiords. The change is described as sudden. Gradually the temperature of the snow had risen to the freezing point, and then in one day it all melted. "The rivers were rushing along, flowers were budding forth, and in the air the butterflies were fluttering." The birds came nearly all on the same day, and most of them even at the same hour. One day there were only the ordinary ptarmigan and the raven; the next there were the sanderling, the ring plover, the goose, the eider duck and many others.

A Bisley Story.

Stories of Lord Roberts are perhaps more numerous than authentic. Here is one which may or may not be authentic, but is certainly amusing. The Commander-in-Chief was watching the firing at Bisley, and noticed two or three mistakes on the part of the markers. So he went to the telephone and rang up the officer in charge. "The marking is very bad," he observed. "It's the best you'll get," retorted the officer. "Do you know who I am?" sternly demanded Lord Roberts. "No, I don't." "I'm Lord Roberts." "Well, I'm Lord Wolseley." Lord Roberts loves a joke, but how he took this one history does not record.

A Cool Deadhead.

Mr. Oscar Asche, the London actor, who, with his wife, Miss Lily Brayton, is on his way to Australia—his native land—which he left eighteen years ago, remarked just before he set sail, apropos of the slump in theatres, that the deadhead is a destroyer of drama. "Once give a man a free seat for a play," he said, "and you will have a difficulty ever after to make him 'pay to go in.' While I was touring with a certain highly-respected manager, we were playing at a long-famous old playhouse in an ancient town. We had billed 'Macbeth' for the Friday night, but during that day the theatre was burnt down. For our next week there our chief contrived to borrow a playhouse a little way out of the district. On reaching there to rehearse on the Monday the manager received a letter saying that the writer had been given two dress-circle orders for the performance of 'Macbeth,' but as that play was not performed owing to the destruction of the theatre, the writer surmised that the manager would remit the money value of those orders."

Canada's Forest Products.

During 1908 Canada exported forest products to the value of $49,168,535. Of this total, the unmanufactured products made up over $44,000,000, and the manufactures less than $5,000,000. Unmanufactured products consist of sawn lumber in all forms, cordwood, and railway ties. During the same year the Dominion imported wood and manufactures to the value of $14,279,000.

Fought Under Nelson.

The name of James Hexton, who for seventy-six years has resided in Queensland, was among the list of old-age pensioners recently approved by the Home Secretary. Hexton is said to be the first white man born in Queensland, first seeing the light at the home of Dr. Ballow, whose residence stood on the site of the present Royal Navy, and fought under Nelson, and also had the honor of being the first pilot in Moreton Bay. He met his death by being taken by a shark.

THE KEARN'S INK CO. of Toronto was organized two years ago to manufacture the new CANADIAN WRITING INKS, invented by J. J. Kearns. The past two years has been spent in experimenting and improving quality and today it stands among the top notchers in the ink world. The total capital is only $40,000, so that you can see that this is no inflated and watered wild cat scheme but a first-class legitimate investment offered to you—one where a dollar invested today will be worth at least two in a year and will pay 10 per cent. income on this.

Some Orders that We Received as to the Sale of Kearn's Ink

One Shot Wounded Two.

Belleville, Ont., Sept. 23.—While Fred Mills and Bert Bell, of this city were hunting in a bush just west of the city limits yesterday, they were getting through a fence, when the gun carried by Mills was accidentally discharged. The bullet penetrated the fleshy part of Mills' thigh, passing through it, and struck Bell on the tip of the right thumb, taking off a portion of it. The injuries sustained by Mills are not considered of a serious nature. He was brought to the city and taken to the hospital.

Tickling or dry coughs will quickly loosen when using Dr. Shoop's Cough Remedy. And it is so thoroughly harmless, that Dr. Shoop tells mothers to use nothing else even for very young babies. It calms the cough and heals the sensitive bronchial membranes. No opium, no chloroform, nothing harsh used to injure or suppress. Demand Dr. Shoop's. Accept no other. Sold by all dealers.

NEW ZEALANDER ON ENGLAND.

Sir Robert Stout Delivers a Sharp Criticism on Old Land.

Sir Robert Stout, ex-Premier and present chief justice of New Zealand, has very definite ideas of the consequences of England's failure as a world-power. Sir Roberts knows the Antipodes as a man who has spent nearly all his life there, going out from the Shetland Islands at the age of 14, and returning to Great Britain for the first time now at the age of 65. He also knows New Zealand as one who has been chiefly concerned in building up the Island Dominion.

In an interview with the navy builder of 1888, Wm. T. Stead, he declares that England suffers chiefly from slackness and illogical views. The non-Conformists, for example, wish to disestablish the church, and at the same time establish religion in the parish school.

Laborers are very slack in their methods, and three men are needed to do the work of one. The young Englishmen are not equal to the New Zealanders and the farms are not well cultivated. There is lack of enterprise, care and energy on the part of the manufacturer. As a result Americans captured the best part of the New Zealand trade. The habit of fuddling, on which $800,000,000 a year are spent in England, is another source of national weakness noted by Sir Robert.

"We hope there will be no war," said the New Zealander, "and if war should come we hope Britain will be victor. But do not make any mistake about it. If by any disaster any foreign power were to dictate a peace in London which transferred New Zealand to the conquerer, the next day we should hoist the Stars and Stripes, the only other flag save that of the Union Jack under which New Zealanders would live."

Sir Robert should pay a visit to Canada.

Boom on Rand.

After a long interval it is once more quite "boom time" in Johannesburg. It is generally agreed that prospects have never been so good since 1895. All classes of business are already feeling the effects of better times. Activity on the Stock Exchange is enormous, for the public have at last fairly "gone into it."

One feature of the moment is the immense amount of pegging of claims going on in the surrounding district. Thousands of claims allowed to lapse in times of depression have been taken up again, and many flotations are probable, but there are fears in some quarters that this may be overdone and produce a reaction.

The general view, however, is that the upward tendency will last. The reduced working costs on mines have made payable the working of millions of tons of reef which hitherto have not been a profitable proposition, and at the same time have immensely increased the profits of the more valuable mines.

It is regarded as a good sign that so far the improvement has not produced the mania of gambling which marked the 1895 "boom." In the commercial part of the town traders report a marked increase in trade, especially in luxuries, such as pianos, motor-cars, carriages and horses, which first felt the bad times.

There are strong hopes that the wave of prosperity will result in the opening up of new mines and that it will thus absorb the unemployed.

Two Female Quixotes.

Two women in Natal are at present engaged in fighting the whole force of the British Government. The battle waged by the Misses Colenso—two sisters—is carried on without visible signs of outward warfare, and yet it is a struggle as daring, as strenuous, and a adventurous as any real engagement. Embarked in a quixotic attempt to rescue the native chief, Dinizulu, from the coils of British diplomacy, they have spent almost every cent they had in the world. For the last five years the elder sister, Harriet, has been the guide, philosopher and friend of the native chief, and remained near him while he waited in prison until her efforts got him out, only to be tried and re-convicted on another count. The devotion of the Colenso sisters to the cause of the black chief has won the respect of even their inveterate enemies, the English foreign wire-pullers, who wish to turn the land of Dinizulu over to white explorers.

No white people in the whole of South Africa have greater knowledge and experience of the Natal natives than the two sisters. They are the daughters of the famous Bishop Colenso, first and last Bishop of Natal, who devoted his life to studying the needs and ministering to the spiritual wants of the black men.

Lady Bancroft's Lovebird.

My wife had lost a little green parrot, for the return of which I offered a reward of ten shillings, giving our address, but no name. One of the newspapers, however, had a paragraph headed, "Lady Bancroft's Lost Lovebird." It was my privilege, with others, to receive at this period our present King and Queen—then Prince and Princess of Wales—at the Botanical Gardens, when His Royal Highness produced a newspaper cutting and said, "I think I have Lady Bancroft's lost bird. One of the breed was flying about for some days in the garden at Marlborough House, and a gardener succeeded in catching it this morning. Pray go and see if it is yours, as I hope it may be; but, mind, I shall claim the reward." I replied, "Certainly, sir; it is small, but appropriate, being—half a sovereign."—From "The Bancrofts: Recollections of Sixty Years."

His Four Seasons.

An amusing story is told by Sir W. H. Holland of the answer given by a London waif to a Salvation Army captain. The zealous officer had asked the boy what work he did to provide him with food, etc., and the reply was: "I pick strawberries in the summer, I pick hops in the autumn, I pick pockets in the winter, and cadge for the rest of the year."

Drive Rheumatism out of the blood with Dr. Sheop's Rheumatic Remedy and see how quickly pain will depart. Rub-ons never did touch the real disease. Rheumatism isn't in the skin. It's deep down—it's constitutional. Getting rid of the pain, is after all what counts. That is why Dr. Sheop's Rheumatic Remedy gets by word of mouth from one to another. And herein lies the popularity of this remedy. It is winning followers everywhere. Tablets or Liquid. [illegible]

TACTFUL CHAPERONS.

How They Should Dispose of Undesirable Young Men.

The perfect chaperon is born, not made, because to be at her best she must be constantly on guard without the appearance of watching her charges, and that means a poise and self control and an ability for self effacement that the average woman does not possess. And because of this lack of sufficiency chaperons are frequently maligned either by parents or young folk, for if she is too strict the latter are annoyed, and if not sufficiently so parents are displeased.

The most difficult problem that a chaperon has to manage is what to do when men whom she considers undesirable talk to her charges. To give them the cut direct is rude and places her in a most unfortunate position.

To show her displeasure quietly is not apt to be effective, for girls are likely to champion those whom they deem downtrodden, and, if the men have the least charm of manner or know how to make themselves agreeable, to snub only makes them more interesting to the average young girl. While no chaperon is so silly as to think that every man who meets her charge wishes to marry her, the older woman has nevertheless to remember that he may be a possible husband, and it is imperative that the girl should be guarded from undesirable associates. Probably the best way of managing such a situation is for the chaperon to be constantly in the foreground, without the appearance of being so, not giving the man any opportunity to develop the acquaintance beyond most formal lines.

Her greatest tact lies in so managing her charges that she can retain the girl's confidence, for so long as she has it she will know the situation. Once let her lose it, and she works in the dark, not being certain what the day may bring forth. As to how much liberty a girl may be given by her chaperon in summer, one can only say it depends greatly upon the girl and her associates. If they are reliable and she is sensible there is no need of her having a protector all the time, for her own good sense is enough. Girls are always given more freedom in summer than in winter, and with a man whom she has known intimately and is known to be a gentleman in the fullest sense of the word there is no reason why she should not drive, sail and walk unchaperoned.

NEEDLEWORK NOTES.

Among the dainty baby slips are those made with a Dutch neck for summer wear. They are decidedly attractive.

In stitching a pocket on the outside of a garment run the stitching half an inch above the edge of the pocket. This keeps the garment from tearing.

In pressing a plaited skirt one will gain time and have more satisfactory results if the plaits are basted before the pressing is done. Clean the skirt and brush it on the inside as well as the outside. Next baste the seams, cover with a damp cloth and press on the right side with a medium warm iron. Dampen the cloth when necessary and press until the cloth is dry.

Plain coarse chain stitching that looks much like the kind that children use to decorate their dolls' clothes is the latest freak of fashion, not only for gowns, but for shirt waists. Gowns are worked in the simple stitch in braid patterns and usually in self colors. Shirt waists stamped with braid patterns are outlined with the loose chain stitch. Stems with coarse, solid work are also made in this way.

The clever girl who makes laundry books for presents selects a neat rice paper for the leaves and cuts the double cover from red paper of a heavy variety, then ties the leaves together with red baby ribbon. Between the leaves of white paper are blue carbon paper slips, so that a duplicate copy is made when one marks off her laundry. This makes a handy booklet and one that would be appreciated by any woman who must send a list of laundry to her laundress and keep one herself.

Candlesticks Again in Favor.

The woman whose aim is to reveal a touch of the artist in her home just at present is interested in the old fashioned candlestick. It is a revival as happy in its way as that of the return to favor of Sheffield or pewter ware. The candle held its own against the oil lamp, but lost its popularity when gas came in, and it was practically outlawed when electricity came into general use. Now, however, many women of society are using candles extensively. One society leader, in fact, has gone to the extreme of having electric fixtures removed from several rooms, relying entirely upon candles for lighting. These candles she displays in antique candlesticks of beaten brass. Tall Russian candlesticks now are seen on many library tables, and tall silver colonial sticks are on many dressing tables. New candlesticks are shown in pottery and wrought iron, but antiques are first in favor. The prices of old brass candlesticks have advanced greatly in the last few weeks, and few now are to be found in the antique shops.

To Clean Chamois Skin.

An excellent way to restore chamois skins that have become stiff and soiled is to rub them through a strong solution of cold water and household ammonia, later rinsing thoroughly in clear cold water to soften. Fix to the line to dry in the sun and rub through the hand slightly.

Another Ice-Breaker.

The Lady Grey, the ice-breaker of the Dominion Government, is to be given a consort, and the Earl Grey has just been launched from the shipbuilding yards of the Vickers Company at Barrow-in-Furness. The new boat marks a considerable advance in size and speed, and it is hoped that she will prove even more successful than the Lady Grey, though the older boat has done good work in her three years of existence. Although the new vessel is built very powerfully, and with a special view to the breaking of ice, the makers promise that she will be able to make [illegible]

BRITISH SQUADRON.

At the Hudson-Fulton Celebration New York.

New York, Sept. 23.—Three British cruisers, the Drake, Argyll and Duke of Edinburgh, which, with the armored cruiser Inflexible, will represent Great Britain at the Hudson-Fulton celebration, pushed through a gray haze into sight of New York harbor this afternoon and anchored at sunset close to Sandy Hook. The British flagship, the Inflexible, with Admiral Sir Edward Hobart Seymour on board, reported by wireless that she would join her sister ships tomorrow morning.

The coming of Sir Edward Seymour is being looked forward to with unusual pleasure by the American officers. The flagship Connecticut has been paired off with the Inflexible by order of Admiral Schroeder, and the officers in the flagship will see to it that their British brothers on the Inflexible get as good a time as possible during their stay in American waters. Admiral Schroeder, as soon as the Inflexible anchors will call on him and welcome him. Admiral Sir Edward Seymour will immediately return the visit and will meet on the Connecticut all the officers of the flagship and the division commanders, who will be assembled there to welcome him.

IN THE FAR EAST.

"We cannot do too much for Admiral Seymour," said an officer of one of the American battleships who was on duty in the far east when Sir Edward, then a vice-admiral, was in command of the British Asiatic squadron. "We love him for his attitude at Manila, while we have the greatest admiration for him as a man and a sailor. We all remember how Sir Edward acted during the Boxer troubles. At one time the international forces was advancing on Pekin and Ue were within twenty-five miles of the city we were stopped by an overwhelming force of Chinese soldiers. A retreat was our only chance of escape, and a mighty slim one, as an even larger Chinese force was operating behind.

A REAL SAILOR-SOLDIER.

"In the desperate situation Sir Edward at the common request assumed command of the combined forces, and we soon learned that he was a real sailor-soldier. So now we are delighted that he is coming, so that we may show him what we think ofhim."

Each of the vessels in Admiral Schroeder's command has been paired off with one of the foreign ships; the Kansas with theDrake, the Vermont with the Argyll and the Louisiana with the Duke of Edinburgh.

ARCTIC CLUB BANQUET.

The Eskimo and Indian Important Factors.

New York, Sept. 24.—Speaking tonight at a banquet in his honor given by the Arctic Club of America Dr. Cook said in Part:—

"The key to frigid endeavor is subsistence. There is nothing in the entire realm of the Arctic which is impossible to man. If the animal fires are supplied with adequate fuel there is no cold too severe and no obstacle too great to surmount. In the ages of the polar quest much has been tried and much has been learned The important lesson is that civilized man, if he will succeed, must bend to the savage simplicity necessary. Candor compels me to say that the effort of getting to the Pole is not one of physical endurance, nor is it fair to call it bravery; but a proper understancing of the needs of the stomach and a knowledge of the limits of the brute force of the motive power, be that man or beast.

"tOur conquest was only possible with the accumulated lessons of the early ages of experience. The failures of our less successful predecessors were stepping stones to ultimate success. The real path-finders of the Pole were the early Danish, the Dutch, the English and the Norse, Italian and American explorers, with whom we must share the good fruits of success. A similar obligation is due to the wild man. The Eskimo and the Indian were important factors to us."

WABASH ROAD FACING STRIKE.

Company Refuses to Accede to Demands of Employes.

Springfield, I.l., Sept. 26.—A general strike of machinists boiler-makers, blacksmiths, cab carpenters and steam and pipe fitters in the shops all over the Wabash Railroad system is threatened as a result of the failure of the company to accede to demands made by the employes for increased wages and changes in shop rules. Superintendent Needham tonight answered, on behalf of the company, the ultimatum of the employes, which was delivered last Saturday. He offered an increase of 2 cents an hour where the men asked 6 cents increase, and proposed a compromise on the rules demanded. The men have decided to carry their grievance to General Superintendent Miller at St. Louis.

THE STAGE IN JAPAN.

Origin of the Drama—Women's Arduous Preparations of Dress.

There is a legend in Japan that the theater had its origin in that country in the ninth century by reason of an earthquake which took place in the province of Yamato. A large crevice was formed by reason of the upheaval, from which emanated poisonous vapors which spread death and destruction all around. An awful scourge was the result until the priests conceived the idea of performing a symbolic dance of incantation on the grass covered hill outside the temple. As if by magic the death vapors vanished, and peace and happiness were restored to the country. The legend concludes that this is how Japanese acting originated. The Japanese word for theater, shibai-ya, is supposed to have come from its origin, shibai, meaning sod, and ya, a house.

In Japan when a Japanese lady intends to go to the theater she is called upon the day previous by a hairdresser to build up the artificial structure which is the pride of every Japanese nighborn lady. This necessitates her spending the night in her state dress, reclining her head on a wooden block, called makura. A few hours before going to the theater she covers her lips with a thin layer of gold, as it takes several hours for this paint to change into the cherry color which lends charm to the artificial white complexion of the face.

As a rule, Japanese performances last from 6 a. m. to 9 p. m., although certain historical dramas which follow the life of the hero through all his vicissitudes to his death go on for several days.

In Japan, officially, the social position of the actors is that of the lowest class of society, but in reality they enjoy great consideration and are idolised by the general public.

HUGO AS AN ARTIST.

The Great French Writer's Opinion of His Own Drawings.

When Victor Hugo's "Marion Delorme" was read before the troupe of the Porte-Saint Martin theater, the actor Laferriere, then a young man, protested against the insignificant role assigned him, in which he would have only ten lines to recite. Hugo promptly reduced him to silence by thundering, "Ten lines of Victor Hugo are something not to be refused—for they endure." Hugo attached a similar exaggerated significance to everything he did and to every object that was in any way associated with him.

For instance, he considered his drawings, which were for the most part commonplace enough, of sufficient importance to make them the subject of a testamentary provision. In his will of Aug. 31, 1881, he wrote, "I give my drawings and everything which shall be drawn by me to the National Library of Paris, which will be one day the Library of the United States of Europe."

Hugo's drawings are said to have been produced more often than not in the following manner: If a blot of ink chanced to fall on his paper while he held his pen aloft in quest of a word or rhyme, he enlarged the spot absentmindedly and made additions to it instinctively under the influence of a species of subconscious direction until he had produced a sinister moonlight scene or a "venerable bourg dominating with its bristling ruins the shuddering waters of a river of legend." He elaborated with great care, however, during his irksome exile at Guernsey certain crude impressions he had transferred to his sketchbook during his journeys in the valley of the Rhine. Furthermore, being a great lover of children, he drew figures of the most extravagant sort for the amusement of the young people of his household.—Alvan L. Sanborn in Bookman

Ending a Letter.

The simplicity of "Yours" as a letter ending would have astounded Jeremy Taylor, whose letters to John Evelyn often wind up with perfect triumphs of complexity in this respect. His best is, "Believe me that I am, in great heartiness and oearness of affection, dear sir, your obliged and most affectionate and endeared friend and servant," or "Your very affectionate friend and hearty servant." Even in his shortest perorations of the kind the "affectionate" and the "servant" are always the two indispensable words. Probably no man, woman or child would combine these two at the end of a letter today.—London Tatler.

IN STUDENT DAYS.

Tale of Eric Armour and the Bottle of Poison.

They tell a good story about the days when Eric Armour, law partner of Edmund Bristol, M.P., for Centre Toronto, was in his senior year at Varsity. The old residence was still in full swing and "Count" Armour and another senior shared a room in what is now the Undergraduate Club.

Some kindly person, one day in the fall term, thinking to freshen the arduous monotony of Armour's days at the university, made him a present of a sturdy little earthenware jug of Scotch whiskey of a famous brew. Now the popularity of Count Armour, which is a bye-word to this day, was in its full bloom at that time and his room was headquarters for those of the students who turned to find relaxation from their books. Scotch whiskey was no thing to leave exposed upon one's dresser among such company. So the room-mates hastened to a drug store, secured a plain business-like bottle, had it liberally swathed in poison labels and garnished with death's heads. Into this they poured the precious liquid and hid it away upon a high shelf, to await a fitting occasion for so gorgeous a libation.

One bitter night in late December such an occasion came. Varsity won a hockey match and as the chilled rooters made their way back to residence Armour and his room-mate determined to celebrate with a toddy. So every room in Second House that night yielded up its two men and two glasses who sat about in awed silence while, like priests at sacrament, Count and his partner labored with the lemons, nutmeg and boiling water.

Presently the great moment came when Count Armour strode majestically to the cupboard and took down the bottle. It felt strangely light. With a sinking heart he carried it under the gas jet. Whiskey there was not but under the most fearsome of the skulls Armour read in a fine script which he knew for that of "Rex" King, now of Detroit:

"Goodbye, Count; I have committed suicide"

The Experience Is Great.

The men who are going to make the most money out of this country are not the men who are doing the pioneer work. I know many good, honest, hard working fellows, who are working themselves ragged and hungry because they are not in right. At the outset all were jubilant. Money jingled in their pockets; equipments were complete; wives and families at home were content to see them go away for a while to the Land of Promise; stories of men as green as they in the bush experience having made their pile were continually on their minds. The moment of their disenchantment is at hand.

It takes a great deal of money to ascertain what most mining propositions are worth. Companies or syndicates must be formed to develop and mine, and usually after the formation of these Mr. Prospector, after receiving his one-fifth share of the five or ten thousand dollars that his bonker received from the syndicate, either proceeds to blow in the result of his season's work or goes back and locates somewhere else. I don't want to discourage anyone from coming in, nor do I feel like being too optimistic over their coming. Quartz mining is essentially a rich man's game. Prospecting in everybody's. The expert-ence is great.—Gowganda Tribune.

ACUTE DYSPEPSIA.

Restoration of Stomach Power Comes Quickly With the Right Medicine.

"My food seemed to decompose in my stomach," writes Mr. Ralph Clemmons, of Newbridge P. O. "I had a stomach that failed in some way to perform its work. Digestion seemed more or less arrested and I grew thin, yellow, nervous. The stomach became distended and impeded apparently the action of the heart, for often at night it would do great stunts. At times I would vomit a mucuous mass, and at these times my head ached most terribly. A friend, who had been cured of a similar condition advised me to take Dr. Hamilton's Pills regularly, which I did. The result in my case was simply marvellous. Dr. Hamilton's Pills removed the cause, strengthened the stomach, excited the liver to normal action, the kidneys were released of excessive work. Health soon glowed within me. I can now eat, sleep and live like a live man."

Be advised—Use Dr. Hamilton's Pills—they are sure to do you good. 25c per box, at all dealers, or The Catarrhozone Co., Kingston, Canada

SEEING THE WORLD.

Peterborough Youths on a Tramping Expedition Held Up At Guelph.

The following paragraph appears in Tuesday's issue of the Guelph Herald:—

Two boys of about 15 or 16 years of age, whose homes are in Peterborough are outseeing the world. They carry their baggage in their vest pockets and forsake the railways for shank's mare. They are seeing the world, a little bit of it at a time. This morning they saw Guelph and were seen by the Guelph police, who ran them in, and when going thro their pockets the authorities failed to find any bowie knives or bombs; they did not do any worse than take sixty cents out of their pocket money to pay the telephone tolls for a message to their parents in Peterborough. The parents answered that the boys were all right and were simply making a journey on foot to satisfy the adventurous spirits with which they are possessed. They were allowed to go on and see a little more of the world.

Case in Winnipeg May Apply to Magistrate Dumble.

Winnipeg, Man., Sept. 25.—A writ of prohibition was applied for before the King's Bench to prevent Hon. T. N. Daly acting as police magistrate in Winnipeg.

The action, which is made on behalf of Annie Norris, a prisoner, who came before the police court, sets forth the principal of common law is that no man shall act as prosecutor and judge at the same time. Daly is police magistrate and a member of the police commissioners.

Throughout Canada police magistrates are also members of police commissions from Vancouver to Halifax.

SUNDAY SERVICES.

At St. Andrew's church—Rev. Mr. Potter Preached.

On Sunday morning Rev. Mr. Potter took his subject from Acts II. and he dealt with "The Church in the Early Christian Era," its influence upon the world and the methods adopted. He referred to the fact that there were many who professed faith. Though they might be said to be in the spiritual church yet there was no reason why, if they believed in the fatherhood of God, and the brotherhood of man, that they should not join themselves in the Christian fraternalism.

Miss Winslow sang as a solo "My Mother's Prayer." At night the choir sang as an anthem "Rock of Ages," Miss Olive Howell taking the solo parts. Mr. James Browne gave as a solo, "Lord I'm Coming Home."

Offers a Trophy

The secretary of the Peterborough City Rugby League has received a letter from the Harry H. Love Company of Toronto, the well known sporting goods house, in which they state they are prepared to offer a handsome trophy to the league, provided their ball is used exclusively in matches. The league purchased the Love ball for the games last year and it was found entirely satisfactory. The trophy given last year was won by the Rough Riders. It is altogether likely that the league will make the same arrangements again this year.

KILL SOME BEAVER.

Animals Becoming Too Numerous In Algonquin Park.

Toronto, Sept. 26.—The rapid increase of the beaver in Algonquin Park as a result of the Protection that is afforded them appears a new source of revenue for the Province. Mr. Thomas Southworth, former director of colonization, thinks that the superintendent of Algonquin Park and his staff of Rangers might be allowed to kill off a number near equal to the increase every year. The beaver, he points out is not a game animal, and is only useful for its fur and as an instructor in engineering.

A sum of $30,000 to $40,000 could easily be obtained yearly from this source without exterminating the beaver, and this would provide a fund for park purposes much needed," said Mr. Southworth.

The park staff, he declared, could be entrusted with this work, as they were an intelligent, earnest and honest body of men.

ROBERT H. SHEPPARD PLAYED DOUBLE GAME WITH THE POLITICAL PARTIES

Was a Detective for the Conservatives but Made False Information to Them from Time to Time

Was a Volunteer Worker for Mr. Stratton in Committee Rooms and Did Some Canvassing but Made Reports to the Conservatives--Took Money from Both Parties--West Peterborough Election Protest Trial Opened

The West Peterborough election trial was opened yesterday morning about 11.30 before Justices McMahon and Magee. Mr. J. H. Burnham the defeated candidtate of the Conservative party, protested the election of Mr. J. R. Stratton on Oct., 26, 1908. Mr Stratton fyled a cross petition against Mr. Burnham, but the main petition will be disposed of first and it was at once proceeded with

The court room was filled all day with interested spectators. The first witness called was Sheriff Hall, the returning officer, who gave evidence as to the result of the election. Then Mr. Jos. Picard was put on the stand.

In the afternoon the chief witness was R.H.Sheppard, who was on the stand for two hours. He was a detective for the Conservatives and a volunteer worker for the Liberals, and accepted money for his services from both sides. He also gave the money he got from the Liberals to the Conservatives and made false reports to them. Then because the Conservatives did not pay him all that was due to him he told Mr. Stratton the whole game after the election and took an affidavit that it was true. He also gave Mr. Stratton the self-same money that he got from the Conservatives

Messrs. DuVernet, K.C., and Jones of Toronto, and Mr. W. H. Moore, K.C., of Peterborough, appeared for Mr. Burnham,and Mr. Geo. K. Watson, K.C., of Toronto, and Mr. R.R. Hall of Peterborough are counsel for Mr. Stratton.

Mr. H. S. Wood of Peterborough, has been appointed clerk of the court for the trial.

JOSEPH PICARD.

Mr. Joseph Picard, one of Mr. Stratton's active supporters in the last election, was put on the stand, and examined and cross-examined more than an hour. He was onone of the ward committees and started to work a couple of weeks before the election. Asked as to some of the workers he had seen at the committee rooms, witness named J. R. Stratton, A. H. Stratton, R. R. Hall, W. S. Davidson, J. P. Bryson, R. H. Leary, John O'Brien, E. S. Clarry, G. E. Elliott, R. M. Glover, Jesse Irwin and Wm. Taylor.

Witness stated that his work was to check off the lists and gather information. No one appointed him to the position and he had not spoken to any one about it.He thought that Mr. Leary was chairman of the ward. He had marked lists and made reports to Mr. Leary. Other chairmen might have asked him of certain men and he might have told them. He could not say how often he had reported in this manner. He thought A. H. Stratton was the general chairman and Elgin Myers the secretary.

"Were you asked to see some of the people on the list?" asked Mr. DuVernet.

The witness answered the question in the affirmative and said that he had seen some of the workers.

"Did you take any message from Mr. Leary to any of these voters," asked Mr. DuVernet.

"No, sir."

"Did you get anything from Mr.

"No, sir."

"Did you send any one where they could get money?"

"No, sir."

The witness stated that he was at the committee rooms on election day before the polls opened for the purpose of getting some papers from Mr Walter Davidson. He could not remember having been there at any time afterwards on that day nor of having reported to anyone.

"Cross-examined by Mr. Watson, the witness said that he was a Liberal and had been a voter and supporter of the party in other elections. Hehad no personal knowledge of the organization meeting at which officers and committees were arranged. He had done similar work at other elections, and had volunteered on this occasion. Mr. Stratton had not asked him to do any work for him on this occasion.

He had notseen Mr. Stratton or his brother do any work around the committee rooms. Mr. Leary was marking lists. Mr. Bryson had a division and so had Mr. R. M. Glover. He had not seen Wm. Taylor do anything but make reports. He had no knowledge of any of those persons being asked by Mr. Stratton to do anything. He had thought Mr. Leary was chairman of the ward. Mr. Leary took the reports from the members of the committee and witness did not know of his doing anything else. He had no knowledge of a meeting by which anyone was appointed secretary.

"There is no charge against you?-"

"Not that I know of."

"You have no knowledge of illegal or improper expenditure?"

"No, sir."

"There was no bribery or anything wrong at your poll?"

"No, sir."

"What was the result there?"

"A majority of six or seven for Mr. Stratton."

:"How does that compare with the results there at other elections?"

"I don't recollect about that."

To Mr. DuVernet witness said that each ward had a table in the committee rooms."

Mr. Picard then stood down and the court adjourned at 1.10 p.m.until 2 p.m.

AFTERNOON SESSION.

The first witness called was Mr. James P. Bryson, a resident of Peterborough, and is an insurance agent He was not a ward chairman but was secretary of ward 1, and had been in the Reform Committee rooms on many occasions between nomination day and the election. A. H. Stratton was chairman of the ward. Each ward had a table in the committee room. He could not say off-hand all who were there, but he saw R. H. Leary, A. H. Stratton, J. R. Stratton, W. E. Davidson, Wm. Taylor, Alfred Kingscote. No one made reports to him. The committees met night after night and the workers made reports. The meetings were held upstairs in the Simcoe street rooms. On his committee were Jos. Deano. A. H. Stratton, Robt. Sheppard, Morrison.There were about 20 or 30 on the committee. Others were Grimson. He wouldn't say whether there was a book or not kept for tabulating information. He kept no books. On the day of the election he was in and out of the rooms all day from 8.30 o'clock on. There was quite a number coming and going. His duty was to see that the committee and workers were kept busy.He was upstairs in the morning. There were two small rooms and a large one. He went into the small room to get something. He went into the north room. Mr. Walter Davidson was there with others but he did not know them. He was in there several times from curiosity.He saw Mr. Stratton there in the afternoon. He did not know who was in the east room. Mr. Stratton was in the big room upstairs. There were from 40 to 100 there about three o'clock. He saw no one go in either of the little rooms. He did not know what was going on in the east room. He never brought anyone back with him so far as he could remember. People were coming and going all the time.

He knew Mr. Sheppard. A cheque was given by Bryson for $7 on Oct. 17, 1908. It was made payable to Frank Pope. Pope was a young man living in the ward and voted there. Witness knew him well. He gave him the cheque in the large committee room. Witness knew of no one being present. Pope asked him for a loan of $7, and witness gave it to him and he got it back on the 22nd. The money was paid out of his wife's trust account.Pope first asked for cash in the morning and said he needed it badly. He never made a loan before; but had paid him money before. He could not remember what Pope said when he asked for the money. Later he told his lordship that Pope said; "Could I have a few dollars." Witness tried to put him off until the next week but Pope insisted and he gave him his cheque for the $7. He did not remember Sheppard being there although he might have been. He did not remember whether Pope came in alone or not. Witness said he was not in the habit of loaning money and loaned none other at this time. He made no advances to anyone to whom he was not indebted. He paid for work done in connection with the election. He paid Mr. Sheppard from $17 to $20 for getting the voters' lists into shape and addressing envelopes, etc. Witness employed Sheppard and paid him as time went on. He got about 25c. an hour and worked eight hours a day. Witness paid Sheppard on the street, in the Liberal Committee rooms, but not in the Crown Hotel. Witness kept no books and Sheppard put in no bill. Two other men were employed. One was Grimison who got $10 or more for the same work. He was a voter in ward 1. Frank Pope worked some of the time, doing the same work, and was entitled to $4. Then Pope was entitled to 19 and witness paid that money about Oct. 22nd, and then Pope paid him back $7 which he had loaned. Witness paid no one else money. He got all the money from Mr. Walter Davidson, and got it just whenever necessary. He did not remember how much. He gave no receipts and always got it in cash. He never put in a statement of the amount of money he paid out. Witness did not know Aaron Bruiskil and he never paid $2 to anyone in connection with the election. He did not know Swansee. He never saw anyone pai Swansee. He never saw anyone pay $2. Witness knew R. M. Glover, but he had no money transactions with him. He did not remember giving Pope's cheque to Sheppard. On Oct. 22nd witness deposited $10 in his wife's bank account. The other $3 was his own money and he put that in to make an even sum.

Cross-examined by Mr. Watson, witness said he was always a Liberal and always assisted at elections as a volunteer. Always working for the party. Mr. Stratton never asked him to work for him.There were committees appointed and an organization meeting. Witness took part in Ward 1. Mr. Stratton was by motion appointed chairman and witness as secretary. As secretary he instructed the workers as to the voters. The rooms were all open and free to everybody. The loan of $7 to Pope had nothing to do with his vote or his voting as he was a party man. He was around from the first of October. There was absolutely no foundation for any charge of bribery against him on the grounds of the Pope cheque.All the money he paid out was for legitimate expenses. No one suggested to him to loan Pope any money That the payment had anything to do with the election was merely one of the guesses presented as charges. No one got any money for anything except for actual work done. Witness did not know that Sheppard was one of Mr. Burnhams detectives. Witness always found Sheppard to be a square man. Witness saw no money paid to anyone on election day, October 26. Witness also denied that he was personally bribed to buy votes or was given money to buy votes or treat voters. Mr. Stratton or Mr. Glover never gave him money Witness never asked Sheppard for a vote and never talked with him about paying him money for voting and he denied all the charges with which his name was connected. All the money he got he spent honestly and faithfully for proper purposes.

To Mr. DuVernet, witness said to the best of his knowledge he could not say how much money he got from Mr Davidson, but it was under $100. He made no vouchers.

ROBERT H. SHEPPARD.

Mr. R. H. Sheppard was called on next, and was a resident of Peterborough. He always supported Mr. Stratton except the last election. He was sub-chairman on No. 1 committee with John Grimson. Ward 1 was divided into sub-committees.He volunteered his services to Mr. Bryson who started him to work upstairs in the big committee room. He then named over a number of those who were in the committee rooms including Bryson, A. H. Stratton, R. M. Glover, R. H. Leary.They were supervisors. He did not remember G. L. Hay or Mr. Thornton. Witness went there at the opening of the campaign or just before the 21st of Sept. He received in the neighborhood of $17 or $20. He got $7 Sept. 21st from Bryson; on Sept. 25th $6 from Bryson, $6 on Oct. 17th, $2 on Oct. 14th as a loan which he got in the Crown Hotel. That was all the money he got from anyone.

A letter was handed to witness signed by himself sent to R. M. Waddell saying that he got $10 from W. E. Davidson for spending money. He enclosed the $10.

Witness denied the statements in the letter and said it was a little game he was in for the purpose of deceiving Mr. Waddell. He was getting money from the Conservatives as a detective and he sent in false returns. The idea was all his own. All the money he got from the Liberals was what he earned. He did not ask for it, Mr. Bryson gave it to him.

Witness also sent in reports regularly to Mr. addell. He reported receiving $2 in the Crown; 96 from R. M. Glover to Davidson to Bryson to witness; also that Pope got $7. There was also an $8 item. Witness said that the reports were not true, but latter admitted the different items in the reports were true exceptt one item on the front page which was a duplicate. When he sent in the report to Mr. Waddell he was working for Mr. Stratton. There was a large number who wanted cash and he reported them to Mr. Stratton's committee rooms, and sent a copy to Mr. Waddell, and Mr. Peter Gardner,and to Mr. Bryson in the Liberal rooms He never met any of those cash men in the Liberal committee room

When making the above reports he had not yet deceived Mr. Waddell very much.

Later he wrote Mr. Waddell that money was getting scarce and for him to keep the ball a rolling. He enclosed $14 and expected more the next week.

This witness said was false.

Another letter to Mr. Waddell was a list of Italians, etc., who wanted money and urged Mr. Waddell to send for them as a little money could be used to advantage.

On Oct. 16th another letter full of advice was sent to Mr. Waddell.

The reports were correct and were part of the game.

When heesent a truthful report to Mr. Waddell he was doing what he was hired for.

Witness received $35 from Mr. Waddell and $20 from another party. He reported this to Mr. Stratton and his supporters and they knew the game was going on. He told Mr. Stratton after the election.

Witness then tried to refresh his memory by referring to some notes. Mr. DuVernet took those notes and they turned out to be an affidavit made by him in Mr. Hall's office and prepared by Mr. Hall. This was done after witness had interviewed Mr. Stratton.

On Sept. 21st he gave Peter Gardner $7 which he got from Bryson. This was not correct. He took the money out of his own pocket. This was in addition to the $10 he sent to Mr. Waddell.

The affadavit deniedthat he got $12 from Mr. Bryson and gave it to Wilson about Oct. 1st, 1909. The $12 came out of his own pocket.

This made $30 all out of his own pocket, that he paid to the Conservative workers. Altogether he paid back to Mr. Waddell $35 as far as he could remember. He also voted for Mr. Burnham.

Witness first saw Mr. Strattons five or six weeks after the election. This was at Mr. Stratton's residence, and made his affidavit on December 21st.

To Mr. Watson witness said he was employed by Conservatives to play a double game. To go into the Liberal Committee rooms under false pretences. He was engaged an false pretences. He was engaged and paid by J. G.M. Wilson, Brundrett, Jas. Kendry, to play a false game. Witness claimed he was not treated fairly and he cut loose from them! He was to get a consideration,but it was not forthcoming. He met Mr. Burnham one morning on the street. His employers expected him to play the spy which he admitted to be a rather mean business.

He was promised by Brundrett $200 from some party if he could catch Mr. Stratton in a trap.Witness considered the proposition favorably. On a Sunday afternoon he went to the Auburn Woolen Mills, and went into the office where Mr. Kendry met them. Mr. Kendry was willing and amxious to have him go on, and intimated that he would be well paid. Mr. J. G. M. Wilson was there also. Witness consented to the proposition. Later he gave information from Mr. Stratton's committee rooms to Messrs. Waddell, Gardner and Wilson.

From the Conservatives he got $20 from Mr. J. G. M. Wilson on Sept. 25th, 1908. It was paid to him in the White House. They were talking about the election and Wilson handed him an envelope and told him to keep quiet. Witness put the envelope in his pocket and asked no questions. Mr. Stratton has the money now. There were twoof the Bank of Nova Scotia $10 bills Next he got $15 from Mr. Waddell on Oct. 8th and the next day received$10 from Mr.Waddell, who told him to go on with the work. On Oct. 19 he got $10 more from Waddell.

Witness met Mr. Burnham one morning and told him what he was doing and of the different parties he was trying to block. Asked why he did not get more money witness said they would not give him any more.

He was appointed deputy returning officer without solicitation. Witness broke away from his agreement with the Conservatives and went to Mr. Stratton. He said he would have gone with the money to Mr. Stratton—protest or no protest—as he thought that was only right.

To that statement his lordship Mr. Justice McMahon remarked that evidently the witness' conscience began to prick him

Witness denied being bribed by R. M. Glover with $2 to vote or any one else.

The court then adjourned until 10 o'clock this morning.

The Food Route

is the safest way to steady health.

Many people are kept ill because they do not know how to select food that their own particular bodies will take up and build upon.

What will answer for one will not do for another.

If one is ailing it is safe to change food entirely and go on a plain simple diet,—say

COOKED FRUIT
SAUCER OF GRAPE-NUTS AND CREAM
SOFT BOILED EGGS
SLICE OF TOAST CUP OF POSTUM

That's enough.

Stick a diet makes one feel good after a few days.

The most perfectly made food for human use is

Grape-Nuts

DO YOU VALUE YOUR HEALTH.

Regulate and Cleanse Your System.

Spring cleaning does not answer the body. The prime element in the maintenance or in the recovery of health is activity of liver, kidneys and skin. Not occasionally but only by weekly stimulation of these functions can poisons, waste matter, and accumulations within the body be drawn out so that the blood and inward parts be purified and kept wholesome. Dr. Hamilton's Pills are the mildest laxative medicine known; they purify the blood, fortify the activity of liver and kidneys, increase the eliminating power of the skin and create a general feeling of well being—the outcome of wholesome conditions within. Dr. Hamilton's Pills are a general tonic to the digestive system; they restore functional effectiveness to all the organs of secretion and contribute in this way enormously to the stability of health

For general family use in all cases of billiousness, bad blood, indigestion and disorders of the stomach,Dr. Hamilton's Pills have no equal. Sold in yellow boxes, 25c, all dealers, or The Catarrhozone Co., Kingston, Canada.

Does Peterboro' Want Single Tax System? Legal Com. Met

The Members of the Committee were Very Much in Favor of the Single Tax System

The Legal Committee met last night and deakt with several important matters chief of which was a discussion on the single tax question.

The single tax system was brought up by the letter from Central Canada Citizen asking the city to change the law of the land so that land would be taxed at a higher rate than buildings. The members of the committee were very much in favor of the single tax as at the present time the assessor increases your assessment according to any improvement made, even to coat of paint or a bow window.

Aldermen McIntyre and Duffus moved that the communication from the Central Canada Citizen be referred to the Committee of the Whole Council.

The committee decided to recommend next year's council to provide $100 or more for the issuing of pocket phamplets fordistribution to the visitors.

BOTHA A GOOD FARMER.

More Interested in Rural Life Than Anything Else.

Paris, Sept. 27.—General Botha, who arrived here some days ago, spent yesterday at the national sheep farm, in Rambouillet, where he purchased a number of rams for his farm in the Transvaal.

During the transaction he pointed out two or three specimens which he wanted, but the director smiled and declared that he could not part with them, as they were the very finest in the flock.

General Botha appeared delighted at this evidence of his expertness,and remarked. "I am not a general nor a minister, I am a good farmer, and that is what interests me."

He has left Paris for Holland.

A Midnight Blaze

Mr. Barney Devlin, who lives in the terrace at the coroner of Hunter and Bethune streets, had a warm experience last night shortly after midnight when he and his family were awakened out of a sound sleep by the fire department pouring big streams of water on the back kitchen of his house. The fire was soon under control and a couple of hundred dollars will settle the damage.

AGED PHILANTHROPIST DEAD.

Frenchwoman Who Was Once Thanked by Queen Victoria.

Brest, Sept. Sept. 27.—At the little village of Ceremet-sur-Mer an old woman of 92, known throughout the district as La Mere Dorso, has just died She had devoted most of her long life to helping the sick and suffering ones among the fishermen of the coast, and was greatly loved for her kindness.

In 1893 she was decorated by the French government for her heroic When the Drummond Castle was wrecked, on June 17, 1896, a number of bodies were washed ashore near the village where "Mother Dorso" lived, and she organized the humane work of giving them decent burial. Shartly afterward Monson, then British amnassador to France, who thanked her, in the name of Queen Victoria, for her goodness. She was also decorated on this occasion.

KILL SOME BEAVER.

Animals Becoming Too Numerous In Algonquin Park.

Toronto, Sept. 26.—The rapid increase of the beaver in Algonquin Park as a result of the Protection that is afforded them suggests a new source of revenue for the Province. Mr. Thomas Southworth, former director of colonization, thinks that the superintendent of Algonquin Park and his staff of Rangers might be allowed to kill off a number near equal to the increase every year. The beaver, he points out is not a game animal, and is only useful for its fur and as an instructor in engineering.

A sum of $30,000 to $40,000 could easily be obtained yearly from this source without exterminating the beaver, and this would provide a fund for park purposes much needed," said Mr. Southworth.

The park staff, he declared, could be entrusted with this work, as they were an intelligent, earnest and honest body of men.

"I learned the truth about coffee in a peculiar way. My husband who has for years been of a very bilious temperament decided to leave off coffee and give Postum a trial and as I did not want the trouble of making two beverages for meals I concluded to try Postum, too, and the results have been that while my husband has been greatly benefited, I have myself received even greater benefit.

"When I began to drink Postum I was thin in flesh and very nervous. Now I actually weigh 16 pounds more than I did at that time and I am stronger physically and in my nerves while husband is free from all his ails.

"We have learned our little lesson about coffee and we know something about Postum, too, for we have used Postum now steadily for the last three years and we shall always continue to do so.

Why the Telegragh and Telephone Wires Went Bad

During the lastfew days there has been considerable interference with the telephone and telegraph wires. Dr. Marsh of Springville, explains it as follows:—"During the last few days there has been a large disturbance on the solar disc." Dr. Marsh photographed it and it measured 20,000 by 35,000 miles giving a disturbing area of seventy million miles. When these great disturbances are on the solar meridian there are nearly always magnetic storms, aurora borealis and earth currents. Dr. Marsh also found large hydrgene proclivities on opposite limbs of the sun. No doubt the magnetic disturbances were caused by solar activity The influence of this was shown throughout the civilized world by the intermittent checking of telegraphic communication and in the wilderness of the North by brilliant displays of the aurora borealis.

Trouble Breaks Out Among Hostile Frontier Tribes.

Cape Town, Sept. 27.—Trouble has broken out among the tribes inhabiting the country bordering on the Cross River and near the boundary between North and South Nigeria.

Owing to the hostile attitude of the tribes surrounding the new station at Abadu it has been found necessary to reinforce the garrison there, and Capt. Lorraine, Scots Guards, left Lagos on July 16 with reinforcements to join Capt. Fox, who is in command at Abadu.

It is not anticipated that serious opposition will be offered unless the warlike Munshi tribe, whose lands adjoin, joins the unfriendly tribes.

Horse Distemper

Prince Edward Farmer Solemnly Declares Nerviline is a Specific.

"After fifty years' experience in raising horses I can safely testify that no remedy gives such good results for an all-round stable liniment as Nerviline." Thus opens the very earnest letter of J. J. Evanston, who lives near Wellington, P. A. "I had a very valuable horse that took distemper a month ago, and was afraid I was going to lose him. His throat swelled and hard lumps developed. His nostrils ran and he had a terrible cough. I tried different remedies, but was unable to relieve my horse of his pain and suffering till I started to use Nerviline. I mixed a bottle of Nerviline and sweet oil and rubbed the mixture on the throat and chest three times a day and you would scarcely believe the way that horse picked up. Nerviline cured him. I also have used Nerviline for colic in horses and cows, and earnestly recommend it to every man that is raising stock."

NARVILINE CURES QUICKLY

For strains, sprains, swellings, colic, distemper, coughs and colds, no liniment will prove so efficacious in the stable as "Nerviline"—it's good for man or beast, for internal or external use. INDUSTRIAL EDUCATION.

A committee of the American Federation of Labor, appointed to consider the question of industrial education in the public schools, has made a report which will be warmly received by all those who are interested in technical education and who have been fearful that their ideas might not be favorably regarded by organized labor. The committee urges that the teaching of the principles of mechanics be made a part of the public school course. The Hamilton Spectator comments as follows on the report:

"This is surely a confession on the part of organized labor, which has in the past offered opposition to anything that looked like industrial training in the schools. It by no means provides the complete solution to the problem of the manufacturer and other employers of skilled labor, but it is a step in the right direction and if it fails or trial to furnish the remedy necessary we may rest assured that labor will in its own interests, go the necessary step further.

What employers of the present day complain of is the fact that they can no longer find men qualified to act as foremen or superintendents—men who have a thorough knowledge of every branch of their business. Of late there has been such a specializing in the manufacturing world that there is very little opportunity left for the young man to learn his trade with the thoroughness that is a necessary qualification in the foreman or superintendent. Nowadays the beginner is set at some particular machine or in some special department of the business, and there he remains until he becomes an expert in that one direction. More than this he does not learn. The old time apprenticeship system has pretty well broken down, and he who would learn thoroughly every part of his trade must seek employment not in the big shops but among the small concerns that have not yet adopted modern methods.

"That the teaching of the principles that will be possible in the regular school course can do little more than turn the ambition of the student, if he has a mechanical bent, to the further study of those principles. Where will he find opportunity to further his ambition? Not in the big shop, where if he goes he will become nothing more than a part of the particular machine which he may be set to operate. Not in the small factory for there will be so many of him that he cannot be accommodated. To the schools again he will have to appeal, and it is just for this that the Hamilton board of education has undertaken the work of technical education in the Collegiate Institute.

"So far the Hamilton Technical school is an experiment. From all indications it will start its first year next week with bright prospects. The principal has told us what the first year course of study is to be, but we are left in the dark as to what is to happen in the second and third years. It is only natural that this should be so, for the management of the Hamilton school has no desire to move faster than the department of education, and up to date the department has not made up its mind just what to do in the matter of technical education.

"Speaking of the second and third years, we could wish that such a course of study might be arranged as would give students an opportunity to matriculate into some one of the colleges where further attention is given to these particular branches. The collegiate student who foregoes his chance to take the regular academic collegiate course with university matriculation at its close and some one of the professions as a goal beyond, should be given an opportunity in the technical school course, if the thing is at all possible, to continue his technical studies to the very highest point, and we trust that the board of education will be able to plan so that this will be the result. In this connection we note that Dr. Sneath, superintendent of education is to visit Germany and other foreign lands to study methods and systems of technical education."

SOUTH AFRICA.

The first Government of South Africa will undoubtedly have much to do with the success of the federation and to further this end a coalition of the ablest men, regardless of past political affiliations, has been suggested. Though this proposal has been opposed by spokesmen of the dominant party, representing mainly the Bond, it is not without strong support in that quarter. Gen. Smuts, Colonial Secretary of the Transvaal, who was one of the South African delegates, gave an interview on this point before leaving England. He said:—

"People do not like the word 'coalition,' and I notice that in several influential quarters a 'coalition' as the first Union Government has been disapproved of. Still, I think it would be found practically impossible, even if it were wise, to move along the old party ruts, and my sincere hope is to see a Government which, while not a formal coalition, will be representative of what is best in the statesmanship and patriotism of South Africa, and which will see the Union through that critical period with which it will be confronted at the start. The success of the Union will depend very largely on the faithful statesmanship and wise administration of the first five or seven years of the Union, and it is sincerely to be hoped that the best men, of all parties will be wise enough to recognize this, even if no coalition of the leaders is formed.

THE UPLIFT BY WILL.

Over in New Jersey is a three-year old boy who, under his grand-father's same State, as it happens, is a will, must refrain from smoking paper cigarettes till he is twenty-five if he would inherit a fortune. In the young woman who is to have her grandmother's money on condition that he neither marry an actor man nor a divorced man. In such freakish fashion the list is extended of attempts to regulate by the dead hand the affairs of the living world.

Diverse as human characters themselves are the things men seek to do by last will and testament. Some, moved by an impulse of business pride, make provisions for the perpetuation of trusts or commercial holdings. Others tie up great fortunes within family bonds. Many choose the post-mortem period for an extension of aid to philanthropic or educational enterprises. None of these reveals in his testamentary acts, as does any one of those who try to dictate by bequest as to the morals or marriages of their heirs, the quality of meddlesomeness.

Under circumstances of prohibition by will the human inclination to be contrary must have many fierce inward struggles with the human weakness of cupidity. The question well may remain an open one as to the moral value of victories which consist chiefly in winning the descending dollars. On the whole, it is not likely that the racial uplift has been of marked degree which has been accomplished through the certifying medium of the probation of wills.

Death in a Scratch

SIMPLE INJURIES WITH SERIOUS RESULTS.

Morris Quatzam, an eleven years old Windsor boy, has just died as the result of a scratch on his wrist. Poison entered the wound, which was caused by falling off his bicycle, and despite the physicians, the boy died. Such incidents as these—by no means infrequent—ought to make people realise the danger that may lie even in the smallest flesh wound.

Take a simple illustration. When a dirty knife a rusty needle, a splinter of dirty wood, a barbed wire fence, or a thorn, scratches the hand, the latter is inoculated with germs, of which the air about us is full. Directly these germs are introduced through the breach in the skin, a battle royal ensues between them and certain organisms in our blood.

When the invading germs are too strong for Nature's defences, in a few hours the finger will become hot and throbbing. A little later the wound may exhibit a whitish appearance in the middle of the swelling, and we have what is known as a festering or poisoned wound.

The way to avoid such serious results is to cleanse the wound and apply Zam-Buk. Zam-Buk is a powerful yet painless germ killer, and when applied to the broken skin is absorbed into the tissue instantly destroying the germs that spread disease and inflammation.

The flesh is thus soothed and purified, the wound made perfectly healthy, and all poison and cause of festering removed. Having done this, Zam-Buk then proceeds to heal the wound or sore with new healthy tissue, in a quick, painless, and perfect manner.

Zam-Buk must not be confused with ordinary ointments. Zam-Buk is a unique preparation, possessing antiseptic, soothing, and healing qualities that are not to be found together in any other preparation. It is not only a unique healing balm, it is also a skin food. For all skin diseases and injuries—cuts, bruises, burns eczema, chafing, ulcers, ringworm, etc., it is without equal. It is also used widely for piles, for which it may be regarded as a specific. All druggists and stores sell at fifty cents a box, or post free from Zam-Buk Co., Toronto, for price.

Found Gold.

It is believed that gold has been discovered in Peterborough County. While working on a piece of land on the Peterborough Lumber Company's limits in Cavendish Township, a short while ago, Elias Windover, whose home is in that vicinity struck rock that upon examination showed the presence of something that looked very much like gold. Mr. Windover brought samples to Peterborough and was advised by local gentlemen to send them to Toronto to the assayers. Mr. Windover is now awaiting a report from Toronto.

DOE BRIDGE CLOSED.

To Street Cars and ll Traffic.

Toronto, Sept. 25.—The Don bridge at Queen street was closed to street car and road traffic by the city engineer yesterday at ten o'clock in the morning. The defect in the bridge which caused the condemning of it was flaw in the lower cord of the main trusses. The defect is only a small one, consisting of three breaks not over a couple of inches in length on the steel girder It was discovered last night when the city bridge inspector was examining the bridge.

The first orders were to keep the cars from crossing the bridge, but the rigs were allowed to use the north side. This order was later countermanded and all traffic was stopped. On the west side of the bridge the railway gates were lowered, while on the other side a railfence was built and placards placed on them warning all vehicles to either go down the Don speedway or the Asplanade, according to which side they were placed on, and to make matters doubly sure a policeman was stationed at both ends.

IF SICK--WHY PAY

Unless Health First Returns.

Here is what should and can be done!

Now you would not willingly pay for food that was worthless—would you?

Then why pay for medicine until that medicine first proves to you its actual worth?

Positively knowing what Dr. Shoop's Restorative can do for the sick, I say to all "don't pay unless health first returns" And I back my Restorative with a signed and sealed 30 day "No risk, No pay" contract.

I publicly pledge to the sick everywhere that "Dr. Shoop's Restorative is absolutely free if it fails". Let others do the same or else pass their prescriptions by.

If you need more strength, more vitality, more vigor or more vim, use my Restorative a few days and note the immediate improvement.

When the Stomach, Heart, or Kidneys are wrong, then test Dr Shoop's Restorative. I do not mean the Stomach nor stimulate the Heart or Kidneys, for that is wrong. I care not if your chief complaint lies in medicine. The books below will most tell you how I am succeeding.

These books also tell of a tiny hidden nerve, no larger than a silken thread. They tell how that nerve, until it fails, actually gives to the Heart its power, its tone. Its nerve-centered action or impulse.

Those books will open up new and helpful ideas to three who are not well. They tell how the Stomach, and Kidneys each have their "centers or power nerves. They tell how the Restorative was especially made to reach and revitalize these weak or failing inside nerves. All of these half tell why I am able to say "It is free if it fails".

This is why I say "take no chance on a medicine whose maker dare not back it just as I do by this remarkable offer".

So write me today for the order.

I have appointed honest and responsible druggists in nearly every community to whom all may come to the sick.

But write me first for the order.

All druggists sell Dr. Shoop's Restorative and all are not authorized to give the 30 day trial.

So drop me a line always—and draw from disappointment and delays. Tell me also which book you need.

A postal will do.

Besides, you are free to consult me as you would your home physician. My advice and the book below are yours—and without cost.

Perhaps a word or two from me will show up some serious ailment. I have helped thousands upon thousands by my private prescriptions or personal advice plan. My best effort is surely worth your simple request. So write now while you have it fresh in mind, for tomorrow never comes. Dr. Shoop, Box 12, Racine, Wis.

Physicians Who Know Recommend Algonquin Park.

Many people have chosen resorts by the sea for their vacation this summer, others the mountains, and many the inland waters of the "Highlands of Ontario" for that much needed rest that one should take at least once every twelve months. In many cases the desired haven was found, but in others, the more fashionable resorts did not give the restful quiet which in most cases is needed and good accomplished. There is one return to the office with only half the place, however, which offers unlimited inducements to those whose health is run down, or those who are in need of relaxation from worry and work. This place is known as the Algonquin National Park of Ontario, situated 205 miles north of the City of Toronto and 168 miles west of Ottawa. Here the conditions are ideal. The altitude at the Park station, your objective point is 1700 feet above the sea level. The "Highland Inn," built for the accomodation of 100 people on a bluff over-looking Cache Lake, is a comfortable hotel set on one of the beauty spots of this charming reserve.

Modern with bathrooms with hot and cold water, large, bright sleeping rooms, cosy lounging rooms with large, bright open fire places, are a few of the special features. The "Inn is also heated by furnace.

The months of October and November are ideal in this locality and a sojurn there is recommended.

FIGHTING FEVERS.

Why Vigorous Measures Are Necessary In Cases of Sunstroke.

A clinical thermometer is probably as matter of course a household convenience in most families as is a stepladder or a broom, and it is well that its use and the general significance of its disclosures should be understood by these in authority, but fussiness and constant resort to it and continual discussion of tempera tures are to be deplored.

The old-fashioned way of placing the hand upon the child's body and announcing that it felt feverish or had a fever without any regard to mathematical accuracy as to degrees and fractions worked just as well as, perhaps better than, the new fashioned way carried to a nervous extreme. At the same time a rise of temperature always means something, and it most decidedly means the calling in of a physician if it does not go down of itself or yield to simple remedies.

When the temperature is taken by the mouth the thermometer should register about 98.7 degrees, although this may vary at different times during the day in perfectly well people. When it registers 99 degrees or 99.5 degrees the person is said to be feverish. Anything below 98 degrees is subnormal, and anything over 105 degrees is called hyperpyrexia, or high fever.

In many cases fevers are a sort of blessing in disguise. These are the fevers caused by the toxins of bacteria, of which typhoid is a type. The whole system is then engaged in a fight against the germs, and the battle is waged to more advantage apparently when "the blood is fighting hot." This is why, although the fever can be beaten down by the application of cold and the administration of drugs, it is often poor practice to suppress it in this way. Getting the fever down may be a momentary satisfaction, but it does nothing to help cure the underlying cause. It is as if a general should insist upon silencing his own guns.

At the same time the fever must be watched and kept in check, because this sort of fight is calling for an immense outlay from the system, and a raging fever not only burns up bacteria, but it feeds upon tissue and blood and all it can find, as any one can testify who has watched or lived through a convalescence from one.

What is true of the fever of a germ disease is false altogether in the fever of sunstroke. In this case the fever is the disease. It is not a regiment of infantry, but a conflagration, and it must be put out as quickly as possible and by all the means at one's disposal—cold baths, ice packs, ice water, anything that will beat it down.

The character of a fever is a great assistance to diagnosis in many cases, and this is why a physician should always be asked to sit in judgment on it.

Five Stages of the Sword.

It may be said that the evolution of the sword has passed through five distinct stages. First came the epoch of pure carnage, when men seemed to hew and hack each other for the mere pleasure it gave them; next the era of legend, when stupendous and impossible feats of arms were said to have been accomplished. Then followed the feudal time, a curious mixture of bloodshed and religion, when the piety of the crusaders was proved by their ability to slash the equally bloodthirsty Saracens. Succeeding this period sprang the noble season of skillful fence as the sword, no longer a weapon of pure attack, became a mixed arm of offence and defence combined. Finally we see its fall, being to-day a mere military accouterment, after attaining a glory that no one dreamed of during the days of its first rude and barbarous use.

Cause for Thanksgiving.

One fine summer night the whole village was disturbed in its slumbers by the deep tones of Nasreddin giving praise and thanks unto Allah. "What hath befallen thee, O Nasreddin," they inquired, "that at this hour of the night thou doth give praise and thanks until Almighty Allah?"

"As I lay half sleeping on my divan,' replied the hodja, "I looked up and suddenly beheld a white thing flapping by this window. This must be a ghost or jinn or some other evil spirit sent by Sheitan to torment true believers, methought, so I seized my bow and drove an arrow through it. I forthwith arose, and, behold it was no jinn, but my own shirt which the arrow had transfixed. Wherefore do ye see me giving just praise."

An Excuse For a Pardon.

When the stern Duke of Wellington was prime minister under George IV. he managed the old monarch easily enough, but when he attempted the same tactics with the young Queen Victoria he met his match. She constantly outwitted him. One of his earliest official acts was to bring before her a court martial death sentence which he expected her to sign as a matter of course. A soldier was to be executed for desertion, and as the death warrant was placed before the queen by the duke she raised her eyes, full of tears, to his face, saying:

"Have you nothing to say in behalf of this poor man?"

"Nothing," said the duke, standing at attention like one of his own privates; "he has deserted three times."

"Oh, your grace, think again," pleaded the queen, as if she were asking for the life of her dearest friend.

"Well, your majesty, he certainly is a bad soldier, but there was somebody who spoke for his good character. He may be a tolerably good fellow in civil life."

"Oh, thank you," said the queen in heartfelt tones, and before the astonished duke could utter a word of protest she had written across the paper the word "Pardoned."

The Reindeer Herd.

The latest news from Labrador indicates that Dr. Wilfred Grenfell's community of reindeer is a splendid success. The number of the herd has increased to seven hundred, and all the animals are in the best of health.

In the training and domestication of the deer the doctor's staff has made astonishing progress, and for traction purposes they are rapidly superseding the fierce and treacherous sledge-dogs, and in time will take their place altogether. In addition to this the does give milk of exceptional quality, which affords excellent sustenance for children.

A PERFECT DREAM CITY.

London on a Glorious Day of Sunshine and Blue Sky.

The following pretty description of a sunshiny day in London appeared recently in an English publication:

London was yesterday a city of gold and green and white. Golden sunshine in the streets and parks, green foliage on every tree upon which the sun shone down, white buildings, newly built or newly painted, with clear outlines under a sky of Oriental blue. What dream-city could be more perfect than London on such a day?

Truly it was an unforgettable day—a day on which it is good to be alive, very good to be young when the spring calls to the blood and when perfume steals into the senses; good even to be old and to sun oneself in the memory of other spring days as golden as this.

The London season is beginning! Good words to those who have the leisure and means to play the game, the merry game of the social whirligig, good even to those who are merely lookers-on.

Yesterday the fun had begun. The King was in town, the court was in the capital, the servants of society had pulled up the window blinds of town houses and the sun was shining.

So the streets were very full of life at its best and brightest. Down Bond street and Piccadilly—the highways of the lucky ones—there was an endless tide of carriages, and the sun gleamed upon brightly polished panellings, flashed fire from the brass head lamps and metal work of magnificent motor cars, and glistened on the smooth flanks of good horses, which went dashing by as proudly as though there were no such thing as petrol.

Women were in the carriages and walking on the shady side, and one man sighed because he could not wear salmon pink, or Madonna blue, or walk in lilac beauty like these ladies who were the flowers of the London streets. Flowers, literally because all their hats were in full blossom, brought out by this brilliant sunshine, and from the top of an omnibus one looked down upon moving bouquets of roses and daisies and forget-me-nots, as though all the flowers in Kensington Gardens had been plucked as the garlands of England's fair women.

Yet the men did their poor best, yesterday, to do credit to the divine day. Old Bucks had put on white waistcoats, and young bloods in new silk hats—bright and beautiful things—had put yellow gloves upon their hands. The Green Park was a paradise, into which had slunk many poor devils, against whom the gates of this paradise were not closed. These Weary Willies had come out of the slums, for spring called to them also, and they lay, in lazy happiness and seedy clothes, like corpses on the emerald greensward, which was a carpet worthy of Kings.

A Cool Deadhead.

Mr. Oscar Asche, the London actor, who, with his wife, Miss Lily Brayton, is on his way to Australia—his native land—which he left eighteen years ago, remarked just before he set sail, apropos of the slump in theatres, that the deadhead is a destroyer of drama. "Once give a man a free seat for a play," he said, "and you will have a difficulty ever after to make him 'pay to go in.' While I was touring with a certain highly respected manager, we were playing at a long-famous old playhouse in an ancient town. We had billed 'Macbeth' for the Friday night, but during that day the theatre was burnt down. For our next week there our chief contrived to borrow a playhouse a little way out of the district. On reaching there to rehearse on the Monday the manager received a letter saying that the writer had been given two dress-circle orders for the performance of 'Macbeth,' but as that play was not performed owing to the destruction of the theatre, the writer surmised that the manager would remit the money value of those orders."

PROFITS—There is a good profit in this Ink. There are 12 or 15 Ink Companies in the United States paying dividends of from 12 to 20 per cent. per annum.

THE KEARN'S INK CO. of Toronto was organized two years ago to manufacture the new CANADIAN WRITING INKS, invented by J. J. Kearns. The past two years has been spent in experimenting and improving quality and to-day it stands among the top notchers in the ink world. This ink has met with such spontaneous approval from users, and the trade has shown such willingness to buy in quantities, that the management deem it wise to enlarge their operations and make a big staple business enterprise out of this Company hence offer to the public.

The total capital is only $40,000, so that you can see that this is no inflated and watered wild cat scheme but a first-class legitimate investment offered to you—one where a dollar invested today will be worth at least two in a year and will pay 10 per cent. income on this.

Some Orders that We Received as to the Sale of Kearn's Ink

We found the demand practically without limit; we received orders and inquiries far beyond our ability to supply the goods. Orders came from such houses as Parson's Fair Syndicate 17 stores in Ontario, Central Business College, Ontario Government, King Edward Hotel, Grand Trunk Railway Co., National Trust Co., Toronto Railway Co., Separate Schools of Toronto and Peterboro', Imperial Accident & Guarantee Co., Central Canada Loan & Savings Co., Consumers Gas Co., Toronto Elec. Light Co., all of Toronto.

A SAFE MANAGEMENT

The entire management is in the hands of a Board of Directors of leading business men— men of executive and financial ability, men of "made reputations," men who can be counted upon to capably and honestly direct the affairs of the enlarged Company, and see that each and every stockholder receives every dollar of the earnings of his stock.

One Shot Wounded Two.

Belleville, Ont., Sept. 23.—While Fred Mills and Bert Bell, of this city were hunting in a bush just west of the city limits yesterday, they were getting through a fence, when the gun carried by Mills was accidentally discharged. The bullet penetrated the fleshy part of Mills' thigh, passing through it, and struck Bell on the tip of the right thumb, taking off a portion of it. The injuries sustained by Mills are not considered of a serious nature. He was brought to the city and taken to the hospital.

Tickling or dry coughs will quickly loosen when using Dr. Shoop's Cough Remedy. And it is so thoroughly harmless, that Dr. Shoop tells mothers to use nothing else, even for very young babies. A WELSH FESTIVAL.

Eisteddfod is Opened by Musicians in London.

In a pretty glade in Kensington Gardens, in London, near the Serpentine, the Welsh bards celebrated recently the ritual of the Gorsedd which marks the opening of the national eisteddfod.

According to the ancient tradition, the rites must be performed "in the face of the sun, the eye of light," and though the somber skies made it impossible to carry out the letter of the law, it was fulfilled sufficiently in the spirit by the performance of the rites in a druidical circle erected in the open air.

The circle consists of unhewn stones, outside of which three other stones are placed. In the centre of the circle is the Maen Llog, a large stone supported on three others.

A trumpeter, standing upon this stone, sounded the Corn Gwlad, thus formally opening the Gorsedd, and the prayer of the Gorsedd was recited in Welsh.

The bards, in their blue, green and white robes, presented a striking spectacle, and the insignia of his office rendered Dyfed, the archdruid, a notable figure. With his flowing white robe, oakleaf crown, and golden torque of horseshoe shape, he was impressive indeed as he mounted the Maen Llog and cried aloud thrice in a voice of thunder the formal challenge, "A oes Heddwch?" (Is it Peace?).

"Heddwch!" the assembly shouted, and Dyfed sheathed again the eight-foot sword which, in symbolic rite, he had half drawn from its scabbard.

Speech-making in Welsh followed, and then the bards and onlookers trooped off to the Albert Hall, where the eisteddfod met.

The proceedings at the hall during the morning were disappointing in a great many ways, and there appeared to be a deplorable lack of organization.

The best singing was heard in the chief choral competition, in which the first prize went to the Carnarvon Choral Society, and the second to the Llanelly Choral Society.

At the afternoon meeting Mr. Balfour made a most interesting speech in praise of music.

"Music has ever been one of the great arts in which Welshmen have excelled," he stated. "There cannot be a gift which carries with it higher pleasures—pleasures more easy of attainment, pleasures which leave no after-sting, no after-taste of evil, but which raise and must raise the whole level of civilised pleasures among the people who practice them.

"Music knows no national barrier; music is not subject to the limitations which unhappily beset languages. Music speaks to men of all races and of all tongues."

Costly Pennies.

Who was Wigla? Numismatists know, and gave £440 for two of his silver pennies at Sotheby's. Wiglaf, or Withlafs, as his name is sometimes spelt in the old chronicles, was that King of Mercia tributary to Egbert, first King of England, and held nominal sway between 825 and 839. His silver penny, without bust, with a cross in centre and a pellet in each angle within a beaded centre on the obverse, and lunettes and pellets on the reverse, caused exciting bidding, which reached £375 (Spink). Only one other of this particular type is known, and it is fortunately in the British Museum. Another Wiglaf penny, with a rude head in a circle and a cross-quadlet in centre of reverse, realised £174 (Lincoln). This was found at Dorking in 1817. The coin was that of the famous Readleigh collection. A penny of Egberht (786-781)—not to be confounded with Ecgberht, son of Offa of Mercia, but the King of Kent mentioned in old chronicles—without a bust, but with the King's name, made £183 (Lincoln). Only three other coins of this type are known, two being in the Hunter Museum, Glasgow. An East Anglian penny of Eadwald, 810-827, realised £88 (Lincoln), and one of Jaenberht, who was Archbishop of Canterbury between 765 and 199, £80. This was discovered near Netley Abbey, and wears the names of Offa and the Archbishop. In the digging of the foundation for the Martyrs' Memorial at Oxford, another of this prelate's pennies was found, and this fetched £20. A penny with the diademed bust of Cynethryth, who was Offa's Queen, made £30 (Spink).

Lord Balcarres as a Walker.

It was Lord Balcarres, a trustee of the National Portrait Gallery, who announced the saving to England of Holbein's picture, "The Duchess of Milan." His lordship has crowded much good work into his thirty-seven years of life. Not only has he distinguished himself in the dance of art and architecture — he is a trained architect—but he has also served the state in the House of Commons as one of the Unionist Whips. A noticeable characteristic in his rapid walk. "Barns' gallop in nowhere in it with Balcarres' walk," growled a recalcitrant member on one occasion after being fetched back to the neverending divisions while trying to escape. "It's no good unless you are always ahead."

Helping the Enemy.

A coal heaver was getting in a load of coal in the suburbs of London. He was shoveling in the coal at a good rate when he was startled by a terrible yell from the house adjoining.

"Wot the dickens is the matter?" queried the coal man, starting up.

"Matter, you thickhead!" shouted the man, frantically endeavoring to pull his hair up in clots by the roots. "You are putting the coal down the wrong hole. My wife's people live there!"—London Tit-Bits.

STUDYING ESQUIMAUX.

Government Will Make Further Investigations In North.

The Canadian Geological Survey, under the late Dr. G. M. Dawson, gathered from time to time a large amount of interesting and valuable information regarding the native races. Since the death of Dr. Dawson this portion of the work of the department has been allowed to languish, but this year a fresh start was made in a direction which cannot but prove to be of great historical and ethnological interest, as well as being of particular value in allowing the people of Canada to become better acquainted with their fellow citizens who occupy the vast frozen territory which forms our northern boundary.

The present subject of ethnological research by the department is the Esquimaux race; and it is deemed especially desirable that this work should be resumed amongst them just now, because their habits are rapidly changing and becoming more difficult for scientific study, as the white man penetrates the Far North.

The Esquimaux is perhaps by his natural gifts the most admirable of the native races of Canada. There are no more intelligent and kindly people than the Esquimaux of Northern Canada, and none that so readily respond to courtesy and good will; and yet they are probably the most misunderstood and misrepresented of all native races. The expedition which was fitted out last year for the study of the Esquimaux consists of Mr. V. Stefansson and Dr. R. M. Anderson. The undertaking is by no means a new task to Mr. Stefansson, as it is the second of a series of journeys he has planned to carry out within the next fifteen years, during which period he hopes to visit and study every Esquimaux settlement from East Cape, Siberia, to the east coast of Greenland and the shores of of Labrador.

The present journey is planned to cover two years, one of which Mr. Stefansson expects to spend between Cape Brown and Bathurst Inlet, Canada, the other on the Colville river, Alaska. He believes that near the mouth of the Coppermine river there is a group of Esquimaux who have never seen a white man; these he desires to study while as yet they are uncontaminated by white influences, and before "civilized" ways change their system of living.

Dynamited by Dog.

The news of a very remarkable accident at a mining camp at Hanging Stone Lake, near Gowganda, by which one man was killed and two injured, was brought to Montreal recently by Frederick Dunn, a resident of St. Johns, Quebec, who accompanied from Northern Ontario the remains of Andrew Dunn, the principal victim, for interment at his old home just outside that city.

Andrew Dunn and companions were dynamiting a vein. The fuse was ignited and the men ran, followed by Dunn's collie dog, which picked up the dynamite stick in his teeth. The explosion came just as the dog reached the cabin and dropped the explosive.

Dunn was killed almost instantly, his skull being fractured in two places, and one of his arms and two ribs being broken. One of the other men, Sims, was stunned and badly cut about the neck, while the other miner, Hackett, escaped with a few bruises. The dog, which was the cause of the disaster, bounded away and escaped injury.

A Man of Weight.

People in many Ontario towns know Mr. Holland, of Whitby, who has done excellent work as grand organizer of the Sons of Temperance. Mr. Holland is a big man—not only big in achievement, but big in person. He related on one of his tours how he had gone into a certain place to be weighed, but as the scales went up to only two hundred and fifty pounds, he could not succeed.

One time he went to the little village of Port Robinson, where the lodge was presided over by a demure but droll Worthy Patriarch. After the customary preliminaries Mr. Holland was admitted, and as he made his ponderous way to the platform the halting Worthy Patriarch remarked dryly:

"Well! they told me Holland was coming, but I think it's all of Holland and part of Belgium."

She Didn't Go Back.

Miss Agnes Laut, whose address as "yellow journals" and how they may be got rid of, created such a stir at the International Congress of Women, has ever been noted as one with views of her own and with a courage of her convictions. In Winnipeg she is remembered as a delicate girl with definite opinions and an independent spirit that entirely belied her looks.

When Miss Laut left Winnipeg to try her fate in the big world of journalism and literature, there were not wanting those who predicted that she would soon be back at her desk in The Free Press office. Her first work was the reporting of the meetings of the Joint High Commission in Quebec, and in this she succeeded in a way that ranked her work with that of the ablest Ottawa and Washington correspondents. From that time her rise has been steady, and though she has several times visited Winnipeg, she has evinced no tendency to occupy her old desk.

The Moose.

The moose is the largest animal now existing of the deer family, standing often as high as six feet, and sometime weighing 1,200 pounds; but notwithstanding its great size, it is very fleet of foot. When brought to bay, a blow with its fore foot or horns is a very serious matter for the huntsman. Often when pursued by man they have their intelligence to thank for their escape, for sometimes, if closely followed, they double in their tracks and stand motionless in some thicket until the hunter has slipped by, when they quickly glide away. At other times they make such a commotion as to preserve any but an experienced hunter, and their escape.

Conundrums.

Why are tallest people the laziest? Because they are always longer in bed than others.

Why was Job always cold in bed? Because he had such miserable coverlets.

What is the proper length for ladies' skirts? A little above two feet.

Why is a dyer's life an enigma? Because he lives when he dyes and dyes when he lives.

What is the greatest affair of the heart known to science? The circulation of the blood.

The Photographer need no longer waste his time in a stuffy dark room, for the Kodak Film Tank will develop his films in broad daylight and give better results. Write for booklet, "Tank Development."

TACTFUL CHAPERONS.

How They Should Dispose of Undesirable Young Men.

The perfect chaperon is born, not made, because to be at her best she must be constantly on guard without the appearance of watching her charges, and that means a poise and self control and an ability for self effacement that the average woman does not possess. And because of this lack of sufficiency chaperons are frequently maligned either by parents or young folk, for if she is too strict the latter are annoyed, and if not sufficiently so parents are displeased.

The most difficult problem that a chaperon has to manage is what to do when men whom she considers undesirable talk to her charges. To give them the cut direct is rude and places her in a most unfortunate position.

To show her displeasure quietly is not apt to be effective, for girls are likely to champion those whom they deem downtrodden, and, if the men have the least charm of manner or know how to make themselves agreeable, to snub only makes them more interesting to the average young girl. While no chaperon is so silly as to think that every man who meets her charge wishes to marry her, the older woman has nevertheless to remember that he may be a possible husband, and it is imperative that the girl should be guarded from undesirable associates. Probably the best way of managing such a situation is for the chaperon to be constantly in the foreground, without the appearance of being so, not giving the man any opportunity to develop the acquaintance beyond most formal lines.

Her greatest tact lies in so managing her charges that she can retain the girl's confidence, for so long as she has it she will know the situation. Once let her lose it, and she works in the dark, not being certain what the day may bring forth. As to how much liberty a girl may be given by her chaperon in summer, one can only say it depends greatly upon the girl and her associates. If they are reliable and she is sensible there is no need of her having a protector all the time, for her own good sense is enough. Girls are always given more freedom in summer than in winter, and with a man whom she has known intimately and is known to be a gentleman in the fullest sense of the word there is no reason why she should not drive, sail and walk unchaperoned.

NEEDLEWORK NOTES.

Among the dainty baby slips are those made with a Dutch neck for ing. "Ten lines of Victor Hugo are something not to be refused—for they endure." Hugo attached a similar exaggerated significance to everything he did and to every object that was in any way associated with him.

For instance, he considered his drawings, which were for the most part commonplace enough, of sufficient importance to make them the subject of a testamentary provision. In his will of Aug. 31, 1881, he wrote, "I give my drawings and everything which shall be drawn by me to the National Library of Paris, which will be one day the Library of the United States of Europe."

Hugo's drawings are said to have been produced more often than not in the following manner: If a blot of ink chanced to fall on his paper while he held his pen aloft in quest of a word or rhyme, he enlarged the spot absentmindedly and made additions to it instinctively under the influence of a species of subconscious direction until he had produced a sinister moonlight scene or a "venerable bourg dominating with its bristling ruins the shuddering waters of a river of legend." He elaborated with great care, however, during his irksome exile at Guernsey certain crude impressions he had transferred to his sketchbook during his journeys in the valley of the Rhine. Furthermore, being a great lover of children, he drew figures of the most extravagant sort for the amusement of the young people of his household.—Alvan F. Sanborn in Bookman.

Ending a Letter.

The simplicity of "Yours" as a letter ending would have astounded Jeremy Taylor, whose letters to John Evelyn often wind up with perfect triumphs of complexity in this respect. His form is, "Believe me that I am, in great heartiness and dearness of affection, dear sir, your obliged and most affectionate and endeared friend and servant," or "Your very affectionate friend and hearty servant." Even in his shortest peroration of the kind the "affectionate" and the "servant" are always the two indispensable words. Probably no man, woman or child would combine these two at the end of a letter today.—London Tatler.

NEW ZEALANDER ON ENGLAND.

Sir Robert Stout Delivers a Sharp Criticism on Old Land.

Sir Robert Stout, ex-Premier and present chief justice of New Zealand, has very definite ideas of the consequences of England's failure as a world-power. Sir Roberts knows the Antipodes as a man who has spent nearly all his life there, going out from the Shetland Islands at the age of 14, and returning to Great Britain for the first time now at the age of 65. He also knows New Zealand as one who has been chiefly concerned in building up the Island Dominion.

In an interview with the navy builder of 1885, Wm. T. Stead, he declares that England suffers chiefly from slackness and illogical views. The non-Conformists, for example, wish to disestablish the church, and at the same time establish religion in the parish school.

Laborers are very slack in their methods, and three men are needed to do the work of one. The young Englishmen are not equal to the New Zealanders and the farms are not well cultivated. There is lack of enterprise, care and energy on the part of the manufacturer. As a result Americans captured the best part of the New Zealand trade. The habit of fuddling, on which $900,000,000 a year are spent in England, is another source of national weakness noted by Sir Robert.

"We hope there will be no war," said the New Zealander, "and if war should come we hope Britain will be victor. But do not make any mistake about it. If by any disaster any foreign power were to dictate a peace in London which transferred New Zealand to the conquerer, the next day we should hoist the Stars and Stripes, the only other flag save that of the Union Jack under which New Zealanders would live."

Sir Robert should pay a visit to Canada.

Boom on Rand.

After a long interval it is once more quite "boom time" in Johannesburg. It is generally agreed that prospects have never been so good since 1895. All classes of business are already feeling the effects of better times. Activity on the Stock Exchange is enormous, for the public have at last fairly "gone into it."

One feature of the moment is the immense amount of pegging of claims going on in the surrounding district. Thousands of claims allowed to lapse in times of depression have been taken up again, and many flotations are probable, but there are fears in some quarters that this may be overdone and produce a reaction.

The general view, however, is that the upward tendency will last. The reduced working costs on mines have made payable the working of millions of tons of reef which hitherto have not been a profitable proposition, and at the same time have immensely increased the profits of the more valuable mines.

It is regarded as a good sign that so far the improvement has not produced the mania of gambling which marked the 1895 "boom." In the commercial part of the town traders report a marked increase in trade, especially in luxuries, such as pianos, motor-cars, carriages and horses, which first felt the bad times.

There are strong hopes that the wave of prosperity will result in the opening up of new mines and that it will thus absorb the unemployed.

AFTER TREATMENT

Peter E. Summers, of Kalamazoo, Mich., relates his experience:

"I was troubled with Nervous Debility for many years. I lay it to indiscretion and excesses in early youth. I became very despondent and didn't care whether I worked or not. I imagined everybody who looked at me guessed my secret. Imaginative dreams at night weakened me—my back ached, had pains in the back of my head, hands and feet were cold, tired in the morning, poor appetite, fingers were shaky, eyes blurred, hair loose, memory poor, etc. Numbness in the fingers set in and the doctor told me he feared paralysis. I took all kinds of medicines and tried many first-class physicians, wore an electric belt for three months, went to Mt. Clemens for baths, but received little benefit. While at Mt. Clemens I was induced to consult Drs. Kennedy & Kennedy, though I had lost all faith in doctors. Like a drowning man I commenced the New Method Treatment and it saved my life. The improvement was like magic—I could feel the vigor going through the nerves. I was cured mentally and physically. I have most them many patients and will continue to do so."

IN MEMORY OF TEDDY GROSS.

Who Died September 15, 1909, Aged One Year. Buried from His Grandparents' Residence, 365 Carlisle Avenue.

A loving one from us has flown.
A voice we loved is still
A place is vacant in our home,
That never can be filled.
Dear Teddie we do miss you so.
Our hearts go out in grief.
But God alone can hear our prayers
And he can give relief.

Dear Teddie you have gone to rest,
Your trials. They are all ore.
And if we live to do God's will
We will meet you there once more.
Yes, on that happy golden shore
Where sorrow is no more.
You have a crown a manshion fair,
A bright and lovely home.

Although your grand-parents miss you much
Your parents too must weep.
But yet beneath the cold damp ground
You sleep a quiet sleep.
Then why should we cry and complain
And think our portion hard
We have met the affliction, yet we know its your gain
You have entered the joy of your Lord.

Great Interest Centered in the West Peterborough Election Protest Trial---Court Room Crowded

St. Michael's College to Become a University

Toronto, Sept. 28.—St. Michael's College has ambitions, and is to to have a new set of buildings. It is growing, and its alumni propose to give it room to grow by buying new property and erecting new buildings so that the work may be enlarged and Catholic students may pursue a full course and obtain a University of Toronto degree while studying under Catholic auspices.

Since it has been seen that the present property on St. Joseph St. is too small for the requirements, the St. Michael's College Alumni Association has chosen a site for new junior and preparatory buildings. This site is on the outskirts of the city. The buildings there will leave the old buildings and grounds to be used entirely for university work.

The Alumni Association has issued notices to the members that it has undertaken to purchase this site at the price of $30,000. In order to do this the association has taken out papers of incorporation, and has opened subscription lists.

Just where the property is that has been purchased has not been given out. It would seem possible that the land which is thus described as being in the outskirts of the city may be adjoining that which was recently purchased for the new Loretto Abbey, north of Upper Canada College on Eglington avenue, in the town of North Toronto.

Germany will Not Reduce Navy Cost

Agreement Between Germany and England to Reduce Armaments Is Regarded As Impossible

Berlin, Sept. 28.—Day by day come new declarations made by prominent men standing in the foreground of German public life that any agreement with Great Britain regarding the mutual limitation of naval armaments is absolutely impracticable and beyond the limits of discussion.

Germany loses no opportunity of proclaiming through the mouths of her responsible statesmen and of her most influential politicians that she repudiates absolutely and entirely, the idea of concluding any such agreement with Great Britain. A prominent Conservative member of the German Reichstag contributes to the current number of the Finanz Chronik an article, from which the following characteristic passages are extracted:

"A naval politician recently declared that Great Britain and Germany must come to an understanding regarding the limitation of naval armaments, or a war between them will ensue. It is certain that this opinion is widely held in England, but nevertheless this is erroneous, and not at all dangerous. Such an agreement regarding the limitation of naval armaments can never be concluded.

CAUSE OF THE TENSION.

"It would be impossible to carry out and quite superfluous, and its continual discussion is the only cause of tension between England and Germany which at present exists.

"What is understood by an agreement of this kind? The British desire to maintain their absolute maritime supremacy with less financial outlay by demanding for themselves the dominion of the seas for all time, while other countries shall solemnly agree to limit the number of their warships. How could independent countries possibly agree to such treaty limitations? The German nation would never tolerate such a degradation.

"It would therefore be desirable if Great Britain would accustom herself to the growth of the German navy, because this cannot be changed, Germany desires and is determined to create a fleet which will make her a naval power, and which will suffice for the defense of her coasts, her colonies and her overseas trade.

"The question of the German fleet is a matter which concerns no one, but Germany, and in which no other country can interfere. Whether the British build one battleship or 100 is immaterial to us. The more they build the more they will exhaust their resources.

"Germany holds fast to the navy act, and builds without acceleration according to the fixed program whether England doubles or increases by tenfold her own Dreadnoughts. It is usual to speak of international armaments, but it is always England who keeps on increasing them. Germany has every reason to complain that England continually compels her to spend more money on her fleet.

LIMITATION IMPOSSIBLE

"The accusation that Germany compels England to build more battleships is entirely beside the mark. An agreement on the limitation of naval armaments is impossible and also superfluous as soon as Great Britain and Germany combine to maintain peace."

Herr Spahn, one of the leaders of the Roman Catholic Center party in the Reichstag in a speech delivered at Rheinbach, stated:

"Great Britain demands that she shall retain her maritime supremacy by means of the two-power standard. It cannot be denied that the insular position of England renders her fleet of more importance to her existence and position in the world than to any continental country. But the continental countries must also demand as their right that they shall extend their navies according to their own unfettered and uninfluenced judgment."

Prelates Want New Dioceses in West

Rome, Sept. 28.—As a result of the first Plenary Council of the Roman Catholic Church in Canada proposals have been made to the Vatican for the creation of New dioceses, especially in the Western Provinces, including one, the bishop of which would reside in Regina. Sub division dioceses in the Eastern Provinces are also suggested.

If a redistribution took place the diocese of Ottawa would probably be split up into two dioceses, the Provincial border being taken as the ecclesiastical boundary. Such division is more likely in consequence of the French-Canadians' claim for a diocese bishop of their own.

In the Commons Mr. Masterman stated that General Wolfe's tomb, at Greenwich, was not dilapidated, but the authorities of the church were willing to entertain any proposal from the Wolf representatives for its renovation.

Ald. Turner Advocates Issuing a Pamphlet Advertising the City

Ald. Turner during his chairmanship of the Reception Committee of the city council during the past year has learned a few things and among them is that on the occasion of an excursion coming to the city it is simply useless to go down to the station and try on a humble individual to welcome the visitors. Profiting by his attempt to give considera the good hand, attempts that were not as successful as did, Turner would have desired, he had suggested the preparation of a pamphlet advertising the city, and which could be given to incoming people, enabling them to visit Peterborough's places of interest, the parks, clubs, etc. Mr. H. E. Dobbin waited on the committee Tuesday night and suggested an idea he had thought of and which might be practical and to the point. The committee has not the money to go ahead with the work, but things will be so arranged that next year's committee can refer it up.

Ald. Turner had learned that a pamphlet setting forth Peterborough's show places, how to reach them, the location of parks, hotels, etc., would in addition be a good advertisement for the city. It could also be sent to societies throughout the Province during the winter, suggesting that prospective excursions make Peterborough their objective point, emphasizing the many advantages this city affords for outings.

It's a pity when sick ones drug the stomach or stimulate the Heart and Kidneys. That is all wrong! A weak stomach, means weak Stomach nerves, always. And this is also true of the Heart and Kidneys. The weak nerves are instead crying out for help. This explains why Dr. Shoop's Restorative is promptly Stomach, Heart and Kidney ailments. The Restorative reaches out for the actual cause of these ailments—the failing "inside nerves." Anyway, test the Restorative 48 hours. It won't cure so soon as that, but you will surely know that help is coming. Sold by all dealers

ARTHUR ALSEPT GOT $2.00 FROM MR. R. H. LEARY AFTER HE HAD VOTED

Considered He was Justified in Taking It

He Made a Declaration—Mark Harland Got $2.00 in the Little Room—Pritchard Banks and Clancy Got no Money but They Saw the Little Rooms

Two witnesses swore they got $2 from Mr. R. H. Leary in the little committee room on Simcoe street the afternoon of the election. They both stated that they had voted previously and that the money was not to influence their votes. They also signed declarations in Mr. Hall's office.

Three other witnesses were examined as to the system employed in paying money to the voters in Mr. Stratton's committee rooms

The first witness put in the stand this afternoon was Arthur Alsept. and he was examined by Mr. DuVernet. The witness resides on Harvey street and voted at the last election between 9.30 and 10.30 a.m. He was at the Reform Committee rooms about three in the afternoon. He got $2 from Mr. R. H. Leary. He was coming down Water street when he met a man who told him to go up to the committee rooms and went upstairs and there met Mr. Leary who took him into the little room on the right hand side. There Mr. Leary said, "Now I don't give you anything but it is under there." Witness lifted a book and found a $2 bill which he put in his pocket and later paid his grocery bill with it. He said not a word to any one at that time.

Later a man named Ferris asked him to go to Mr. R. M. Glover and he took him to Mr. Stratton who asked him if he had received anything for his vote. He said no. Then he was taken to Mr. Hall's office and for Mr. Davidson signed a affidavit that he had not been paid for his vote. This was according to the arrangement with Mr. Glover. He had not been paid for signing the declaration.

To Mr. Watson witness said he was an acquaintance of Mr. Gates and came here from London four years ago. This was the first vote he ever cast. He did not know what the $2 was given to him for. All he knew was that he got it and that it was being given away. Witness said that he never gave any information to anyone except Mr. Gates, on Wednesday last. He did not know how the information was secured, although he may have forgotten. He showed the $2 to his wife. He took the $2 because he was hard up and needed the money and he thought that was an honest $2. He had already voted and the money could not influence him.

He first met James Jordan outside the Bank of Montreal about 2.30 in the afternoon, he having looked at the post office clock, and learned from him of the $2 bills being given away in the Liberal committees rooms. He then went up to the Liberal rooms. He spoke to no one in the down stairs room that he knew. There was a crowd. He went upstairs and saw four or five Englishmen he knew but spoke to no one. He was there ten minutes. Then someone said here was another square peddler. I may go out of the small room into the large room and said you had better let him go first," meaning the witness. Witness then went into the little room. Mr. Leary went in with him and said "I don't give you anything but it is under there. Witness lifted up a cardboard box and found $2 there which he took and went downstairs and out on to Simcoe street. Sam Wainwright had canvassed him for his vote some time before. Witness said he would vote for the first man who caught him the morning of the election day and took him to the polls. He was not looking for money for his vote. Sam Wainwright got him first. Sam was supporting Mr. Stratton.

He distinguished between an affidavit made in Mr. Davidson's office and his evidence under oath in the witness box. He went to Davidsons office with Messrs. Glover and Rider. Mr. Davidson prepared the affidavit and then said "Come on down the street with me, I'll only keep you a minute." Witness was told by Ferris that if he did not sign the affidavit he would get two years in jail. Witness signed the affidavit stating that he was not in the Liberal committee room on election day, which was a falsehood.

MARK HARLAND.

Mark Harland was called and to Mr. DuVernet he said he was here during the last election and voted He was in Mr. Stratton's rooms that day but has made no statement to anyone about it. He saw several in the rooms he knew. He got $2 that day from Mr. Leary. It was about four o'clock in the afternoon. It was rumored about town that money was to be had and he went for it. In the room he saw Mr. Leary who asked his name and write it down. Then Mr. Leary put a $2 bill under the lid of a cardboard box and witness took it. Mr. Leary had a bundle of money that he took the bill off. As soon as witness got the money he went out. He had voted early in the morning. Witness then named over several others who were present in the big room upstairs at the time. Witness was in Mr. Stratton's room first thing in the morning before he voted. Saw people in the room and money was spoken of. Witness was told to go and vote and there would be money to be had. He did vote and he came back in consequence of that understanding.

To Mr. Watson witness said he worked in Oshawa in the tannery. He has lived in this country three years. This was his first vote and he had been promised money and he acted upon that promise. He did not expect to get any money when he voted. He got back to the committee room in the afternoon. He found a string of men waiting outside the door of the small room, the same as outside the theater. He joined that string and waited his turn to go into the little room where he got his money. There were no words used in the little room except that Leary asked him his name. Then Leary put the $2.00 bill under the lid of a cardboard box and told him to take it. Leary turned his back.

JOHN PRITCHARD.

John Pritchard was called and to Mr. DuVernet said he was a laborer in the city. On election day he was in Stratton's committee rooms with Harland and Alsept. He was also there in the afternoon and was upstairs where there was a lot of men. There was a little room into which he saw several go in but he did not know any of them. He went up to see Mr. Stratton or Mr. Frank Kerr. He voted that day and was accompanied by Mr. Harland to the polls between 10 and 11 o'clock. He heard that money was being passed around. He got none and knew of no one who did. But the door was always closed after the person went in.

He made a declaration before Mr. Davidson at the request of Mr. R. M. Glover who took him down. Mr. Hall was present at the time. Witness only went to the lawyer's office once.

He told several that he had received money for his vote but he had not. He heard Mr. Leary's name mentioned in connection with the money. He told 40 or 50 people or more that he had got money. Since he made his declaration he had told no one.

To Mr. Watson witness said he had no knowledge whatever of any money transactions that day. He did not know the Conservatives were spreading the report that money was being handed out at the Liberal rooms. He told of the meeting with Ferris and others at the White House when they bought him beer freely and tried to force him to sign a false affidavit to the effect that he had received money from Stratton or his agents. Witness refused to say he got any money or knew of anyone getting any.

To Mr. DuVernet he said he would swear that he did not tell Mr. Walker last night that he had got $2.

MAT CLANCY.

Mat Clancy was sworn and to Mr. DuVernet he said he was in Stratton's committee rooms on election day in the afternoon about 3 o'clock. He saw Mr. Leary in the big committee room and go into a little room. He saw several others go in there. They were taken in by Mr. Hall. Mr. Stratton and he went in. He saw Sheppard go in. He then said he knew nothing of the east room except that he saw several go in. He saw Mr. Davidson take them in, and he saw Mr. Stratton take one in. He thought it was Mr. Jobbitt of the G.T.R. He saw Mr. Leary there.

To Mr. Watson he said he was there in the morning and afternoon a great deal of the time. He said the door of the east room was not open when anyone was going in or coming out. He saw Mr. Leary come out of the east room once.

ANTHONY MONGOUER.

Anthony Mongouer was called and said that he was at the Liberal committee rooms and that he got money.

Here Mr. Watson objected to the witness being heard. Their lordships decided to leave it over until the morning.

ALBERT L. BANKS.

Albert L. Banks was then called, and he said he voted at the last election. He was at Stratton's committee rooms about three o'clock and he named over several he saw there. He was in the little room at the far end. He was spoken to by Mr. Leary who asked him if he had voted and then they went into the little room. He got no money or anything else. He was there about two minutes. He was asked if he had voted and he said yes. He said he never told anyone that he had got $2 there. No one had seen him about his vote. He got no money from anyone. He made a declaration but did not know the name of the person who asked him to do so. He got no money for making the declaration.

Mr. DuVernet told him to bring his copy of the declaration with him in the morning.

To Mr. Watson witness said he worked until noon and was at the committee rooms about two hours. He saw no signs of anything going on wrong.

Tuesday Morning

On Tuesday morning two witnesses were examined. Mr. Walter Davidson denied the charges against him. Mr. Ashley swore to getting $2.00 from Mr. R. H. Leary in the little east committee room.

When the court opened this morning at ten o'clock Walter S. Davidson was called.

He said in part: I reside in Peterborough and took some part in the election. I had no particular position. I was under no person's instructions. Well, I might say I had an extra office staff when they got too busy. I got Mr. Bryson to hire men and I paid them. Outside of that I handled no money. Any work I couldn't get done in the office I got Bryson to get men to help me. We had a telephone in one small room in the committee rooms. Some nights there would be one hundred there, other nights not fifty. I principally worked with Mr. Bryson and Mr. Denno in No. one ward, that would be in the south ward, and, I think, Mr. Duncan in No one. In No. two Mr. Leary was working. I don't think Mr. Taylor did much work for Mr. Stratton, but principally he was in and out. Kingscote the same. E. S. Clarry was not in the committee rooms at all. We had no ward committees that is, regularly appointed. There was a table for each ward; one person undertook to look after the ward, and any person coming in went to the particular table of his ward and was pumped for all he was worth for any information he had. The chairmen were: No. 1, A. H. Stratton; No. 2, Leary. I can't remember Nos. 3 and 4. No. 5 was I think, Mr. Wm. Scott.

I was at the committee rooms nearly every night, but not in the day time. I never got a cent to distribute and paid no money except what I have told you, amounting to about $40, which I gave to Mr. Bryson to pay the men he had hired to do work. I had no account from him, but took his word for it. I have no memo showing payments. I don't remember the size of any amount I paid Bryson. I paid this in cash of my own notion. I don't know the number her or size of bills which I paid to Bryson or the name of the bank. I don't know how many people were employed or what they were paid by Bryson. I never spoke to Sheppard about any money or paid him any money. I never spoke to Pope.

I suppose now I might have sent in an account against the candidate, but I didn't for any money I spent. I have never mentioned it to Mr. Stratton. I think the amount I spent was between $35 and $40. It was out of my own pocket. Some of the work I was doing was having books prepared for the canvassing of voters. It wasn't necessary for any one to tell me what had to be done. I knew vouchers should be got for money expended. I don't remember of ever taking any vouchers. I didn't know how many men were being hired. Grimison I saw around the committee rooms. I didn't pay him any thing. I think I saw him there during the day time, but whether he was doing any work, I don't know.

Bryson didn't tell me to whom he was paying this money, and I didn't enquire.

The witness, in reply to Mr. Watson, said he was in the habit of working at elections for some time past, and volunteered his services without speaking to anyone about it. There are always a number of people start in to work. It is for a good cause. There was meeting at which men were selected to look after different wards. There was no particular request that he know of to anyone to work. The principal work to be done was getting and tabulating information. Mr. Stratton took no part in any of these proceedings at any time to my knowledge. I don't think he knew the name of the chairman. Any

Commander Peary Says Whitney was in Conspiracy with Cook

New York, Sept. 28—The center of the Hudson-Fulton festivities today was the route chosen for the historical pageant of commemorative floats.

Today's pageant really represented the supreme effort of the committee. For several months 300 artists carpenters, and papier mache manipulators worked in an immense barnlike structure in Bronx Park preparing the wood and plaster fixtures which today, bright in paint and paper tinsel, decorated the 54 floats in the procession. Nearly 20,000 men, women, and children, most of them in costume, representing every national and patriotic society in the city passed as historical personages on these floats or marched between and besides them. The cost of the whole spectacle was $300,000

The sums expended to enable several hundred thousand cheering Hudson-Fulton guests to view this spectacle was enormous. On every available spot along the five-mile route of march stands had been erected, and the sums paid for seats on these varied from $1 to $5. Windows fronting on the two streets brought still larger prices and the threatening weather today raised the value of window seats to rire.

A VAST MULTITUDE.

It is estimated that when the parade started from 100th street early in the afternoon nearly a million spectators were jammed into the space between the house walls along Central Park west and Fifth Ave.

The story unfolded by the floats and their customed characters deals with the history of New York and the country immediately surrounding. In four periods—The Indian, Dutch, colonial and modern.

INJURIES WERE FATAL

Peterboro' Lady Passed Away at Toronto—Was Thrown From Street Car.

Toronto, Sept. 28.—Miss M. Peck of Peterborough, died at two o'clock this morning at the residence of Mr. Peter Blackey, 123 Empress Crescent, where she had been visiting, as the result of a fall from a street car about eight o'clock last evening. Miss Peck was returning to Mrs. Blackey's house from a call on friends, but the car did not stop when she rose to get off, and there being a rather sharp curve at the corner of King street and Beatty avenue, the swing of the car threw Miss Peck to the pavement. The fall fractured her skull and the woman was unconscious till she died.

An inquest is being held this afternoon.

Miss Peck was about 50 years of age, and comes of a well-known Peterborough family. Her body will be taken to Peterborough for burial.

The death of Miss Peck will be regretted by a large circle of friends in this city. She was the second daughter of Mr. A. R. Peck of Ashburnham. Mr. E. A. Peck left yesterday morning to take charge of the remains. The funeral which will be private will take place from the family residence, 197 Mark street, Thursday afternoon to Little Lake cemetery.

NAVIGATION CO. FINED

Steamer Otonabee Carried Larger Number of Passengers Than Certificate Provides For.

The Otonabee Navigation Company was fined one hundred dollars and costs, amounting in all to $102.95 at the police court yesterday morning. The charge was that the steamer Otonabee carried a large number of passengers on a trip than was provided for in the boat's certificate.

Mr. R. F. McWilliams represented the defendants and pleaded guilty. Mr. E. L. Goodwill acted for the Dominion Government.

The action was brought by the Department of Justice of the Dominion Government for violation of the Canadian Shipping Act. On the 3rd day of August the steamer Otonabee carried an excursion party from Millbrook up through the canal, and the number of passengers was in excess of the number the certificate of the boat allows for. The registrar Mr. Robert Hall collector of customs, had the boat arrested at Nassau, and this led to the information being laid.

GERMAN ADVOCATES MUCH BIGGER ARMY

KAISER'S MINISTER OF WAR ISSUES SERIOUS WARNING.

Where is the Money to Come From? —This is what is Worrying the Kaiser and his Finance Minister.

Berlin, Sept. 28.—Herr von Rath, member of the Prussian House of Deputies, who was formerly a councilor of legation in the German diplomatic service, contributes to the Tag an article on the unsatisfactory condition of the German army. He writes:

"The new minister of war, Gen. von Heeringen, has uttered a serious and very noteworthy warning. He has declared in an interview that the unsatisfactory finances of the empire influenced the last military estimates and that the lack of money is felt in all branches of military administration. His utterances have been reproduced by the whole German press without any word of contradiction, and it appears beyond all doubt that they are quite correct.

"Their gravity and their importance lie in the fact that it now has been made clear on unquestionable authority that we are not doing enough for our army to maintain its efficiency. This information is of a nature to alarm all classes of the population, because all parties except the Socialists are absolutely united in the conviction that the efficiency of our army is the basis of our national existence.

"We are all convinced that the German army must not only possess a relatively good organization, but that it must be the very best possible organization, because Germany is the most exposed country in Europe. Owing to our geographical position we are wedged in between the mightiest military countries in the world, so that our safety and our national existence depend on our army.

"It is certain that the army must be increased. It is only a question whether this increase ought not to ensue immediately, instead of waiting for several years.

"The utterances of the minister of war make it necessary to investigate the question whether the financial resources at the disposal of the country are properly divided between the army and the navy. It must be ascertained whether Germany, owing to her geographical position, must maintain the most powerful army, and also afford an enormous fleet which can only be compared to that of Great Britain."

PARIS TO LONDON ON AIRSHIP WINGS

FRENCHMAN PREPARING FOR FLIGHT TO BEAT ALL RECORDS.

New Style Machine now Being Manufactured— Said to be a Wonder.

Paris, Sept. 28.—The announcement that the Daily Mail garage at Wormwood Scrubs is ready for the reception of the reception of the dirigible Clement-Bayard, No. 2, which is to sail to London to be tested by the British military authorities, with a view to its possible purchase for the nation, has acted as an additional stimulant to M. Clement, who is devoting close personal attention to the progress of the work of preparing the machine.

The powerful motors, which will give 300 horsepower at least, and probably more, are being once more put together, and in a few days will be again tested, with a view of trying them for four hours at a stretch If the motors will run uninterruptedly for four hours, the journey from Paris to London will be completed with a single stoppage. But it is M. Clement's ambition that his new airship shall, if possible, complete the 280 miles in a non-stop run of 10 hours, and therefore the most painstaking efforts are to be made to tune the motors up to such a pitch by continual practice that they may be relied upon for a long run of at least eight or nine hours. Experiments so far do not hold out hope of the motors running without trouble for more than four hours, and this would necessitate a stop before crossing the channel for overhauling.

Meanwhile, the construction of the various parts of the airship is proceeding with great deliberation. The cradle, or car, is now virtually completed, and in a few days will be ready for inspection. There is, however, some delay with the huge envelope, owing to the care that is being taken to prevent the slightest mishap. It is hoped that the airship will be in a position to make the first trial trip in the neighborhood of Paris during the third week in October.

THE FARMER AND HIS MOTOR CAR.

We quoted briefly the other day the warning of Mr. J. J. Hill on the era of extravagance which prevails in the United States at this time, coupled with the steady decrease in agricultural activity. A pretty pendant to the remarks of the railroad king may be found in the dissertation along parallel lines by the Secretary of the United States Agricultural Department. We do not know whether Mr. Wilson was inspired by Mr. Hill's views or not. But that does not affect the significance of his statements They are, indeed, even more startling than those of Mr. Hill, for Mr. Wilson gives specific instances of what we may almost call the profligacy of living noticed among the masses. It is not to be wondered at that the price of necessaries, to which we also alluded recently is steadily rising, if the workingman lives in better style than the Virgin Queen. Even allowing for the changes that have taken place since the Sixteenth Century, history does not record that Elizabeth or her Court stinted themselves in what certainly were classed as luxuries in those "spacious days." Anything closely resembling the mode of living then the vogue must, if indulged in now, certainly be looked upon as more than comfortable. By all means let the workingman be comfortable, if in that state he is not endangering the future of his children and theirs. But when he does so, be assuredly establishes a danger which strikes at the very roots of his country's well-being. Mr. Wilson finds that the farmer, one class which largely employs labor, is setting the example of improvidence by investing the profits of the fat years in luxuries which we only associate with the "near-rich," instead of putting them into the proverbial stocking or into equally safe but interest-bearing ventures. The reason for this is partly ascribed to suspicion of Eastern securities which it is dreaded that a single year may prove a wide-meshed sieve. This excuse, if excuse it be, is the most alarming symptom of instability which could possibly be adduced, and we can only hope that it is an excuse only. We are too nearly sib to Uncle Sam's breed, geographically at least, to read so disquieting a "Mene, Mene" without apprehensions on our own account. But fortunately conditions, agricultural and and otherwise are based on more stable foundations here. We should have welcomed, however, a hint from the American statesman as to how the present evil is to be cured and the prospective far more perilous one to be averted. If scepticism is abroad coupled with extravagance, there is instant need for measures of a most heroic nature to restore confidence and engender a new national sanity.

TELEGRAPHS AND TELEPHONES.

A United States census bulletin tells us that more than 15,000,000 miles of wire were in use for the telegraph and telephone systems of the country last year. To be exact, 12,999,369 miles were telephone wire and 2,072,851 were telegraph. This would encircle the earth at the equator more than 600 times. The telegraph wires carried in 1907 no fewer than 368,470,509 messages, 5,869,317 of which were by cable. Only eleven of the incorporated cable and telegraph companies paid dividends, but the total income of the companies was $51,583,868. The mileage of the oceal cables increased between 1902 and 1907 by 177.6 per cent. Six commercial wireless systems were in operation in 1907, with a capitalization of $39,450,000. They transmitted 163,517 messages, and were operated at a loss of $47'628. It is stated that although inter-urban roads early took up the telephone for despatching, the larger railroads of the United States have been disinclined to substitute the telephone for the long established telegraph, the general objection being that of liability to mistakes through the similarity in sound of different words when transmitted by telephone.

PROLONG THE SEASON

A writer in Colliers for September has a very readable article on the matter of saving the summer. He says it is up to Canada to save her summer, so as to keep the tourist trace here, allow people to enjoy the balmy breezes of our climate, and incidentally gipe the merchants and others a better chance to prosecute industrial pursuits. There is no doubt a lot in what the writer says. He even advocates that the schools should not open for a fortnight later so that parents and children may the better enjoy the autumn weather. It is said in the article that many of the rural population are crying for the change so that after the laborious work of the farm they may enjoy needed relaxation on the lakes and rivers for which Canada is famous. Other countries are making efforts to prolong the summer in so far as human agency can do so, and the subject of retaining it is certainly one worthy of consideration. This season of the year is pleasant for travel, in fact more so than in the sultry days of midsummer, but she chief opponent of an extended summer is the weather clerk, but despite his prognostications, let us make the summer last as long as we can.

AN EXPLOSION

Fifty or More Persons Were Injured.

Pittsburg, Pa., Sept. 27.—At least fifty persons were more or less seriously injured and several are believed to have met death shortly before noon today, when an explosion occurred in the offices of the Columbian Film Exchange, rooms 414 and 415 Fergusan Building, running from third to Fourth avenues, between Smithfield and Wood streets.

The walls of the buikcings, an eight-storey structure are bulging, while not an office escaped without damage. Windows were blown out and partitions were blown down.

Hundreds of firemen are searching the ruins for victims.

The cause of the explosion is not known at present. In some manner the inflammable films were ignited, and the next moment a terrific explosion took place. The detonation could be heard for blocks.

Occupants of adjoining office buildings rushed to the scene and were joined in a few minutes by firemen and reserved squads from the various police districts.

Throughout the entire eight stories the rescuers encountered men, women, boys and girls who were either burned or were injured by flying debris. Their crying and pleadings were pitiful.

Every hospital in greater Pittsburg was notified. For over an hour the clang of ambulances excited pedestrians on the downtown streets.

THREATENS SECOND EXPLO

At 1.38 p.m., the police are clearing the four streets near the Ferguson building. Fire has broken out and a second explosion is imminent. It is feared the eight-storey building is about to collapse.

Don't risk even a penny—until health first returns.

And I mean just exactly that.
I am the one physician who says to the sick: "I will, out of my own pocket, pay for your doctoring if it fails to bring you help!"
And for 25 years Dr. Shoop's medicines have been used and recommended in every city and in-habited in America. They are positively stocked in every community—and every druggist
Then why pay the cash, and at your risk, for other unwarranted and untested medicines? Thousands upon thousands have in the past successfully used Dr. Shoop's Restorative. When the stomach nerves, or the Heart or Kidney nerves fail, these sick ones know how quickly Dr. Shoop's Restorative will bring them back to health again. But best of all, they positively take no money risk whatever. They know that when health fails to return, Dr. Shoop will himself gladly pay the dru- gist for that one full 25 day treatment is freely granted. But write me first for an order.

Then

This will mean delay and disappointment.
All druggists sell Dr. Shoop's Restorative and Dr. Shoop's Rheumatic Remedy, but all are not authorized to give the 25 day test. So drop me a line instead—for I have appointed one honest and responsible druggist in almost every community in this land who will supply you, at my request, with a full 25 day treatment of whichever one of my medicines is to you most needed. Then, after you have used it, if you are willing to say you are benefited, you pay him the regular price. Not a penny in advance—not a penny at any time unless you are willing to say you are benefited.

Pay

Just write me first for an order. Tell me which book you want. The book below will surely open up new and helpful ideas to those who are not well. Besides you are perfectly free to consult me just as you would your home physician. My advice and the book I know are yours—and without cost.

Perhaps a word or two from me will clear up some serious ailment. I have helped thousands upon thousands by my private prescription or personal advice plan. My best effort is freely yours for simple asking, while you have it fresh in mind, for tomorrow never comes. Dr. Shoop. Box 68, Racine, Wis.

England No Longer an Isolated Island

Berlin, Sept. 28.—Herr Rudolf Martin, who was formerly an official in the imperial ministry of the interior and who has made a name for himself by foretelling the recent development in aerial navigation at a time when his prophecies were ridiculed by all serious men, has written a pamphlet entitled "Wright and Zeppelin" which is being sold at the popular price of five cents.

The fourth chapter of this pamphlet is entitled "England No Longer an Island," and contains the following noteworthy passages, in which he asks:

"What is the most important change produced by Wright and Zeppelin? England ceases to be an island The mightiest world empire of the present time is Britain, and Britain has obtained her world power as an island.

"The defeat of the British fleet in the North Sea and the landing of a German army in England will be greatly facilitated by the development of the aeroplane side by sice with the dirigible airship. The number of dirigible airships will only increase slowly, because they are costly and difficult to construct, but the number of cheap aeroplanes will grow at an enormous speed.

WHAT MAY BE

"Even if a war between Britain and Germany were to break out in ten years' time, it is improbable thae the number of German dirigible airships would exceed 1000, but in view of the magnificent development of aeroplanes there can be no doubt that in ten years' time there will be more than 10,000 aeroplanes in Germany.

"A British fleet in the North Sea would be in a very dangerous position if compelled to encounter a German aerial fleet of dirigible airships and aeroplanes. Aeroplanes and dirigible airships can travel faster than battleships. At an altitude of 4900 feet large airships are fairly secure from the guns of battleships.

"Night and fog and clouded skies for aerial warships give many possibilities of hovering over floating battleships or over naval ports and dropping their destructive dynamite torpedoes. Where could the British fleet of battleships take refuge? In the home ports of Sheerness, Dover or Portsmouth the fleet would offer an excellent target for aerial projectiles.

WAR IN THE CLOUDS.

"If German airships can cross the narrow chanoel, 20 miles in width, in half an hour, they are immune from the attack of the British fleet. Wright or Zeppelin, starting from Calais, could reach London in two or three hours. After the bombardment of London the hug? airships of Count Zeppelin or Professor Schuette could quickly return across the channel.

"Germany's success in war with Britain would depend upon two premises: First, that Germany shall immediately increase the number of her aerial vessels of all kinds; and, second, that Germany shall not fall into the error of undertaking an aerial attack in unlavorable weather.

"William the Conqkeror waited in 1066 with his army and fleet more than a month for a favorable wind, and, thanks to his patience, achieved the great success of capturing England and founding the English race and world power."

A clever popular Candy Cold Cure Tablet—called Preventics—is being dispensed by druggists everywhere. In a few hours, Preventics are said to break any cold completely. And Preventics, being so safe and teatlike, are very fine for children. No Quinine, no laxative, nothing harsh nor sickening. Box of 48—25c. Sold by all dealers.

Physicians Who Know Recommend Algonquin Park.

Many people have chosen resorts by the sea for their vacation this summer, others the mountains, and many the inland waters of the "Highlands of Ontario" for that much needed rest that one should take at least once every twelve months. In many cases the desired haven was found, but in others, the more fashionable resorts did not give the restful quiet which in most cases is needed and good accomplished. There is one return to the office with only half the place, however, which offers unlimited inducements to those whose health is run down, or those who are in need of relaxation from worry and work. This place is known as the Algonquin National Park of Ontario, situated 205 miles north of the City of Toronto and 168 miles west of Ottawa. Here the conditions are ideal. The altitude at the Park station, your objective point is 1700 feet above the sea level. The "Highland Inn," built for the accomodation of 100 people on a bluff over-looking Cache Lake, is a comfortable hotel set on one of the beauty spots of this charming reserve.

Modern with bathrooms with hot and cold water, large, bright sleeping rooms, cosy lounging rooms with large, bright open fire places, are a few of the special features. The "Inn is also heated by furnace.

The months of October and November are ideal in this locality and a sojurn there is recommended.

FIGHTING FEVERS.

Why Vigorous Measures Are Necessary In Cases of Sunstroke.

A clinical thermometer is probably as matter of course a household convenience in most families as is a stepladder or a broom, and it is well that its use and the general significance of its disclosures should be understood by those in authority, but fussiness and constant resort to it and continual discussion of temperatures are to be deplored.

The old-fashioned way of placing the hand upon the child's body and announcing that it felt feverish or had a fever without any regard to mathematical accuracy as to degrees and fractions worked just as well as, perhaps better than, the new fashioned way carried to a nervous extreme. At the same time a rise of temperature always means something, and it most decidedly means the calling in of a physician if it does not go down of itself or yield to simple remedies.

When the temperature is taken by the mouth the thermometer should register about 98.7 degrees, although this may vary at different times during the day in perfectly well people. When it registers 99 degrees or 99.5 degrees the person is said to be feverish. Anything below 96 degrees is subnormal, and anything over 105 degrees is called hyperpyrexia, or high fever.

In many cases fevers are a sort of blessing in disguise. These are the fevers caused by the toxins of bacteria, of which typhoid is a type. The whole system is then engaged in a fight against the germs, and the battle is waged to more advantage apparently when "the blood is fighting hot." This is why, although the fever can be beaten down by the application of cold and the administration of drugs, it is often poor practice to suppress it in this way. Getting the fever down may be a momentary satisfaction, but it does nothing to help cure the underlying cause. It is as if a general should insist upon silencing his own guns.

At the same time the fever must be watched and kept in check, because this sort of fight is calling for an immense outlay from the system, and a raging fever not only burns up bacteria, but it feeds upon tissue and blood and all it can find, as any one can testify who has watched or lived through a convalescence from one.

What is true of the fever of a germ disease is false altogether in the fever of sunstroke. In this case the fever is the disease. It is not a regiment of infantry, but a conflagration, and it must be put out as quickly as possible and by all the means at one's disposal—cold baths, ice packs, ice water, anything that will beat it down.

The character of a fever is a great assistance to diagnosis in many cases, and this is why a physician should always be asked to sit in judgment on it.

Five Stages of the Sword.

It may be said that the evolution of the sword has passed through five distinct stages. First came the epoch of pure carnage, when men seemed to love and hack each other for the mere pleasure it gave them; next the era of legend, when stupendous and impossible feats of arms were said to have been accomplished. Then followed the feudal time, a curious mixture of bloodshed and religion, when the piety of the crusaders was proved by their ability to slash the equally bloodthirsty Saracens. Succeeding this period sprang the noble science of skillful fence as the sword, no longer a weapon of pure attack, became a mixed arm of offence and defence combined. Finally we see its fall, being to-day a mere military accouterment, after attaining a glory that no one dreamed of during the days of its first rude and barbarous use.

Cause for Thanksgiving.

One fine summer night the whole village was disturbed in its slumbers by the deep tones of Nasreddin giving praise and thanks unto Allah. "What hath befallen thee, O Nasreddin," they inquired, "that at this hour of the night thou doth give praise and thanks until Almighty Allah?"

"As I lay half sleeping on my divan," replied the hodja, "I looked up and suddenly beheld a white thing flapping by this window. This must be a ghost or jinn or some other evil spirit sent by Sheitan to torment true believers, methought, so I seized my bow and drove an arrow through it. I forthwith arose, and, behold it was no jinn, but my own shirt which the arrow had transfixed. Wherefore do ye see me giving just praise."

An Excuse For a Pardon.

When the stern Duke of Wellington was prime minister under George IV. he managed the old monarch easily enough, but when he attempted the same tactics with the young Queen Victoria he just his match. She completely outwitted him. One of his earliest official acts was to bring before her a court martial death sentence which he expected her to sign as a matter of course. A soldier was to be executed for desertion, and as the death warrant was placed before the queen by the duke she raised her eyes, full of tears, to his face, saying:

"Have you nothing to say in behalf of this poor man?"

"Nothing," said the duke, standing at attention like one of his own privates; "he has deserted three times."

"Oh, your grace, think again," pleaded the queen, as if she were asking for the life of her dearest friend.

"Well, your majesty, he certainly is a bad soldier, but there was something [illegible]

The Reindeer Herd.

The latest news from Labrador indicates that Dr. Wilfred Grenfell's community of reindeer is a splendid success. The number of the herd has increased to seven hundred, and all the animals are in the best of health.

In the training and domestication of the deer the doctor's staff has made astonishing progress, and for traction purposes they are rapidly supplanting the fierce and treacherous dog-dogs, and in time will take their place altogether. In addition to this the does give milk of exceptional quality, which affords excellent [illegible] for children.

A PERFECT DREAM CITY.

London on a Glorious Day of Sunshine and Blue Sky.

The following pretty description of a sunshiny day in London appeared recently in an English publication:

London was yesterday a city of gold and green and white. Golden sunshine in the streets and parks, green foliage on every tree upon which the sun shone down, white buildings, newly built or newly painted, with clear outlines under a sky of Oriental blue. What dream-city could be more perfect than London on such a day?

Truly it was an unforgettable day—a day on which it is good to be alive, very good to be young when the spring calls to the blood and when perfume steals into the senses; good even to be old and to sun oneself in the memory of other spring days as golden as this.

The London season is beginning! Good words to those who have the leisure and means to play the game, the merry game of the social whirligig, good even to those who are merely lookers-on.

Yesterday the fun had begun. The King was in town, the court was in the capital, the servants of society had pulled up the window blinds of town houses and the sun was shining.

So the streets were very full of life at its best and brightest. Down Bond street and Piccadilly—the highways of the lusty ones—there was an endless tide of carriages, and the sun gleamed upon brightly polished panellings, flashed fire from the brass head lamps and metal work of magnificent motor cars, and glistened on the smooth flanks of good horses, which went dashing by as proudly as though there were no such thing as petrol.

Women were in the carriages and walking on the shady side, and one man sighed because he could not wear salmon pink, or Madonna blue, or walk in lilac beauty like these ladies who were the flowers of the London streets. Flowers, literally because all their hats were in full blossom, brought out by this brilliant sunshine, and from the top of an omnibus one looked down upon moving bouquets of roses and daisies and forget-me-nots, as though all the flowers in Kensington Gardens had been plucked as the garlands of England's fair women.

Yet the men did their poor best, yesterday, to do credit to the divine day. Old Bucks had put on white waistcoats, and young bloods in new silk hats—bright and beautiful things—had put yellow gloves upon their hands. The Green Park was a paradise, into which had slunk many poor devils, against whom the gates of this paradise were not closed. These Weary Willies had come out of the slums, for spring called to them also, and they lay, in lazy happiness and seedy clothes, like corpses on the emerald greensward, which was a carpet worthy of Kings.

A Cool Deadhead.

Mr. Oscar Asche, the London actor, who, with his wife, Miss Lily Brayton, is on his way to Australia—his native land—which he left eighteen years ago, remarked just before he set sail, apropos of the slump in theatres, that the deadhead is a destroyer of drama. "Once give a man a free seat for a play," he said, "and you will have a difficulty ever after to make him 'pay to go in.' While I was touring with a certain highly-respected manager, we were playing at a long-famous old playhouse in an ancient town. We had billed 'Macbeth' for the Friday night, but during that day the theatre was burnt down. For our next week there our chief contrived to borrow a playhouse a little way out of the district. On reaching there to rehearse on the Monday the manager received a letter saying that the writer had been given two dress-circle orders for the performance of 'Macbeth,' but as that play was not performed owing to the destruction of the theatre, the writer surmised that the manager would remit the money value of these orders."

who spoke for his good character. He may be a tolerably good fellow in civil life."

"Oh, thank you," said the queen in heartfelt tones, and before the astonished duke could utter a word of protest she had written across the paper the word "Pardoned."

The total capital is only $40,000, so that you can see that this is no inflated and watered wild cat scheme but a first-class legitimate investment offered to you—one where a dollar invested today will be worth at least two in a year and will pay 10 per cent. income on this.

Some Orders that We Received as to the Sale of Kearn's Ink

Belleville, Ont., Sept. 23.—While Fred Mills and Bert Bell, of this city were hunting in a bush just west of the city limits yesterday, they were getting through a fence, when the gun carried by Mills was accidentally discharged. The injuries sustained by Mills are not considered of a serious nature. He was brought to the city and taken to the hospital.

MR. THOMPSON'S MODEL.

The Way She Came to Get a Permanent Engagement.

By ALICE R. WETMORE.

[Copyright, 1899, by Associated Literary Press.]

"Where are you, Bill?" came a lazy growl from the tiny anteroom, which Thompson designated the office.

"Here," replied that gentleman as distinctly as a mouthful of brushes would permit. "It's only Carter," he explained to his model. "Or perhaps you'd rather"—

"Oh, let him come in by all means," replied the girl. "I'd rather like to see him."

A long, clean limbed young fellow lounged in, halted apathetically for a moment behind Thompson's canvas and then sunk lazily into a pile of cushions on the floor.

The girl on the model stand scrutinized him closely and made up her mind that he was the most typically lazy man she had ever seen. His voice, his walk, his carriage, had an absolute air of effort that was positively fascinating, and to complete the impression his strong, lean face was absolutely devoid of expression.

Suddenly, however, he gazed intently and with a semblance of awakened interest at the model. The pose was rather striking. A heavy black velvet gown accentuated that peculiar transparency of coloring which accompanies a certain deep rich shade of auburn hair. A dull green background reconciled the brilliant coloring of the upper part of the picture to the dusky mysteries of the lower canvas. The pose of the figure was saved from insincere only by the winsomeness of the face.

Carter pulled lazily at his pipe and continued to gaze at the girl with half closed critical eyes. "Nice color," he finally asserted. "By Jove, that's a wonderful pose!" with a sudden burst of enthusiasm that startled the girl. "Are you engaged after you finish with Thompson?"

The other artist opened his mouth; then, with a quiet smile, closed it again. The girl smiled, too, a little smile that curled her upper lip deliciously.

"No, sir; I'm not engaged next week," she replied quietly.

"Can you come to me for a two weeks' pose then, in the mornings?"

Thompson looked dubiously at the girl. "Yes, sir, I'll come," she said.

The next Monday the model presented herself at John Carter's studio. He scarcely looked up as he greeted her.

"Oh, is that you, Miss— Do you know, I forgot to ask your name," he drawled.

"Parks," the girl supplied smilingly.

The gown he gave her was also black. He had hung heavy stuffs around and above the model stand until the black gown and the background mingled darkly and the white face and auburn hair fairly jumped from the gloom in a single, startling note of color.

Carter set to work with a feverish energy which quite transformed him. He tried first one pose, then another, in such rapid succession that the girl was positively bewildered.

When he had at last found one that pleased him he drawled apologetically, with a slow, winning smile, "I'm rather a hard fellow to get started, Miss Parks, but I won't give you much trouble once we're off."

The girl watched the man with fascinated eyes. He worked with the precision and energy of a splendid machine. His face shone with positive inspiration.

As for Carter himself, he was blissfully happy. With the true artist's sensitiveness he felt the absence of the usual clash between the half hearted, prosaic models and the ideals he struggled to embody by their aid. The atmosphere lacked a single inharmonious element, for the girl seemed to throw her whole personality into the work.

At last he emerged from his trance sufficiently to observe that a white line had appeared around the girl's compressed lips and that she wavered as she stood.

"It must be time to rest," he observed. "Why," as he glanced at the clock, "you've been posing for nearly an hour. Why didn't you rest?" he demanded reproachfully.

The girl sank into a chair with an amused gleam in her eyes. "I never saw anybody so completely lost," she said. "I couldn't bear to disturb you."

The next morning he found himself awaiting with unmistakable impatience the arrival of his model, and when at last she did stand before him with a smiling "Good morning" on her lips he regarded the girl with an artist's satisfaction.

She was charming in her dark street gown. Her face was flushed and her eyes bright with the exhilaration of an autumn morning, and Carter was strongly tempted to put away serious work and make a study of her as she stood. He banished the idea, however, and soon they were at work on the "masterpiece." He refused to believe it when the noon whistle insisted that it was 12 o'clock and Miss Parks departed.

The afternoon was unprecedentedly long. He felt strangely disinclined to work and finally put aside the canvas and brought out some unfinished sketches. He worked on these until he discovered that he had converted five different heads into unmistakable likenesses of Miss Parks. Then he muttered something beneath his breath and gave up in despair.

At the end of the last day but one of the two weeks Carter realized that the central figure of his canvas was completed, and the realization brought a poignant feeling of regret. The reason for it came when it suddenly flashed upon him that tomorrow was Miss Parks' last day. And then it was that Carter made a discovery that a less inexperienced man would have made long before. It came with such a shock that he was fairly stunned. He, John Carter, the most unimpressionable of men, in love with his model! When Miss Parks appeared the next day he greeted her with his usual cheerful "Good morning," but not another word was spoken until she had taken the old familiar pose—for the last time, he said to himself, with a pang.

There was a strange restraint of which both were aware. At last, "This is the last day of the pose," the girl ventured. Carter worked furiously. "Yes," he answered shortly. Another pause. "Then you won't want me any more?" The girl's voice strove hard to be commonplace.

Carter threw down his palette in despair. The girl kept her pose bravely, her pretty head tilted, but the eyes which met Carter's held a look which even he could not mistake. The man brushed his hand across his eyes in a quick, desperate little gesture. He seemed to have brushed the old nonchalance away. He was fairly transformed.

"Want you!" he gasped. "Want you! Don't you know I want you more than anything in the world?"

"But you don't understand," the girl began finally in a voice that was somewhat smothered by Carter's broad shoulder. "There are reasons," she continued, with dignity, "why I cannot marry you."

"I am all ears," avowed Carter solemnly, "but you won't mind if I say right now that the reasons won't make a particle of difference, will you?"

"Oh, but they will. I've been deceiving you," she confessed haltingly.

"Go on," commanded Carter more soberly. All kinds of dreadful possibilities loomed up before him.

"You'll never love me when you know," she continued, with visible effort. "I—I'm not a model at all. I'm Billy Thompson's cousin," she rushed on, "and when you came in and thought I was a professional I wouldn't let Billy tell you, and—I thought it would be such a good joke, because Billy had told me how you never cared for girls or—anything, and"—

"You there, Jim?" interrupted a familiar voice from the hall. The girl fled to the model stand and took her pose. Carter dabbed lazily and with perfect composure at his canvas.

Billy strolled in, an amused look in his eyes. "Nice model," he remarked. "Can I engage you for next week, my pretty maid?"

Carter turned about lazily and regarded his friend.

"I'm afraid not, Billy," he drawled. "You see, your cousin has a permanent engagement with me."

Actors Under King William III.

How summarily actors and managers were dealt with in the days of King William III. is shown by the petition of Alexander Davenant and others, dated Dec. 19, 1691, which has been found among the historical documents of the house of lords. These "sharers and adventurers in the playhouse"—this seems to have reference to the Dorset Garden theater in Whitefriars—set forth that Lord Longueville, having complained of being assaulted, together with his servants, by the guard at this famous playhouse in the course of what seems to have been a rather serious fracas, the king had given orders at the desire of the peers that no soldiers should be on duty there for the future and that the players should be "suspended from acting till they had begged pardon for the affront."

The house had also, it appears, vindicated its dignity, thus outraged in the person of one of its members, by ordering a sergeant and a soldier to be sent to the gatehouse at Whitehall, then used as a prison. The petitioners having humbly solicited the "removal of the suspension upon them" and promised to "do their best to prevent the like miscarriage for the future," it is officially noted that "the suspension on the players was removed" and that "on Dec. 29 the sergeant and soldier were on petition released."—London Standard.

Not an Affair of the Heart.

They stood at her door, and there seemed to be some constraint between them.

He was a trifle older than she, and she had the advantage of him in looks too.

In his eyes there was supplication, and in hers there were disdain, scorn, rejection.

"If I might"— he began.

"No, sir," she interrupted. "It is totally unnecessary."

"But"—

"I do not wish to hear you."

"One word."

"Not one, sir."

"Well, if you won't"—

"I want nothing you can offer me."

"But I"—

"Once for all, I tell you I want no tinware today."

She shut the door and went in, and the peddler went on to the next house.

Defiant of Fashion.

"Those people don't seem to care what the world thinks of them," said the fashionable woman.

"How do you know?"

"They still play progressive euchre and croquet."—Washington Star.

West Peterborough Election Protest

work I did was voluntary. Bryson's was work that had to be done—preparing lists, sending out circulars. No work was done, to my knowledge, of an illegitimate character. I got the results of Bryson's work and workers. If the work had been done in the office I would have kept no track; it being done in that way by Bryson for me I did not keep track. The matter has not been mentioned by me to Mr. Stratton or his official guardian, Mr. Goodwill.

The witness then denied every charge of giving money with which his name had been connected.

To Mr. DuVernet—He said he was there on the day of the election and saw no money paid. I was in the little room with Leary and saw no strings of people coming out with money. I think prosably I was asked for money on election day. I can't remember the names of any person that may have asked me. I don't know Bonskill and Swangee, but couldn't say. Wouldn't say. I was asked for money in the small room, it was in the committee room. Leary was in and out of the small room, he was there all day pretty near by himself.

WILLIAM ASHLEY

William Ashley, an Englishman, with a deliberate and positive manner was called and told the story of his having been presented with a $2 b ll. The very same system was adopted in paying him as in the case of other witnesses. He went into the little east room over which Mr. R. H. Leary presided and occupied all alone. In that room he saw Mr. Leary who asked him if his name was on the voters list. He said yes and Mr Leary took $2 from a big roll in his pocket and gave it to him.

Ashley had been visited at his home on the evening before the election. Kingscote asked him to vote right and gave him a note of introduction to Mr. Leary to be presented the next day at the Liberal committee room. He did not, however, tell Mr. Leary that he came from Kingscote and did not give him the note until after he got the money.

After the election he was approached by Mr. R. M. Glover who took him to Mr. Hall's office. There he was asked to make a declaration to the effect that he had received no money and that he had not been at the Liberal committee rooms. This he declined to do.

Mr. Gates was with him in Mr. Hall's office and Gates told Mr. Davidson that the witness would sign the declaration for $2.00 but Mr. Hall said that was impossible but something was said about him getting $2.00 to sign it.

When Mr. Watson cross examined the witness they had several warm passages. The witness was very positive in his statements and Mr. Watson did not appreciate the answers altogether.

Witness said:—I am not the kind of man who would sell his vote for $2 or any sum. Wouldn't tolerate the idea of being bribed to vote. Possibly I might resent it. It would depend on how much I wanted the money. I never did take money for my vote. Not influenced as to how I should vote by any money. I should vote which way I liked. I resented a proposition to me made some time before the election took place. I did want the money, but not for my vote. I did not understand it had anything to do with my vote. My occupation is an artisan, a decorator.

Mr. Watson—Decorator of court rooms?

Witness—Or any other room.

I never sold my vote on any other occasion. I supposed this money was given me to drink Mr. Stratton's health. It might possibly be to drink Mr. Burnham's health. I didn't go to the committee room to get money. Kingscote didn't ask me to vote for Mr. Stratton. I didn't say for whom I was going to vote I had made up my mind previously as to whom I would vote for. I voted accordingly. Mr. Watson having told the witness the day before was Sunday. I made a mistake in the day Kingscote came to me. It was not on the day before I saw him, but the day of the election. No one saw me before election day. I told no one else that I had been called on. I saw Leary about 4. I hadn't voted then. I went to see how the polling was going on out of curiosity—had no other reason for going there. Went to the Conservative rooms the same way. I went there in the morning because I went to the other in the afternoon. I was in the Conservative rooms possibly an hour. I saw many people there didn't get any money there and didn't ask for any. Hadn't worked for Mr. Burnham at all. No one suggested to me in the Conservative rooms that I should go to the Liberal committee rooms. I met Mr. Kingscote in the committee room that day. Don't know the name of other person there. I had no conversation with Kingscote that day. I voted between half-past four and five. No one went with me to vote. No one sought to influence my vote by any act or thing I know of. I saw people coming in and going out of the little room. I had an idea there was money being given away and that made me want some. I had seen Mr. Leary at that time. I didn't know his name at that time. Leary asked me if my name was on the voters' list and paid me the $2. I don't know what the money was for. I thought it was a present. I didn't think it was to influence my vote, because I was not asked how I would vote. I handed Leary some small bill I had receipted. He put it in his pocket.

That little paper I got from Kingscote I showed to no one; I didn't show that to Mr. Burnham. I never saw Burnham about the matter or anyone else. I voted about quarter to five—between 4.30 and five. I saw this poster offering a man giving information leading to a conviction for bribery. $10 reward, and I didn't go to anyone with my story. I don't know how it was found out. I never mentioned this matter to anyone. I was not in Mr. Moore's office and never had a talk with anyone about this matter. I have been in Mr. Hall's office twice. Mr. Rolland Glover called around at my house and took me there about a month ago. Glover told me Mr. Leary denied giving me any money.

Mr. Davidson. Mr. Glover and myself were the persons. I never asked for $50 at that time.

Q.—At that time didn't you say in the presence of Mr. Glover and Mr. Davidson that if you got $50 you would swear you didn't get any money?

A.—No sir.

Q.—If these persons say you did say it?

A—Their statements would be false

I had another interview at Mr. Hall's office about a week ago. They sent for me. A man by the name of Gates asked me. He met me on the street. I knew him before. He said "Will you come with me to Mr. Hall's office tonight, they want to see you? I didn't ask what for. They wanted to see me in respect of the subpoena. I met Mr. Gates at the corner of the post office. Gates and myself were there and Mr. J. R. Stratton. Mr. Leary came in afterwards.

Q—Did Mr. Gates say if he were paid $400 that he would make an affidavit saying he received no money from Leary?

A—No, sir.

Q—Then how much?

A—$200

Q—When did he say that to?

A—Mr. Hall.

Mr. Hall said that he understood that Gates said he would make that offer if he was paid $400. I believe that is correct. Gates, I suppose, wanted the money and that he wanted $400 in the presence of these gentlemen.

Q—What else occurred with Gates?

A—The money was refused.

Q—By whom?

A—By Mr. Hall.

Q—What did Mr. Hall say?

A—I forgot the exact words, but he said it was impossible.

Q—What else did Mr. Hall say?

A—That is all.

Q—Did Mr. Stratton say anything?

A—I don't think so.

Q—Did Mr. Davidson say anything?

A—I don't think so.

Q—Or Mr. Leary say anything?

A—I don't thing so.

Q—Mr. Hall said it was impossible?

A—Yes.

Q—Then what did Mr Gates say?

A—He got up and the two of us walked out.

Q—What else occurred at that meeting? Did anything occur in respect to yourself?

A—I was asked by Mr. Hall if I would accept $200.

Q—Was that after he told Mr. Gates it was impossible to give him the money?

A—The same time. I couldn't say which occurred first.

Q—Did he offer Mr. Gates a similar sum?

A—No; he said it was impossible.

Q—After that or before there was something occurred with you?

A—I was asked if I would accept—

Q—Who asked you?

A—Mr. Hall. He said I understand you want $200.

—Q—For what?

A—About signing the affidavit.

Q—What affidavit?

A—That I didn't see or handle any money.

Q—What did you reply to that?

A—That was right.

Q—When Mr. Hall said that?

A—That was right.

Q—That you did not want the $200?

A—It was right, what Gates had said.

ADVERTISE IN THE TIMES.

STARVATION AMID PLENTY

Not Uncommon Today—The Reason Is Explained

"For a period last summer the thought of food excited feelings of nausea," writes Mrs. C. A. Dodges, of Bloomsbury. "The heat had made me listless and the distaste for food reduced me to a condition of semi-starvation and brought me to the verge of nervous collapse. Tonics were useless to restore an active desire for food. The doctors told me my liver and kidneys were both at fault but the medicines they gave me were too severe and reduced by strength so that I had to abandon them. At the suggestion of a friend who had been cured of blood and skin trouble, I began the use of Dr. Hamilton's Pills. The difference I first noticed was, that while they cleansed the system, instead of feeling weaker I felt better after taking them. Indeed their activity was so mild it was easy to forget I had taken them at all; they seemed to go right to the liver, and in a very brief time not only did all source of nausea disappear but I began to crave food and I digested it reasonably well. Then I began to put on weight until within three months I was brought to a condition of good health. I urge Dr. Hamilton's Pills for all who are in poor health."

Get this best of all medicines today and refuse a substitute for Dr. Hamilton's Pills of Mandrake and Butternut. Look for the yellow box. Sold by all dealers, or The Catarrhozone Co., Kingston, Canada, at 25c per box.

The Election Protest

Q.—That Gates had told him you wanted the $2.

A.—Yes.

Q.—Then what else did you say?

A.—I didn't say anything.

Q.—Then why didn't you get the $200?

A.—I believe it was done to get information from us.

Q—So that you had told Gates before you would?

A—I never told Gates anything of the money. It was arranged in Mr. Hall's office.

Q—Did Gates say he would make the affidavit; did Gates offer to Mr. Hall to make the affidavit that he had seen no money pass and did not get any money from Leary and Davidson;

A—It was arranged at a previous meeting. I wasn't there.

Q—I am speaking of what he said. Did he offer to make that affidavit to Mr. Hall?

A—I couldn't say.

Q—You have already deposed here he offered to make that affidavit if he got $400.

A—Mr. Hall asked him if it was correct that he would sign the affidavit for $400. I believe he said he would.

Q—How did Gates come to get you mixed up in it?

A—He asked me if I would go to Hall's office and sign an affidavit.

Q—What were you to get?

A—$200.

Q—From whom?

A—I don't know.

Q—So you told Gates if you got the $200 you would make the affidavit?

A—I didn't say so. I said That was so—what Gates had been saying.

Q—Then you wanted the $200?

A—That was right.

This matter was not arranged between Gates and myself previously. I got no money and no money was offered me. Mr. Leary didn't say in my presence that my getting $2.00 from him was untrue. Mr. Hall said it was. If I had got the $200 I might have taken it and used it as a gift. I should not have signed the affidavit. I told him it was correct what Gates had said. It is not correct that I offered in the presence of Mr. Davidson and Mr. Glover to make an affidavit that I had received no money. I know nothing of the payment of any money if I received $50. I didn't in the presence received $50. I didn't on the 21st Sept in the presence of Mr. Stratton, Mr. Leary, Mr. Davidson and Mr. R. R. Hall say I would make such a declaration or affidavit if paid $200 I made no such statement myself expressly. All I said was, "That it was correct what Mr. Gates had said."

Mr. DuVernet re-examined the witness as to his conversations in Mr. Hall's office and the court then adjourned for lunch.

VOL. XXXII NO. 228 PETERBOROUGH, ONTARIO, THURSDAY SEPTEMBER 30, 1909 PRICE TWO CENTS

MR. J. GATES TOLD A SENSATIONAL STORY—WILLING TO SELL OUT FOR $400

Would Sign False Declaration for that Sum —Told Remarkable story of Corruption He Also Got $50 from Mr. Burnham for His Statement—Had Many Clashes with Mr. Watson when He was Cross-Examined.

James Gates, an Englishman, and one of the chief witness for the petition in the West Peterborough election trial told a most remarkable story of fraud in which he himself was willing to enter had he been given the price. He told of his willingness to accept $400 from Mr. Hall and Mr. Stratton to sign a false declaration and to swear falsely in the witness box. He didn't get the money and he didn't sign the affidavit. He told of receiving $50 from Mr. W. H. Moore for giving Mr. Burnham a statement altogether he had something of a sensational story by joking and laughing with Mr. Watson and by giving many answers not required he made several statements which shook the faith of the court in his evidence and their Lordships directed Mr. Watson to cease the cross-examination as no weight could be attached to the witness' evidence.

JOHN MEHARRY.

The first witness called was John Meharry who testified to having been in the Liberal Committee rooms on the afternoon of the election and some men going in and out of the little room. He saw no money change hands and heard nothing about money.

There was no cross examination.

CHAS. WILLIAMS.

Chas. Williams, a laborer, who lives here was a voter at the last election and was at Mr. Stratten's rooms between 4 and 5 o clock in the afternoon. He saw a man there who he was told was Leary. Witness, from curiosity, went upstairs and saw men going in and out of the room. He saw Butler go in the room for a minute or two. Witness was in the room also right after Butler. Leary asked him if his name was Butler and he said yes. Then Leary put $2.00 under a cardboard box which witness p joked up and went out. Then Mr. Leary came after them and said "There is a rig here for you." They both got in the rig and drove off.

Witness was asked to sign a declaration by Mr. Davidson but he did not do so. He was asked to go and see Mr. Stratton at his house.

To Mr. Watson witness said that he worked in the morning on election day. He saw no one about the evidence he was to give. He did not know Gates. He was in the Liberal rooms about half an hour. He saw no one there that he knew. When introduced to Mr. Leary he said, "All right I'll see to you in a few minutes." There was quite a crowd present, all smoking and sitting around. Butler went in first and then witness went in. Leary said "Are you Mr. Williams?" He answered "Yes." Then he was asked where he voted and he said at McGillis store. Leary put a $2 bill on the table and partly covered it over and witness picked it up. He was out of work and hard up and he thought he might as well have some of the money as well as any one else. He had voted earlier in the morning between 10 and 11 o'clock. He was in the Conservative rooms in the afternoon. He met Mr. Davidson two months ago on Chamberlain street about eight o'clock at night. Mr. Davidson read him a charge and asked him to sign it which he refused to do. Mr. Davidson said Mr. Leary claimed he did not know the witness. Witness was asked to sign a paper and refused to do so. He was then asked if Burnham's men had seen him and he said no. Then Mr. Davidson asked him to go to Mr. Stratton but he declined to go. Then Mr. Davidson wanted him to get into the rig and drive up to see Mr. Stratton, but he didn't go.

E. H. BARTLETT.

Ernest Bartlett said he heard certain things about the "little room," and what I was going on there, so he decided to infvestigate. When he got there he saw a string of men lined up outside, being let in one at a time to the little room by a doorkeeper, who stood inside.

"Was any money offered you?" asked Mr. DuVernet. "I was not there for money," said Bartlett.

"What did you go down there for?" asked Mr. Watson, in cross-examination. "Because I heard that they were giving money away and nefarious work was going on, as there was a tough crowd around.

"You heard that in the committee rooms?" "I did not: I was told it by James Jordan."

There were about eighteen lined up altogether, said Bartlett, and "they seemed eager to get into the room, as they were all packed together.

"Like sardines in a box?" suggested Mr. Justice McMahon.

Mr. Watson said, "I give you fair warning that ten men will go into the box and swear that so much row was there at one time."

Witness—"It makes no difference to me what ten others say. I am telling the truth. I told you what I saw."

Meharry went with him and left with him. He did not see two men go in together. He heard something said about money matters in the room. Mr. Meharry was not near enough at the time to hear.

"I was there on two occasions said witness. I remained a few minutes on the first visit. Then I went to the Conservative rooms and told what was going on. I returned with police Constable Meharry on the second visit and they were still leading the men in. Mr. Leary opened the door and took them in one by one.

I saw Mr. Gus Hay enter the room also.

Mr. R. R. Hall, Walter Davidson and others were in the committee committee rooms.

ROBT. J. MITCHELL.

Robert J. Mitchell was called and to Mr. DuVernet said he was in no committee rooms on the day of the election. That finished his evidence.

T. D. McGREGOR.

Mr. T. D. McGregor was called and to Mr. DuVernet said he was at Mr. Stratton's committee rooms about 4.30. He was upstairs and saw several conversing in groups. Mr. Dickson Hall was in charge of voting lists. He saw another room but the door was closed. He did not stay any time. No one was there he knew.

To Mr. Watson he said it was about 4.30 when he was there.

The crowd was nothing more than usual. He saw nothing of a theater line.

JAMES GATES.

James Gates was the next witness and to Mr. DuVernet he said he had been here 27 months. He was at the Liberal Committee room He knows Mr. Leary. He saw him that day about four o'clock. He had a chance then to get in. He was there at 2.30 and there were two dozen ahead of him looking for Leary and two dozen more came in all to go in and see Mr. Leary. When his turn came he went into the little room and said "Good day Mr. Leary." Mr. Leary crossed the room and put a $2 bill under a cardboard box and walked to the window. Witness picked it up and put it in his pocket. He said all who came out while he was around there were quite satisfied with their visit to the room.

To Mr. Watson, witness said he was summoning officer for the Children's Savings & Loan Society. Mr. Watson jollied him a lot along these lines and the witness winked at him.

Witness said he had subpoenaed one man on authority of Mr. Moore He has a number of witnesses who he is paying. He had charge of no witnesses before Monday. He was out of work for probably two or three days. Before that he was at the Quaker Oats. He had voted in England. He would sell his vote in this country if the money was good the same as any other man. But he had no vote here as he did not think it was a very good thing to have in this country.

He denied trying to get $400 out of Mr. Hall and Mr. Stratton. He said they wanted to get rid of him for $400. He was asked on July 16 to go to Mr. Hall's office, Sept. 14th. Frank Fairen asked him to go there. He was at Mr. Hall's office on September 21 and Mr. Hall, Mr. Stratton and Mr. Ashley were there. That was at eight o'clock in the evening. He did say he would make an affidavit for $400 knowing it to be false. Had he got the money he would have given it to Mr. Burnham. He knew a man committed perjury if he made a false affidavit, but he didn't make it. He contradicted Mr. Ashley's statement that Mr. Hall said it would be impossible to pay the $400.

When the $400 was mentioned Mr. Hall said I expect Mr. Leary here. Then he went into another room and said "Oh here you are." When Mr. Leary and Mr. Davidson came into the room Mr. Hall said "What do you think of the story?" Mr. Davidson replied "I would not give 10 cents for it." Then witness said to Ashley "Come on they are only fooling us. There is no money coming." They then left the place. Mr. Davidson and Mr. Leary were not present when the money matter was talked about. Witness said he would not tell a lie for nothing. Witness denied saying anything to Mr. Hall and Mr. Stratton except "Good evening gentlemen we'll meet you at the sessions." He said to Mr. Watson that he would have signed the false declaration and come to the court and sworn to it if he had the $400.

He was offered other money in connection with the election by Mr. Burnham and paid by Mr. Moore when the election. He got $50 by cheque and cashed it at the Bank of Nova Scotia. The money was for his statement. No one else was there when he got the cheque. It was the second time that he was there that he got the money. He saw Mr. Burnham and made his statement to him when Mr. Moore was present. Those arrangements were made away back in March. He has had no other money from Mr. Burnham, Mr. Moore or Mr. Kendry He would not make a false affidavit for anything less than $400 as that was his figure.

His lordship said that in view of the many statements that the witness had made that no weight should be attached to his evidence so the cross-examination was stopped.

To Mr. DuVernet witness told of meeting Mr. Frank Fairen who asked him to leave the country and not testify at the trial. He spoke of $400 and he would leave the country. Later he said he met Mr. Hall in his office and they had some talk about the $400. Mr. Hall asked him not to leave the country but to come to their side, and take a less amount. On Sept. 15th it was suggested by Mr. Hall that he take the $400 and go away. On Sept. 21st Frank Fairen met him and said bring Ashley up at eight o'clock. They went up together. Mr. Hall told the witness to tell Mr. Stratton the story and asked if they would leave the country if they got the money. They said they would. He said the whole thing was a trick on the part of Mr. Hall and Mr. Stratton.

Yesterday Morning

When the west Peterborough election protest trial opened yesterday morning, Mr. Watson objected to the way Mr DuVernet was conducting the case. He wanted the evidence taken pro and con.

Anthony Monger was the first witness called. He was at the Liberal committee rooms on election day and gave some information as to whom and what he saw there.

SIDNEY POPE.

Sidney Pope, examined by Mr. DuVernet, told about being at the Liberal committee rooms on election day and getting two dollars in the small room. Mr. Leary placed the money on the table and witness picked it up, put it in his pocket and walked out. He was at rooms in morning.

He was told to come back in the afternoon and it would be all right. When he left the rooms he went to a polling booth. After he voted he went back to the committee room about three o'clock. "I went by myself," witness said, "and I hung around till after five."

Did you see what happened to Harland and Pritchard?

They were wandering around the room.

Who else did you see up there?

I saw some people I know by sight, but I don't know their names. I hung around till after five o'clock, and then I went home and got my supper.

I heard that there was going to be trouble.

When did you hear that?

A New Lighting System for Peterborough

Ald. Buller has a new idea for street illumination, especially for the business part of the city. He got it from the more modern cities in the States while he was attending the firemen's convention in Grand Rapids. The scheme is that at street corners two strings of colored incandescent lights be strung across the coroners and every fifth pole along the street a string of the same colored lights be strung across the street. He would suggest this from the G.T.R. station on Charlotte street to the National Hotel: from the C.P.R. station to Murray street and from Water to Aylmer on the interesting streets from Charlotte street to Murray street. In Detroit and Grand Rapids it is paid for on the frontage system with the city paying towards it the amount which the lighting would cost.

The effect is a most beautiful one, and makes a wonderful impression upon the person coming into the city. In Peterborough there should be no trouble over getting the merchants to consent to the scheme as all of the business men are up-to-date. The cost should not be materially more than is charged at present and it would be a capital idea for the committee to take it up with the Light & Power Co., and with the merchants.

Sensational Suicide at Niagara Falls

Niagara Falls, N.Y., Sept. 29.—A sensational suicide occurred here this morning at 7.45 o'clock, when an unidentified man jumped from the upper steel arch bridge, a distance of over 150 feet.

Thomas Robido and Frank O'Neill employes of the Ontario Power Company on the Canadian side, saw the man leap as they were going to their work. They were not close enough, however, to get a clear view of his features.

The man was standing in the middle of the bridge when Robido and O'Neil entered on the structure. He turned, saw them coming, and immediately jumped over the railing. The men hurried to the side and saw the body strike the water and disappear. It came quickly to the surface and floated down stream, face downward.

As the man jumped his derby hat fell off and the wind carried it to inaccessible spot on the rocky talus of the American cliff. No effort has yet been made to recover it.

Robido and O'Neill reported the matter to the police. They say the suicide was dressed in dark clothing and had dark hair. They can give no further details of his appearance.

AGED PHILANTHROPIST DEAD.

Frenchwoman Who Was Once Thanked by Queen Victoria.

Brest, Sept. Sept. 27.—At the little village of Ceremet-sur-Mer an old woman of 92, known throughout the district as La Mere Dorso, has just died. She had devoted most of her long life to helping the sick and suffering ones among the fishermen of the coast, and was greatly loved for her kindness.

In 1893 she was decorated by the French government for her heroic When the Drummond Castle was wrecked, on June 17, 1896, a number of bodies were washed ashore near the village where "Mother Dorso" lived, and she organized the humane work of giving them decent burial. Shortly afterward Monson, then British ambassador to France, who thanked her, in the name of Queen Victoria, for her goodness. She was also decorated on this occasion.

Capt. Bernier will Return in October

St. John's, Nfld., Sept. 29.— Mrs. Braithwaite has received a letter from her husband, who is aboard the Canadian Government steamer Arctic. It was brought by Harry Whitney's relief boat, the Jeanie, and was dated Clyde Harbor, Baffin Land, September 6th.

All on board the Arctic are reported to be in the best of health and spirits. They expect to reach Quebec by the middle of October.

This is the first letter or word of any kind received for a year except Dr. Cook's statement that he received supplies from Capt. Bernier, sent up by his wife, and that Peary's boatswain Murphy refused to allow Bernier to take either Eskimos or dogs from Etah.

Six of Bernier's crew were Newfoundlanders. Nearly all the rest were French-Canadians.

The Arctic left Quebec a year ago last July to assert Canadian sovereignty over the islands of the far north. In August it reached Etah the gateway to the North Pole. Capt. Bernier had instructions to visit even more inaccessible places than he did on his former trip.

Little Boy Terribly Injured by Binder

Deerfonto, Sept. 29.—While playing hide-and-seek in a cornfield, Robt Rainy's oldest son was run over by a corn binder and seriously injured.

One leg was severed and it is feared it will be necessary to amputate theother, as it is badly mangled.

The victim is only two years and three months old. Very slight hope is held for his recovery.

His father, Robt. Rainy, is a respected farmer of Hay Bay.

AN EXPLOSION

Fifty or More Persons Were Injured.

Pittsburg, Pa., Sept. 27.—At least fifty persons were more or less seriously injured and several are believed to have met death shortly before noon today, when an explosion occurred in the offices of the Columbian Film Exchange, rooms 414 and 416 Ferguson Building, running from third to Fourth avenues, between Smithfield and Wood streets.

The walls of the building, an eight-storey structure are bulging, while not an office escaped without damage. Windows were blown out and partitions were blown down.

Hundreds of firemen are searching the ruins for victims.

The cause of the explosion is not known at present. In some manner the inflammable films were ignited, and the next moment a terrific explosion took place. The detonation could be heard for blocks.

Occupants of adjoining office buildings rushed to the scene and were joined in a few minutes by firemen and reserved squads from the various police districts.

Throughout the entire eight stories the rescuers encountered men, women, boys and girls who were either burned or were injured by flying debris. Their crying and pleadings were pitiful.

Every hospital in greater Pittsburg was notified. For over an hour the clang of ambulances excited pedestrians on the downtown streets.

At 1.38 p.m., the police are clearing the four streets near the Ferguson building. Fire has broken out and a second explosion is imminent. It is feared the eight-storey building is about to collapse.

MAN SHORN OF STRENGTH

Weak Liver So Undermined His Vitality That He Almost Died.

"Early manhood vigor easily led me to view irregularities of my system as incapable of affecting my strength. I am a barrister," writes a well-known legal light, "and there are times in our professional work so exciting and exhausting that any weakness reveals itself in all its naked awfulness. Pressure of work prompted me to ignore some of the distressing symptoms of impaired liver activity—sour stomach, fullness after eating and dulness of intellectual activity. It was not until a severe attack of sleeplessness following an exacting session of court, and a nervous excitability that later developed, that I realized fully my condition. My physician ordered complete change and rest, but my engagements rendered impossible this course.

"To correct the system I began using Dr. Hamilton's Pills, and to my delight, not only did they establish regularity, but the liver activity of my earlier days returned. The solution of my health problem was immediate, digestion improved, appetite became active, and my nerves were speedily up to my old fighting mark. Please head me as a Dr. Hamilton Pill man."

FINDS PUREST ENGLISH IN U.S.

Professor Who Visits London After 44 Years Notes Dialects.

London, Sept. 29.—Professor George L. Raymond of George Washington University, District of Columbia, has been revisiting London after forty-four years and is more firmly than ever convinced that the purest English is spoken in America.

"I find that England is still full of dialects and that Englishmen of education mispronounces the English language," he said. "In Westminster Abbey I heard a preacher mispronounce four words within five minutes. In America we keep to the standard of the language. We pronounce according to the dictionary, to which everybody refers! In England it seems to be a common practice to mispronounce words deliberately."

Young Man Committed Suicide at His Home

Hastings, Sept. 29.—Wesley Douglas, a well known young man of Asphodel township, who lived six miles from here, committed suicide at one o'clock yesterday afternoon by blowing out his brains with a revolver The young man had been in poor health for some time and this is assigned as the reason for his rash act. After dinner yesterday he chased his mother and the other members out of the house and then went upstairs and shot himself. On their return they found him dead.

Douglas was one of the young men arrested last spring in connection with a charge of stealing muskrat traps from the Indians, and was tried before County Police Magistrate Hamilton of Peterborough. The deceased created comment on that occasion by his peculiar style of dress.

Snyder and Hickey Got Contract for Clothes

And will Make 12 New Uniforms for the Firemen and 12 Extra Pair of Pants—R.J.Sturgeon Gets Contract for New Sink

A short session of the Fire, Water & Light Committee was held last night when the tenders for the firemen's new uniforms were opened and the contract awarded to Messrs Snyder & Hickey for $300. There are 12 suits and 12 extra pairs of pants so that the prices are very reasonable. Tenders for the battery sink were also opened and Mr R. J. Sturgeon got the contract for $69. Several other matters were also taken up.

The first matter taken up were the lights on Gilmour street. Ald. Turner brought it up and said that there was a big are lamp there which is no good, while the people would get a lot of benefit from incandescent lamps and the cost would be little. A petition largely signed was presented asking for the change.

Ald. Turner moved that the lighting system on Gilmour street be changed and also that two be placed on Cricket Place for Ashburnham and an incandescent on Roger street at the C. P. R. tracks, three on Lansdowne street east of Lock street. The motion was carried providing the money was available.

The chief suggested that the are lamps be moved from their present position and hung in the center of the streets. It would cost very little, only about $4 per lamp. He could do the work if the city would supply the wire.

The chairman said the city treasurer wanted authority to get a new order book. This was granted.

The gas used at the fire hall will be paid on certificate from the chief of the department.

The account from the Peterborough Light & Power Company for over $2000 was ordered to be paid less the fine for the eight lights burning, viz. $3.06.

TENDERS OPENED.

The tenders for the new uniforms for the five men were opened and resulted as follows:—

Snyder & Hickey	$300.00
Ed. Huff	324.50
W. Fowler	312.00

Merrell & Meredith for different weights cloth gave different prices and his lowest one was $309.

Aldermen Hicks and Morgan moved that Snyder & Hickey's tender be accepted and that the cloth and work be according to specifications.

BATTERY SINKS.

The following tenders were received for battery tenders:—

Geo. Hutchinson	$90
McGregor & Reid	72
R. J. Sturgeon	69

The tender of R. J. Sturgeon being the lowest was accepted on motion of Aldermen Hicks and Turner. The work to be done according to the specifications.

The firemen requested the chief for permission to use the benefit funds in the bank for the purpose of purchasing furniture for the hall, and that the committee make a further grant.

The members of the committee were in favor of giving the men more furniture in the hall but they did not like to see the firemen's fund interfered with.

Walter Blythe will Get Another Trial

Toronto, Sept. 29.—Walter Blythe will not hang on Friday, and may not hang at all, as the Court of Appeal decided unanimously today that there should be a new trial.

An order for the new trial was served on the sheriff today, and the execution, set for Friday of this week, will not take place, certainly not on that date.

The Court of Appeal deliberated on the matter until 11.45 this morning, and then gave judgment.

Chief Justice Moss, speaking for himself and his four colleagues, said that the case had been given fair and careful consideration, with due regard to the gravity of the issues and to the importance to the prisoner.

SOME JUDGES HESITATED.

"We have come to the conclusion though not without some hesitation on the part of some of the members of the court, that looking at the whole case as it went to the jury, there should have been a case stated.

"That being our conclusion, it follows, from yesterday's agreement, that the present conviction is set aside and a new trial granted. We deem it proper and right, as much in the prisoner's interests as in other interests, that we should not comment on the evidence before the jury or as to its final presentation to the jury, though there is no reason to suppose that Mr. Justice Riddell would have refused to charge the jury on the point raised— that of intoxication as bearing on intent —had he been asked to do so.

"Those concerned in the case directed their minds to other phases. The result seems to have been that the view that the prisoner had been drinking was not presented to the jury as fully as later was thought to be essential. As to the effect of that, the jury should have said."

A NEW TRIAL.

The Crown having waived the stated case, the formal order for a stated case takes the effect of an order for a new trial. Mr. Robinette and Deputy Attorney-General Cartwright will confer as to the procedure.

SHOOK HANDS.

Among the many present in court today were: T. C. Robinette, K.C., J. M. Godfrey, and T. N. Phelan, and Rev. Mr. Buschell. After the judgment had been delivered, Mr. Robinette and Mr. Buschell shook hands. Mr. Robinette is Blythe's senior counsel. Mr. Buschell is Blythe's spiritual adviser.

Blythe has had two reprieves, or, with today's court of Appeal decision, three respites.

LIKELY MANSLAUGHTER.

It is pretty generally believed now that the Crown will charge Blythe with manslaughter at the new trial, in which event, according to Mr. Robinette's statement yesterday, Blythe will plead guilty.

Registrar Patterson issued the Court of Appeal orders shortly after the judgment. This was served on the sheriff, who notified Dr. Chambers, governor of the jail, at 1.25 p.m. Governor Chambers then repaired to Blythe's cell, and told him what had happened.

"I thank you very much," was all Blythe said and his manner was calm.

As to a possible or probable reduction of the charge of murder to one of manslaughter. Deputy Attorney-General Cartwright intimated to a reporter that no one was justified in making any statement on the subject.

THE UPLIFT BY WILL.

Over in New Jersey is a three-year old boy who, under his grand-father's same State, as it happens, is a will, must refrain from smoking paper cigarettes till he is twenty-five if he would inherit a fortune. In the young woman who is to have her grandmother's money on condition that he neither marry an actor man nor a divorced man. In such freakish fashion the list is extended of attempts to regulate by the dead hand the affairs of the living world.

Diverse as human characters themselves are the things men seek to do by last will and testament. Some, moved by an impulse of business pride, make provisions for the perpetuation of old to philanthropic or educational enterprises. None of these reveals in his testamentary acts, as does any one of those who try to dictate by bequest as to the morals or marriages of their heirs, the quality of meddlesomeness.

Under circumstances of prohibition by will the human inclination to be contrary must have many fierce inward struggles with the human weakness of cupidity. The question will may remain as open one as to the moral value of victories which consist chiefly in winning the descending dollars. On the whole, it is not likely that the racial uplift has been of marked degree which has been accomplished through the certifying medium of the probation of wills.

A street car horrified by two young boys collided with a lady on George street between Charlotte street and the C.P.R. station Friday evening, crushing the lady's ankle to be broken.

THE NATION'S ROAD.

A London paper lately printed a striking cartoon showing the nations' road to ruin. The cartoon gave pictorial support to the protests which are heard against the tremendous expenditures being made by the great nations.

The cartoonist had represented a chasm between the Past and the Future. From edge to edge of the chasm were tretched small wire cables such as are used by tight-rope walkers. On each wire a man was walking one in costume of the Japanese, another representing Germany, another France and the others representing resuectively the United States, Russia and Great Britain. In the hands of each was the familiar balancing pole of the tight rope performer. At either end of the pole of the British-er was a coin. One represented the British budget of twenty years ago, the other the budget of twenty years hence, estimated as it will be if the future annual increase is as great as that of the present.

Twenty years hence the British budget will reach the enormous total of £236,000,000 or over $1,100,000,000. These figures are truly astounding when in comparison with the figures of twenty years back, the latter $360,000,000.

In the case of Japan the figures of twenty years past and hence were respectively $110,000,000 and $500,000,000; of the United States $245,000,000 and $1,010,000,000; of France $475,000,000 and $1,110,000,000; of Germany, $100,000,000 and $1,325,000,000. Russia sways toward bankruptcy more alarmingly than any other of the powers. Twenty years ago the Czar's land showed a budget of $265,000,000. Two decades hence it will be $3,420,000,000.

Such figures give one an idea of the gigantic expenditures of the nations of today and of the point toward which they are setting. What will the end be is a question which naturally occurs to one, and which no one can answer. But one is perhaps not too sanguine in hoping that before the time twenty years hence has come a halt will have been called. Great portions of the astounding outlays of the nations are made for naval and military purposes and it cannot be denied that in many quarters the feeling against such expenditures is rapidly gaining in extent and those who share it are gaining in influence.

BLACK HAND.

Terrified by Black Hand Stories, 1,000 Children Stampeded

New York, Sept. 27.—Terrified by Black Hand stories, 1000 children stampeded in a Polish parochial school in Jersey City today when fireworks were set off in the street below, and in the mad rush for the doors fourteen were crushed, one so seriously that death probably will result. The fatally injured child is Marianna Zelacksky, seven years old. The others comprise five little girls and eight boys, all running from seven to ten years old. All are in Jersey City Hospitals.

The schoolhouse is a three-story brick building a stone's throw from an Italian church, which had obtained a permit to set off fireworks during a church celebration today. A rumor went out last week among the children in lower Jersey City schools that threats had been made to blow up the schools with dynamite. The children of this school have been particularly earnest about it, and when the bombs went off suddenly today they ran shrieking from their recitation rooms into the halls. Cries of dynamite and the Black Hand rang through the building. The calls of the priest in charge had no effect. The terrified children poured into the halls and rushed wildly down the stairs. There are two street doors, but one of them was closed. A few passed safely out of the open door, but at the closed door there occurred a disastrous jam. Here several of the smaller children were tramped into unconsciousness, while others ran back into the building and sprang throu in the building and sprang through open windows fifteen feet to an area way below.

Stole Her Children

Montreal, Sept. 28.—Mrs. F. H. Baldie, wife of a prominent automobile mknufacturer and former mayor of Tacoma, left for home tonight a very indignant woman. Some time ago she sent her two children across the Atlantic to visit relatives. They sailed in charge of the captain of the steamship Grampian. They returned in the captain's charge on the same boat, reaching Quebec on Saturday night. Their mother had come to Montreal to meet them, but when the Grampian arrived here there were no cgildren on board. Then Mrs. Baldie learned that they had been taken from the ship at Quebec by United States immigration officers, despite the fact that they were traveling first-class and that class of passengers is always landed at Montreal Mrs. Baldie Mrs. Baldie went down to Quebec and found the children in charge of a matron, who willingly turned them over to her. She returned to Montreal, and as she left the train was accosted by another United States immigration officer, who took her and her children in charge. At the immigration headquarters here she alleges she was put through a sort of third degree, and compelled to answer all sorts of questions, and it was only after she had secured the assistance of Mr. William Stitt, general passenger agent of the C.P.R., to whom she had a letter of introduction that she was able to secure release from the charge of kidnapping her own children. Mrs. Baldie says that her husband is going to take the case to Washington.

MUNSEY'S BIG PROFITS

Magazine Publisher Clears Millions In Stocks.

New York, Sept. 29.—By staking a large fortune on the future prosperwhen business conditions were panicky, Frank A. Munsey, the publisher is said to have cleaned up more than $5,000,000 profits through stock investments made during and immediately after the disastrous financial panic of 1907.

This winning, by reason of a nervy personal bull campaign conducted against the advice of many of his most intimate friends yie.ds him one of the biggest individual profits recorded in Wall street.

On Steel common alone, of which he is said to have had 100,000 shares bought around the 40 mark, and some of it is low as 22, when the after panic depression was greatest; Mr. Munsey is credited with making $3,000,000, which the street considers plausible. Steel common closed yesterday at 84⅞.

PLANS BIG MARKET IN LONDON

American Syndicate Seeks Control of City's Provision Supply

London, Sept. 29.—An American syndicate, it is reported, has been formed to carry out a very ambitious scheme with regard to the provisioning of London. The plan is to establish a large central market in South London and by means of a system of light railways, linked on to the tramways, to bring the market produce direct to the consumer.

The scheme involves the establishment of a network of light railways leading to the market centers of the home counties.

But the scheme, while admired for its boldness, is not considered very feasible. In the first place, parliamentary sanction must be obtained for the construction of light railways and it is not at all certain that parliament would consent to have lines through a great number of roads in the country.

If the proposal is ever carried out its promoters would, no doubt, acquire and extend the market which already exists in South London.

NEW FORTS AT ST. PETERSBURG

Russians Fear for Safety of Capital in Case of War.

St. Petersburg, Sept. 29.—The destruction of the Russian navy during the Japanese war and the great growth in the German navy has brought home to Russian military authorities the danger of a raid on the capital in case of war, the shores of the Gulf of Finland presenting many places suitable for landing troops within a short distance of St. Petersburg. It has therefore been determined to fringe the northern shore of the gulf from St. Petersburg to Viborg with a line of fortifications, capable of delaying a descent while troops were being assembled. Many St. Petersburg residents, whose summe be dispossessed to make room for the fortifications.

Get Well First

Don't risk even a penny—until health first returns.

And I mean just exactly that.
I am the one physician who says to the sick: "I will put my own pocket-book in your hand if it fails to bring you help!"
And for 30 years Dr. Shoop's medicines have been used and recommended in every city and hamlet in America. They are positively endorsed in every community—and everywhere. Then why buy the risk, and at your risk, the other unwarranted and uncertain medicines? Thousands upon thousands have in the past successfully used Dr. Shoop's Restorative. When the stomach nerves, or the heart or kidney nerves fail, these sick ones know how quickly Dr. Shoop's Restorative will bring them back to health again. But best of all, they positively take no money risk whatever. They know these who Then health fails to return, Dr. Shoop will himself gladly pay the drug cost for that. And let them take a full 30 day treatment to freely prove it. But write me first for an order.
This will save delay and disappointment.
All druggists sell Dr. Shoop's Restorative and Dr. Shoop's Rheumatic Remedy, but all are not authorized to give the 30 day test. So drop me a line please—for I have established an honest and responsible drug- Pay gist in almost every community. Tell me who you are, everybody here, or buy, sick. Tell me also which book you need. The valuable book you believe will surely open up new and helpful ideas to those who are not well. Besides you are perfectly free to consult me just as you would your home physician. My advice and the book below are yours—and without cost.
Perhaps a word or two from me will clear up some serious ailment. I have helped thousands upon thousands by my private prescription or personal advice plan. My best efforts for sure- For ly results to cure worth your sample now, while you have it in mind, for tomorrow never comes. Dr. Shoop, Box 81, Racine, Wis.

WHAT PEARY SAYS.

Intimated that Dr. Cook and Peary Were in Conspiracy.

Bar Harbor, Me., Sept. 28.—Commander Robert E. Peary today intimated his opinion that Dr. Cook and Harry Whitney were in conspiracy and had framed up the deal whereby Whitney afforded an excuse why Dr. Cook cannot produce the instruments and equipment to substantiate his trip to the pole.

It was first reported that Whitney did not see the instruments Cook says were left with Whitney, but in a message just received Whitney says:

"I packed the sextant and other instruments belonging to Dr. Cook, and the flag which he prized so highly, in my trunk. Mr. Peary then told me in a very emphatic way that I could not take anything on board his ship belonging to Dr. Cook, and said he would say nothing more about it, but would trust to my word of honor not to take anything. I was forced to unpack my trunk and pack the instruments, flag and boxes of which I did not know the contents, in other boxes and leave them all in the rocks at Etah, where they now are. No one on the ship saw Dr. Cook's instruments or knows anything about what kind they are.

"On his return Dr. Cook gave me the sledge which he had used on the entire trip, and which he declared had made the longest sledging trip on record. The wood had been cut from it and he told me this wood had been used for arrows. Mr. Peary would not allow me to take this sledge on board the Roosevelt, and that was also left at Etah."

WHITNEY AT ST. JOHN'S.

St. John's, Nfld., Sept. 28.—The Arctic vessel Jeanie, with Harry Whitney, the New Haven big game hunter, on board, has arrived here from the Greenland coast by way of Indian Harbor, Labrador.

AN INADNERTENCE.

New York, Sept. 28. — Another twist was added to the Peary controversy yesterday when the Brooklyn Standard-Union, in an editorial, pointed out that two photographs printed in the New York Evening Telegram, controlled by the New York Herald Company, were almost identical. With those taken in the far North by Herbert Berri of Brooklyn, in 1901. They appeared in the Telegram on Saturday, as photographs taken by Dr. Cook on his last North Pole trip.

The Standard-Union declares that the "wholeworld" is being deceived these pictures."

Answering the charge, the New York Herald says this morning:

"Through an inadvertence, the line over the pictures declared them to have been taken by Dr. Cook on his North Pole trip. The pictures were taken in 1901 by Dr. Cook, and were used on Saturday as illustrations on Arctic scenes to accompany his Arctic discovery of the North Pole."

Dr. Cook said last night: "The similarity of the pictures is easily understood when it is noted that Dr. Cook and Mr. Berri made photographs of icebergs from the deck of the same vessels."

ALL ESKIMOS AGAINST COOK.

Portland, Sept. 28.—"The two Eskimos who had been in his company had assured me that Dr. Cook had assured me that Dr. Cook had not been out of sight of land," said Commander Peary, yesterday, "and their statements had been corroborated by other Eskimos I had seen every one of every tribe all the way from Cape Colombia to Cape York. I had visited every settlement in Eskimo land and had complete corroborative evidence from all as to what the first two had said."

ENGLISH SCIENTIST FOR COOK.

Sir Robert Believes Pole Data Could Not Be "Faked."

London, Sept. 29.—Dr. Cook has found a distinguished supporter in Sir Robert Ball, the famous astronomer, and director of the Cambridge Observatory. Sir Robert said today that he was quite prepared to believe that Dr. Cook had been to the pole. He did not think it was possible for evidence in such a case to be successfully "faked," and if he could have all Dr. Cook's books, papers and instruments and a month in which to work at them he would be able to tell whether the doctor had been to the pole or not.

Physicians Who Know Recommend Algonquin Park.

Many people have chosen resorts by the sea for their vacation this summer, others the mountains, and many the inland waters of the "Highlands of Ontario" for that much needed rest that one should take at least once every twelve months. In many cases the desired haven was found, but in others, the more fashionable resorts did not give the restful quiet which in most cases is needed and good accomplished. There is one return to the office with only half the place, however, which offers unlimited inducements to those whose health is run down, or those who are in need of relaxation from worry and work. This place is known as the Algonquin National Park of Ontario, situated 205 miles north of the City of Toronto and 168 miles west of Ottawa. Here the conditions are ideal. The altitude at the Park station, your objective point is 1700 feet above the sea level. The "Highland Inn," built for the accomodation of 100 people on a bluff over-looking Cache Lake, is a comfortable hotel set on one of the beauty spots of this charming reserve.

Modern with bathrooms with hot and cold water, large, bright sleeping rooms, cosy lounging rooms with large, bright open fire places, are a few of the special features. The "Inn is also heated by furnace.

The months of October and November are ideal in this locality and a sojurn there is recommended.

QUINQUENNIAL ECHOES.

Toronto Ladies Still Talk of Their Strong-Minded Guests.

If the half were to be printed of what is being said about delegates to the Quinquennial Council in Toronto that town would not contain the writing thereof. There were adequate daily reports as to how the council occupied its business hours, but the private lives of its members while there is a subject which has been left to gossip, and some funny stories are gaining currency.

Some of the European visitors stopped at other points on their way to Toronto, and it is said that a Montreal family, returning to the city for a brief sojourn in their town house in preparation of their visit to the city, found entirely to their surprise, a prominent Teutonic delegate to the council occupying their house and housing their servants. They deprecated her untimely arrival during their absence and the upset condition of the house, and assured her of their complete surprise. But their guest comforted her involuntary entertainers with the assurance of the great comfort of her entertainment, and her intention to remain until it was time to move on. Meeting later on in Toronto, the German lady was equally candid in informing the Montreal people that she was not being half so well entertained in the Queen City.

There is an old cricket story, which saw the light in the times when cricket matches never extended into the second day, about some Englishmen exiled to France, who desired to alleviate their homesickness by indulgence in the national game. They accepted a free lease from a wealthy landowner near the town of a generous portion of his pasture, and soon came to feel so much at home that their secretary wrote their headmaster requesting him to remove his eleven from their cricket field. Some of the delegates must have been descended from these old cricketers.

A Toronto lady who bears a foreign name, but yields in loyal British sentiment to no one in the Empire, was called upon to entertain a lady from over the seas and one daughter. The expected guest asked the privilege of bringing another daughter, and eventually turned up with three daughters and a maid. No doubt the hospitable hostess, who has never winced under the hardships of evil times, began to understand why the quartering of soldiers used to be unpopular, and has ceased to be customary, especially when her enterprising guests turned her out of her own room.

Niagara's Age.

According to Mr. Spencer, of the Canadian Geological Survey, the great spectacle of Niagara Falls, as we see it to-day, has been about 32,000 years in the making. Mr. Spencer, in common with other geologists who have studied Niagara, believes that originally the cataract fell into Lake Ontario over three steps, or platforms, the first being 35 feet high, and the third being at or near the edge of the lake proper, instead of seven miles back up the river as at present. It took the stream 25,000 years to hollow out the first three miles of the gorge, but only 4,000 years for the other four miles. The difference of time in these two stages of the erosion, and of the cataract's recession of seven miles in all, is explained on the theory of a sudden and enormous increase of the volume of water, caused by volcanic disturbance, or earthquake.

Formerly the Niagara River served as outlet to Lake Erie only. After the upheaval, the waters of Lakes Huron, Michigan, and Superior, which previously had debouched directly into Lake Ontario, were diverted into Lake Erie into the Niagara River, swelling that stream to six times its former volume. Mr. Spencer's figures, of course, can be taken only approximately, as even contemporary authorities are at variance as to how the Falls of Niagara have receded during the past fifty years—some estimates making it 1.25 metres per annum, others 1.52. Moreover, while the U.S. Geological Survey declares that the rate of recession of the Falls has increased during the last fifteen years, the corresponding Canadian official report shows that the rate has decreased some 66 centimetres per annum.

Elevators and Flour Mills.

The Department of the Interior has recently issued a map of that part of Canada lying west of the Great Lakes, showing the positions of grain elevators and flour and oatmeal mills, together with tables showing their individual and collective capacity. In the three provinces of Manitoba, Alberta, and Saskatchewan there are 386 grain elevators, with an aggregate capacity of 42,868,960 bushels. The terminal elevators at Lake Superior have a capacity of 20,122,700 bushels, and there are also transfer elevators at eastern points with a capacity of 14,650,000 bushels. Thus the total elevator capacity of Western Canada amounts to 77,641,160 bushels. Manitoba has 69 flour and oatmeal mills, with a daily capacity of 17,205 barrels; Saskatchewan has 35 mills, with a possible daily output of 3,205 barrels; while Alberta has 17 mills, with a possible daily output of 1,830 barrels.

Fish Freights.

In order to encourage the development of the Canadian fishing industry on the Pacific coast, where the bounty system prevailing in the Atlantic provinces does not obtain, the Dominion Government recently passed an Order-in-Council granting a bonus equal to a rebate of one-third of the express freight rates on all shipments of fish billed from Vancouver by Canadian fishing companies or Canadian fishermen to any point in Alberta, Saskatchewan, and Manitoba. This rebate or bonus applies to any variety of sea-fish caught in Canadian waters, including salmon, halibut, oysters, crabs, and clams.

Hats Were Once a Luxury.

In the reign of Elizabeth the wearing of hats was considered a sign of luxury. By an act of parliament every person above the age of seven years and under a certain degree was obliged on Sundays and holidays to wear a woolen cap made in England and finished by some of the fraternity of cappers.

THE HAY FIELD.

With slender arms outstretching in the sun
The grass lies dead;
The wind falls tenderly, and stirs not one
Frail, fallen head.

Of baby creepings through the April day
Where streamlets wend,
Of childlike dancing on the breeze of May,
This is the end.

No more these tiny forms are bathed in dew,
No more they reach
To hold with leaves that shade them from the blue
A whispered speech.

No more they part their arms, and wreathe them close
Again to shield
Some love-full little nest—a dainty house
Hid in a field.

For them no more the splendor of the storm,
The fair delights
Of moon and star shine, glimmering faint and warm
On summer nights.

Their little lives they yield in summer death,
And frequently
Across the field bereaved their dying breath
he brought to me.

—Ethelwyn Wetherald.

Noisy Avians.

The bellbird, which makes perhaps in its natural state the greatest noise of any known avian, is found both in South America and certain parts of Africa. Its voice will carry on a still day a distance of quite three miles. Its note is like the tolling of a distant church bell and is uttered during the heat of the day, when every other bird has ceased to sing and nature is hushed in silence. The hornbill, a bird which is widely distributed in India, the Malay archipelago and Africa, has also a very loud note. Its call has been described as "between the shriek of a locomotive and the bray of a donkey" and can be heard a distance of a couple of miles.

Sir Wilfrid and Family Prayer.

The death of Rev. Dr. Williams of Montreal, recently, recalls a circumstance that concerns Sir Wilfrid Laurier, and that is vouched for by a prominent public man of Toronto, says a religious exchange.

Mrs. Williams was a daughter of Mr. Murray of Quebec, one of the old Puritan stock. Up to the age of eighteen Wilfrid Laurier could not speak a word of English, and he went to live in the home of Mr. Murray for the purpose of learning English. It was Mr. Murray's habit to read a portion of Scripture and have family prayer every morning, and the French-Canadian boy was told that he might remain during these devotions if he wished to. He did so, and was a member of the family circle for about four years.

After he had become distinguished in the public affairs of the Dominion, a friend who knew of his association with the family of Mr. Murray, asked him what effect it had on him, and his answer was at once an honest appreciation of good living and a tribute to principle. Said Sir Wilfrid:

"The sterling integrity of character and uprightness of life displayed in the home of Mr. Murray made such an impression upon me that I will never shake it off as long as I live."

Cheap Living.

She—I'm living on brown bread and water to improve my complexion. He—How long can you keep it up? She—Oh indefinitely, I guess. He—Then let's get married.

Result of Rashness.

"Out of a job, are you?" asked the first girl. "Boss catch you flirting?"

"No; I caught the boss. Say, what sort of a wedding dress do you think is real swell?"

Truly this world can go on without us. If we would but think so.—Lone fellow.

One Shot Wounded Two.

Belleville, Ont., Sept. 23.—While Fred Mills and Bert Bell, of this city were hunting in a bush just west of the city limits yesterday, they were getting through a fence, when the gun carried by Mills was accidentally discharged. The bullet penetrated the fleshy part of Mills' thigh, passing through it, and struck Bell on the tip of the right thumb, taking off a portion of it. The injuries sustained by Mills are not considered of a serious nature. He was brought to the city and taken to the hospital.

A WELSH FESTIVAL

Eisteddfod is Opened by Musicians in London.

In a pretty glade in Kensington Gardens, in London, near the Serpentine, the Welsh bards celebrated recently the ritual of the Gorsedd which marks the opening of the national eisteddfod.

According to the ancient tradition, the rites must be performed "in the face of the sun, the eye of light," and though the somber skies made it impossible to carry out the letter of the law, it was fulfilled sufficiently in the spirit by the performance of the rites in a druidical circle erected in the open air.

The circle consists of unhewn stones, outside of which three other stones are placed. In the centre of the circle is the Maen Llog, a large stone supported on three others.

A trumpeter, standing upon this stone, sounded the Corn Gwlad, thus formally opening the Gorsedd, and the prayer of the Gorsedd was recited in Welsh.

The bards, in their blue, green and white robes, presented a striking spectacle, and the insignia of his office rendered Dyfed, the archdruid, a notable figure. With his flowing white robe, oakleaf crown, and golden torque of horseshoe shape, he was impressive indeed as he mounted the Maen Llog and cried aloud thrice in a voice of thunder the formal challenge, "A oes Heddwch?" (Is it Peace?).

"Heddwch!" the assembly shouted, and Dyfed sheathed again the eight-foot sword which, in symbolic rite, he had half drawn from its scabbard.

Speech-making in Welsh followed, and then the bards and onlookers trooped off to the Albert Hall, where the eisteddfod met.

The proceedings at the hall during the morning were disappointing in a great many ways, and there appeared to be a deplorable lack of organization.

The best singing was heard in the choral competition, in which the first prize went to the Carnarvon Choral Society, and the second to the Llanelly Choral Society.

At the afternoon meeting Mr. Balfour made a most interesting speech in praise of music.

"Music has ever been one of the great arts in which Welshmen have excelled," he stated. "There cannot be a gift which carries with it higher pleasures—pleasures more easy of attainment, pleasures which leave no after-sting, no after-taste of evil, but which raise and must raise the whole level of civilised pleasures among the people who practice them.

"Music knows no national barrier; music is not subject to the limitations which unhappily beset language. Music speaks to men of all races and of all tongues."

Costly Pennies.

Who was Wigla? Numismatists know, and gave £440 for two of his silver pennies at Sotheby's. Wiglaf, or Withlafe, as his name is sometimes spelt in the old chronicles, was that King of Mercia tributary to Egbert, first King of England, and held nominal sway between 828 and 839. His silver penny, without bust, with a cross in centre and a pellet in each angle within a beaded centre on the obverse, and lunettes and pellets on the reverse, caused exciting bidding, which reached £375 (Spink). Only one other of this particular type is known, and it is fortunately in the British Museum. Another Wiglaf penny, with a rude head in a circle and a cross-crosslet in centre of reverse, realised £174 (Lincoln). This was found at Dorking in 1817. The sale was that of the famous Rashleigh collection. A penny of Ecgberht (780-791)—not to be confounded with Egbert, son of Offa of Mercia, but the King of Kent mentioned in old charters—without a bust, but with the King's name, made £153 (Lincoln). Only three other coins of this type are known, two being in the Hunter Museum, Glasgow. An East Anglian penny of Eadvald, 819-827, realised £88 (Lincoln), and one of Jeanberht, who was Archbishop of Canterbury between 766 and 190, £83. This was discovered near Notley Abbey, and wears the names of Offa and the Archbishop. In the digging of the foundation for the Martyrs' Memorial at Oxford, another of this prelate's pennies was found, and this fetched £30. A penny with the diademed bust of Cynethryth, who was Offa's Queen, made £30 (Spink).

Lord Balcarres as a Walker.

It was Lord Balcarres, a trustee of the National Portrait Gallery, who announced the saving to England of Holbein's picture, "The Duchess of Milan." His lordship has crowded much good work into his thirty-seven years of life. Not only has he distinguished himself in the cause of art and architecture — he is a trained architect—but he has also served the state in the House of Commons as one of the Unionist Whips. A notable characteristic is his rapid walk. "Barns' gallop is nowhere in it with Balcarres' walk," growled a reluctant member on one occasion after being fetched back to the neverending divisions while trying to escape. "It's no good unless you can streak ahead."

Helping the Enemy.

A coal heaver was getting in a load of coal in the suburbs of London. He was shovelling in the coal at a good rate when he was startled by a terrific yell from the house adjoining.

"Wot the dickens is the matter?" queried the coal man, starting up.

A dishevelled looking individual made his appearance at the door.

"Matter, you thickhead!" shouted the man, frantically endeavoring to pull his hair up in cists by the roots. "You are putting the coal down the wrong hole. My wife's people live there!"—London Tit-Bits.

A Bisley Story.

Stories of Lord Roberts are perhaps more numerous than authentic. Here is one which may or may not be authentic, but is certainly amusing. The Commander-in-Chief was watching the firing at Bisley, and noticed two or three mistakes on the part of the markers. So he went to the telephone and rang up the officer in charge. "The marking is very bad," he observed. "It's the best you'll get," retorted the officer. "Do you know who I am?" sternly demanded Lord Roberts. "No, I don't." "I'm Lord Roberts." "Well, I'm Lord Salisbury." Lord Roberts loves a joke, but how he took this one history has not record.

STUDYING ESQUIMAUX

Government Will Make Further Investigations in North.

The Canadian Geological Survey, under the late Dr. G. M. Dawson, gathered from time to time a large amount of interesting and valuable information regarding the native races. Since the death of Dr. Dawson this portion of the work of the department has been allowed to languish, but this year a fresh start was made in a direction which cannot but prove to be of great historical and ethnological interest, as well as being of particular value in allowing the people of Canada to become better acquainted with their fellow citizens who occupy the vast frozen territory which forms our northern boundary.

The present subject of ethnological research by the department is the Esquimaux race; and it is deemed especially desirable that this work should be resumed amongst them just now, because their habits are rapidly changing and becoming more difficult for scientific study, as the white man penetrates the Far North.

The Esquimaux is perhaps by his natural gifts the most admirable of the native races of Canada. There are no more intelligent and kindly people than the Esquimaux of Northern Canada, and none that so readily respond to courtesy and good will; and yet they are probably the most misunderstood and misrepresented of all native races. The expedition which was fitted out last year for the study of the Esquimaux consists of Mr. V. Stefansson and Dr. R. M. Anderson. The undertaking is by no means a new task to Mr. Stefansson, as it is the second of a series of journeys he has planned to carry out within the next fifteen years, during which period he hopes to visit and study every Esquimaux settlement from East Cape, Siberia, to the east coast of Greenland and the shores of of Labrador.

The present journey is planned to cover two years, one of which Mr. Stefansson expects to spend between Cape Brown and Bathurst Inlet, Canada, the other on the Colville river, Alaska. He believes that near the mouth of the Coppermine river there is a group of Esquimaux who have never seen a white man; these he desires to study while as yet they are uncontaminated by white influence, and before "civilised" ways change their system of living.

Dynamited by Dog.

The news of a very remarkable accident at a mining camp at Hanging Stone Lake, near Gowganda, by which one man was killed and two injured, was brought to Montreal recently by Frederick Dunn, a resident of St. Johns, Quebec, who accompanied from Northern Ontario the remains of Andrew Dunn, the principal victim, for interment at his old home just outside that city.

Andrew Dunn and companions were dynamiting a vein. The fuse was ignited and the men ran, followed by Dunn's collie dog, which picked up the dynamite stick in his teeth. The explosion came just as the dog reached the cabin and dropped the explosive.

Dunn was killed almost instantly, his skull being fractured in two places, and one of his arms and two ribs being broken. One of the other men, Sims, was stunned and badly cut about the neck, while the other miner, Hackett, escaped with a few bruises. The dog, which was the cause of the disaster, bounded away and escaped injury.

A Man of Weight.

People in many Ontario towns know Mr. Holland, of Whitby, who has done excellent work as grand organizer of the Sons of Temperance. Mr. Holland is a big man—not only big in achievement, but big in person. He related on one of his tours how he had gone into a certain place to be weighed, but as the scales went up to only two hundred and fifty pounds, he could not succeed.

One time he went to the little village of Port Robinson, where the lodge was presided over by a dominie but droll Worthy Patriarch. After the customary preliminaries Mr. Holland was admitted, and as he made his ponderous way to the platform the halting Worthy Patriarch remarked dryly:

"Well! they told me Holland was coming, but I think it's all of Holland and part of Belgium."

She Didn't Go Back.

Miss Agnes Laut, whose address on "yellow journals" and how they may be got rid of, created such a stir at the International Congress of Women, has ever been noted as one with views of her own and with a courage of her convictions. In Winnipeg she is remembered as a delicate girl with definite opinions and an independent spirit that entirely belied her looks.

When Miss Laut left Winnipeg to try her fate in the big world of journalism and literature, there were not wanting those who prophesied that she would soon be back at her desk in The Free Press office. Her first work was the reporting of the meetings of the Joint High Commission in Quebec, and in this she commended herself in a way that rumbled her work with that of the ablest Ottawa and Washington correspondents. From that time her rise has been steady, and though she has several times visited Winnipeg, she has evinced no tendency to occupy her old desk.

The Moose.

The moose is the largest animal now existing of the deer family, standing often as high as six feet, and sometime weighing 1,200 pounds; but notwithstanding its great size, it is very fleet of foot. When brought to bay, a blow with its fore foot or horns is a very serious matter for the huntsman. Often when pursued by man they have their intelligence to thank for their escape, for sometimes, if closely followed, they double in their tracks and stand motionless in some thicket until the hunter has slipped by, when they quickly glide away. At other times they make such a commotion as to unnerve any but an experienced hunter, and thus escape.

It is safe to say that no product, of any kind, enjoys a more enviable reputation than does this same Cosgrave Beer of Toronto in markets where it is offered.

SPANISH QUEEN POPULAR

Queen Victoria Eugene Praised Enthusiastically.

Paris, Sept. 28.—Queen Victoria Eugene is praised enthusiastically by all Spanish newspapers, even by the Republican journals, for the manner in which she is organizing relief for the wounded soldiers at the front and the families of those killed in the war, says the Madrid correspondent of the New York Herald.

The funds collected already amount to over $300,000, toward which the Queen has contributed most liberally. Her majesty presides over the "juntas" held to collect funds, and delivers eloquent appeals to the charity and patriotism of the women of Spain.

She speaks in Spanish, and has created intense admiration by her perfect command of the language and the absence of an accent betraying her foreign origin.

KILLED CHILDREN

Kidnapped Three Children and Killed Two.

Utica, N.Y., Sept. 29.—It is announced by the police and county authorities this morning that the kidnapping of three children, the murder of two of them and the shooting and wounding of the third in a lonely section of this city two weeks ago last night has been solved. It is believed that the evidence that will presented against Theodore Rizzo now in custody will convict him.

A formal charge of murder was made against Rizzo by Chief of Police Brophy, and the prisoner was arraigned before Judge O'Connor in the city court. The judge made known the nature of the charge, speaking to Rizzo in his own language. Rozzo collapsed and sank to the floor in terror. Without proceeding further, the judge advised him to waive examination and allow his case to go before the grand jury. This was done and the man was lodged in jail.

It is now announced that Rizzo made a complete confession to the police at an early hour this morning after an all-night session, during which he was given the third degree. He declared that he took the girls to the gulf culvert with the intention of criminal assault, and that when they threatened to tell their fathers he feared personal violence, and shot the children to still their story.

A clever popular Candy Cold Cure Tablet—called Preventics—is being dispensed by druggists everywhere. In a few hours, Preventics are said to break any cold completely. And Preventics, being so safe and toothsome, are very fine for children. No Quinine, no laxative, nothing harsh nor sickening. Box of 48—25c. Sold by all dealers.

DUKE OF MANCHESTER FARMER

Husband of Miss Helena Zimmerman Keen Stock Trader.

Dublin, Sept. 29.—The Duke of Manchester, who married Miss Helena Zimmerman of Cincinnati, seems to be trying to prove that a man can be a useful citizen even if he happens to be born a duke.

On his Irish estates he is learning to be a practical farmer. In a soft water hat, oilskin coat and gaiters, he has been attending for the last month or two all the autumn fairs and markets in the small towns of Connemara and buying stock for his farms.

Farmers who have sold stock to the duke declare admiringly that no one can get the better of a bargain with him. They say the head of the ancient house of Montagu is very keen to get the "luck penny"—a discount peculiar to horse and cattle dealing in Ireland.

AGED WOMAN SLAIN AS WITCH

Russians Believe Victim Brought Pest to Village.

Archangelsk, Russia, Sept. 29.—A curious and typically Russian superstition, springing up in this province in the wake of the cholera epidemic, has seized many villages and caused incidentally the death of an aged woman making a pilgrimage to the monastery shrine of Onega. During the outbreak of cholera a legend gained credence that the cholera would cease in September, but wouldbt followed by the pest, which would appear in the person of an old woman visit the villages by night and kill the sleepers.

Whole villages, terrified, now spend nights in prayer behind locked doors, with chimneys, crevices, etc., blocked to prevent the entry of the scourge and guards are posted to warn the people of the approach of the dreaded pest-bringer.

At the village of Solz a young girl seeing an old woman, ran shrieking into the village. The peasants rushed out and beat the woman to death.

BODY FOUND

Angus McDonald's Body Found in The River.

Lindsay, Sept. 28.—The disappearance of Angus McDonald, aged 82, who has been missing since Saturday was cleared up last night when his body was found in the Scugog River by Messrs. Mosley and A. McDonald near the old flour bridge east of Dundas & Wiseelle's mill. He was an employe of the Eyetsman mill and remained away from work on Saturday afternoon go visit the fair. asked his mother to accompany him, but she could not. He was seen at the fair grounds, but his subsequent actions are unknown. It is thought that he was crossing the old bridge when he stumbled on the steps and fell into the river. Search was made everywhere on Sunday by his friends, who were distressed by a feeling of alarm, occasioned by his absence. His hat was found on the river on Sunday and it was to be that he was drowned. Dr. Blanchard, coroner, visited the spot and viewed the remains and decided that an inquest was unnecessary. The funeral will be held on Wednesday morning. Mrs. Neil Tobin of Peterborough, is a brother of the deceased.

UNIONS' DISPUTE CLOSES MINES

Employers Have No Part in Montana Labor Troubles.

Butte, Mont. Sept. 29.—As a result of a jurisdictional fight between the Western Federation of Miners and the hoisting engineers 80 per cent of the mines of the Butte district are closed down today.

A majority of Engineers' Union 83 having seceded from the federation and organized a new union, the Butte Miners' Union ordered its members not to go to work in mines employing members of the new engineers' union.

The situation is new, the difference being confined to the unions. The employers have no part whatever in the controversy. Unless the unions settle their differences in a few days all the smelters at Anaconda, Great Falls and this city will close and more than 15,000 men will be out of employment.

BOILING LAVA LAKE EXPLORED

Party Performs Hitherto Unaccomplished Feat in Kilauea's Crater

Honolulu, Sept. 29.—L. M. Hale, J. Reynolds and Ernest Moss, a photographer, descended today into the pit of the crater of Mount Kilauea and remained a half hour on the edge of a boiling lake of lava and fire. This is the first time this feat has been accomplished.

Members of the party ventured almost to the rim of the seething lake and attempted to take photographs. At times the adventurers walked over a partly melted area.

Kilauea is one of the largest active volcanos in the world. It is on the east slope of Mauna Loa, Hawaii Island. Its altitude is 4,400 feet and the circumstance is about nine miles, with a depth varying from 700 to 1,100 feet, depending on the level of the molten lava.

RICH MISER STARVES TO DEATH

Aged Man Found Dead in Room Where Wealth Was Stored.

Cincinnati, Sept. 29.—The body of Christopher Kuhn, an aged cabinet maker, was discovered in his squalid room at 1622 Central avenue today. He had been dead since Sept. 6, when according to neighbors, he apparently died of starvation. Secreted in the room were many thousands of dollars worth of securities. There were keys to a safety deposit box in the City Hall Bank and a bank book showing he had on deposit $1,100. Kuhn was a hermit and seldom ate anything, remaining in his room working on a violin. There were two violins in the room, one of which is said to be worth $1,500, and which was once the property of a famous musician.

Yielding to the plea for lenity in the circumstances, the judge let the man off with a fine of $200 and costs.

Wedding Bells

HALL—MILLS.

St. John's church was the scene of any exceedingly pretty wedding yesterday morning at 10.30, when one of Peterborough's fairest young daughters was united to a prominent young lawyer of this city. It was the marriage of Miss Daisy Mills, only daughter of Captain Joseph Mills, 451 Hunter street, to Mr. Basil D. Hall of the law firm of Holt, Hayes and Hall. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Canon Davidson, M.A., rector of St. John's church, in the presence of about one hundred invited guests. The beautiful edifice never looked prettier than it did yesterday morning. It was very tastefully decorated with cut flowers, the predominant ones being white asters. A rope of flowers was prettily arranged across the main aisle, marking off the guests' seats.

The wedding music was played by the organist, Mr. R. J. Devey. He played Wagner's bridal music while the guests came into the church, and as the bride entered the church, he played "Hail to the Bride," from Lohengrin. At the conclusion, as the party was leaving the church Mendelssohn's wedding march was rendered.

The bridal procession was led by the ushers, Messrs G. K. Rackham, W. P. Moreland, of Guelph, and J. B. Grover of Norwood. Little Grace Conway, cousin of the bride, in white silk, and Master Samuel Mills, her brother, united the floral rope to allow the party to pass. Following the ushers were the two bridesmaids. Miss Madeline Wilson and Miss Grace Reinhardt of this city. Miss Wilson was prettily attired in pink silk with black picture hat, and Miss Reinhardt, in white silk with black picture hat. Both carried pink asters. Then came the bride leaning on the arm of her father. She looked charming in a dress of white liberty satin, with trimmings of real Irish lace and veil with coronabons of pearls. She wore the bridal veil and carried white asters, the gift of a dear old friend, Mrs. (Rev.) Kilgour. The only ornament worn was a gold brooch, which the bride's mother wore on her wedding day. Master Lorne Conway, cousin of the bride, acted as page, and Miss Ethel Morrison, cousin of the groom, made a pretty maid of honor. She was gowned in white silk. The groom was supported by his brother, Mr. Gerald Hall.

Mrs. Mills, mother of the bride, wore Princess satin, with bands of lace embroidered with gold, with a black hat and black feather boa.

Mrs. H. P. Cleringbuld, grandmother, of the bride, was attired in black silk.

STUBBS—MELBURN.

A very pretty [illegible] September wedding was solemnized Tuesday night at "Hillcrest," Smith, the residence of Mr. T. F. Melburn, when his daughter, Sara M., was united in marriage to Mr. J. H. Stubbs, son of Smith. The ceremony was performed by Rev. J. Bedford of Lakefield. The house was beautifully decorated with autumn vines and flowers, and white asters. The bride who was unattended entered the drawing room to the strains of Mendelssohn's wedding march played by her sister, Miss M[illegible] Melburn. The ceremony was witnessed by a large number of [illegible] friends of the young couple, and at its conclusion a dainty luncheon was served in the dining room. Mr. and Mrs. Stubbs will reside in Smith on the 7th inst. Both the young people are well known and their many friends extend to them their best wishes for a bright future.

HUTCHINSON—MOORE.

A very quiet wedding was solemnized at St. Paul's church yesterday morning at seven o'clock, when Miss Eva Mabel Moore, eldest daughter of Mr. Chas. Moore, was united in marriage to Mr. Frederick Bruce Hutchinson of this city. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Robert Pogue in the presence of only the immediate friends and relatives of the bride and groom. They were unattended.

The bride, who was given away by her father, entered the church to the strains of Mendelssohn's wedding march, played by Mr. John Crane.

At the conclusion of the ceremony Mr. and Mrs. Hutchinson left on the eight o'clock train for Toronto and other points. On their return they will reside on Rubidge street.

JOPLING BROTHERS

Committed for Trial Yesterday and are Given Bail.

Fred and Harry Jopling of Bridgenorth, who appeared before Magistrate Edmison yesterday morning in the county police court, were committed for trial on a charge of manslaughter. No evidence was received yesterday, the Crown being content with what was heard last Friday. The case was argued by Mr. R. E. Wood for the prosecution, and Mr. D. O'Connell for the Jopling boys. Magistrate Edmison found the evidence sufficient to warrant a committal and they will appear at the Fall Assizes. The accused were admitted to bail at $4,000 each in two sureties each of $2,000.

APPLICATION TO UNSEAT.

Alderman Turner Was Dismissed by Judge Huyeke.

The proceedings to unseat Alderman J. J. Turner Jr., came up before his Honor Judge Huyeke yesterday morning. No evidence was offered, the relator, Mr. Alfred Kingscote, upon the advice of his counsel, withdrew the application to unseat Mr. Turner, and an order was accordingly made by his honor, dismissing the application without costs to either party.

It appears that although the firm of J. JJ. Turner & Sons is registered as partners, the sons are only nominal partners, and J. J. Turner, Sr., is the owner of the whole business. It is therefore doubtful whether Alderman Turner was subject to disqualification the same as if he was an actual partner. It was also considered that he had not wilfully been guilty of an infraction of the law.

Mr. A. P. Poussette appeared for the relator, Mr. Ald. Kingscote, and Mr. F. D. Kerr for Ald. Turner.

Election Protest

Some time after the election. Some man named Will told me he had my name.

What happened then? Were you taken to see anybody?

Not then.

What came then?

I took an affidavit.

How was that?

A man came around to me. His name is Pears. He said Rollie Glover wants you; it may be a better job than you got. I was taken to Stratton's office. Mr. Stratton said to me, "You received no money," and I said no. After that Pears took me to an office on Hunter street.

What office?

I think it was that gentleman. I would not be sure.

Witness indicated Walter S. Davidson.

Someone told me that I had better be careful or I would get myself in a nice box.

Was Pears present when you had the conversation with Mr. Stratton? asked Justice McMahon.

I can't say. He was there, but I don't know whether or not he came into the private office.

Were you working during the election?

Yes, for Mr. Glover.

What were you doing?

I was delivering circulars, newspapers and bills and work like that I got $1.50 per day for that. That was about three weeks just before the election?

Mr. Du Vernet showed witness the declaration he had signed, and he said the signature was his.

To Mr. Watson witness said he had been in Canada three years. He was asked if he had been at the soup kitchen last winter.

I was at my brother's.

Were you at the kitchen yes or no?

I was not.

You never got anything there?

No; nothing.

Witness said he went to Mr. Stratton about three months ago.

I told Mr. Stratton I did not get any money.

Who were present?

There were people walking in the main office but I do not remember if they came into the private office. Mr. Stratton said "You never received and money," and I said no. He told me to come in and see him again presently, or words to that effect.

Did you regard your answer an important one?

Yes.

Will you tell a lie?

Not easily.

You will tell a lie if you thought was to your interest?

Not about money, but I was afraid.

You told some persons you had not received money?

Yes.

Many.

A few. Mr. Stratton and Mr. Davidson.

Any others?

Some; but not as many as I told that I got money.

When I said I got money I was telling lies.

Did anyone ask you for your vote on election day?

I was asked by both sides to vote.

Who asked you?

I did not know them. There were lots of them.

Did you tell them how you were going to vote.

No. I said there was plenty of time.

Describing what he saw at the committee rooms on the afternoon of election day, witness said he saw Mr Leary hustling around. He didn't not know if Mr. Davidson was there or not.

Did you go into the small room?

Yes.

Were there many going into that room?

No, not many when I was there. I heard there was money knocking around and I went in there to find out if that was true. I went into a small room. I saw a wad of bills in Bob's hand.

Why do you say a wad?

Because there was a number of them. He was holding them just like a business man would.

What happened then?

He took a bill out of his hand, put it on the table, put a fox over it, and turned around. I picked up the bill and put it in my pocket and walked out.

WILLIAM SWANGEE

William Swangee was called and to Mr. Du Vernet he said he lived at 29 Rubidge St. and noted at the last election. On Saturday night before the election he was at the Liberal rooms about 7 o'clock in company with others and remained about an hour and a half. They were both up and down stairs. He saw Mr. Bryson who said "it would be all right." O'Brien was present then. O'Brien introduced him to Bryson, but Bryson did not mention money. Upstairs he saw several people going into the small room. He was also in the main committee room on the night of the election. He made a declaration seven or eight weeks ago. He met Kilbeck who told him that he was wanted.

At this point Mr. Watson objected and Mr. Du Vernet said he did not propose to have his witnesses tampered with as they have been. Then the two lawyers had some words. Witness was taken to R. M. Glover, who asked him if he got any money and he said no. Glover said "perhaps it is just as well you didn't." Glover then asked him if he would make a declaration to that effect. He was taken to Mr. Hall who read to him a declaration stating he did not receive money nor was he promised any. This part of the declaration was not correct. He had been promised money by O'Brien and this was ratified by Bryson.

Mr. Watson claimed the charge did not refer to any promise to pay, justice McMahon said he thought the charge might be amended to read, promise to pay.

Mr. Watson then proceeded with his cross examination. Witness told him he was not looking for any money. He heard there was nothing doing at the conservative rooms, but that there was in the Liberal rooms. He would not sell his vote nor be influenced by a promise. Here the witness and Mr. Watson crossed swords over the way questions were put. Witness said Bryson did not promise him money to vote. He got no money to vote.

AARON BUISKILL.

Aaron Buiskill examined by Mr. Du Vernet said he resided in the city and voted at the last election and was in the Liberal rooms Saturday night before the election with Swangee. Mr. O'Brien approached them and asked them what they wanted. Then they met Mr. Bryson who said he would make it all right with him.

Mr. Watson put in the same objection at this witness' evidence as he claimed it was only hearsay evidence and the judges ruled to that effect.

HARRY BUTTLER

Harry Buttler was called and to Mr. Du Vernet said he voted at the last election and was there on the day of the election in the afternoon about 3.30. He saw Mr. Leary upstairs in the large room. Later on he was introduced to Mr. Leary. Witness waited around for awhile and Leary came back and called him into a little room. Mr. Leary took a bunch of bills out of his pocket and put $4.00 under a cardboard box. Witness said that was not enough. Mr. Leary said "My God, if they were all like you they would break the bank." Witness took the money and went out and voted. He saw several go in and out of the little room.

To Mr. Watson witness said he did not know Mr. Glover, but did know Mr. Davidson and denied telling him that there was no truth in his charge. He was asked to sign the declaration. Hugh Harte was present at the time. Witness refused to sign the declaration. On election day he was looking for money thinking it might influence him in his voting. He was asked by Mr. Taylor and Kingscote to vote. They went to his house. No one asked him to vote in the committee room. He lived here six years. He was not out of work at the time and did not need the money particularly. He voted in the afternoon at Spry's shop, about four o'clock.

After witness had been paid he went out and Mr. Leary came after him and asked him if he had voted. Then Mr. Leary said he would get him a rig to drive him to the polls.

HALL, DAVIDSON AND STRATTON KNEW NOTHING OF VOTES BEING BOUGHT

Denied Statements of Englishmen

Characterised Many as Being Absolutely False —Gates and Ashby Stories were the Opposite of the Facts—Mr. J. R. Stratton in the Box When the Court Adjourned

Messrs R. R. Hall, W. S. Davidson and J. R. Stratton all swear that the evidence of the six Englishmen re getting money in the Liberal committee rooms was false. The taking of their evidence occupied all the afternoon and Mr. Stratton has still to be cross examined.

R. R. HALL.

R. R. Hall's cross examination resumed at2.05. He said Mat. Clancy asked him if any money was going. This was about four o'clock. He supposed that between 3 or 4 others asked him but he did not remember anyone vsing with him at the time. He saw Meharry there about the time Leary was there. He did not remember Geo. C. Elliott being there, but he did not see him working. He didn't see Mr. Duff there but supposed he was a Stratton sympathiser. The men looking formoney were laboring men. He could not say what room he was in at 4.30 but he was in all the rooms between 4.30 and 5 o'clock. He was in the main room when Leary returned from North Monaghan, witness did not draw any voters to the polls.

As to the six men who gave declarations witness did not recall getting them except Banks and Pritchard. They came into his office. He did not go for them.

To Mr. Watson witness said he heard that Gates and a bunch of Englishmen were blackmailing Mr.Stratton and it was for that reason that he wanted these men to state their propositions. He never asked Gates or Ashley to make a declaration.

WALTER S. DAVIDSON

Mr. Walter S. Davidson was next called and he told Mr. Watson that he was in the committee rooms in Simcoe Street from before 8 a. m. until, about 6 at night. He confirmed the sketch of the rooms submitted to Mr. Hall. He had his lunch sent in to him. From one o'clock on he was all over the rooms, but principally upstairs and was moving about most of the time. The crowds in the rooms varied from 50 to 200. He was in the east room several times during the afternoon. In the east room were large cardboard with the voters lists posted on them. He denied that there was any such thing as a row of men before the door of the little room and that the statements in the previous evidence was absolutely false. He thought there were chairs in the east room. He saw Mr. Leary there, around the committee rooms, doing general work. He went away in the afternoon because he asked Mr. Hall about him. This was less than half hour.Leary was back from Monaghan Leary was to go to Monaghan at 2.45. Witness did not know the time from his own observations. Leary was not in the room more than half an hour. Leary was out to Monaghan about 10 minutes to five o'clock. He did not know Ashley, Alsept, Harland, Pope, Butler or Williams at that time. He did not recognize them at all. Witness had no direct or indirect knowledge of money being given away. He heard no talk of it, and no rumours. He said charges of bribery against him were all absolutely false. He had no knowledge of Leary paying any money. He knew of no foundation upon which the Leary charges could be founded.

The first he knew of Gates was when he was pointed out to him on the street. He did not see him again to speak to him until the night of September 21st. In reference to that visit the witness said he knew Gates was with Mr. Stratton in Mr. Hall's office. Witness was in the general office and Mr. Leary came in.There were four present. Mr. Hall said "This man has a proposition to lay before you."

Gates then said he wanted $400 and he would make an affidavit that he got no money or saw none paid.He was willing to swear to anything.He also said Ashley would make the affidavit for $200.

Gates made a statement that he and Ashley would both make a declaration. Witness did not ask them to sign an affidavit. Gates made the first suggestion. Witness said as far as he was concerned there, was absolutely no truth in the charge and he would not give 10c for it. Mr. Leary also denied the charge. Mr. Hall said to Gates that it would be impossible to give him $400 and Gates and Ashley went out. He told of Glover bringing Ashley to his office some time before. Witness said he asked Ashley what he had to say about it. Ashley said there was no truth in the charge. Witness asked Ashley if he would make a declaration. Ashley asked "what is there in it," and witness replied absolutely nothing. Ashley then said he had been offered $50 by the other side. [illegible] form of declaration was drawn up by Ashley or Gates. Witness offered to pay for a declaration [illegible] no one doing so on behalf of respondent. Heard trip about [illegible] truth in him giving Gates [illegible] [illegible] new [illegible] months ago. [illegible] p.m. Witness [illegible] them read the charge to him and Alsept said there was no truth in the charge. He was willing to make the declaration and he signed it. None of the parties who signed declarations got anything for it nor were promised anything. Witness said he wanted to get his evidence in such form so they could tell where they were at. Witness denied the previous evidence stating that Leary was in the committee rooms up to 4.30.He said it was false Pritchard told witness that the Conservatives had taken him to the White House and tried to fill him up and to get a false declaration from him to the effect that he got money in the Liberal committee rooms. He saw Butler in the Examiner office a couple of months ago. Mr. Hugh Darte introduced them. Butler heard the charge read and he said there was no truth in it.

Butler in his evidence said that he did not say that there was no truth in it.

Witness said Butler did say that there was no truth in the charge.

Witness denied asking Wilson to make a declaration or to see J. R. Stratton, or to get in the rig with him or to call again at the office.

To Mr. Du Vernet witness could not say how many declarations he had secured. He was anxious to get as many as he could. He knew the importance of the declarations as they were handy to have. He knew Ashley and as far as he knew there was no necessity to lay traps for Ashley, nor to bring him down to Mr. Hall's office, or to get him to make any further admissions. He saw between 75 and 100 about declarations. They were brought to his office by Mr. Glover, Hugh Darte. Witness didn't remember telling any of the men from whom he got declarations that there was a penalty for taking a bribe but wouldn't swear to it. He never offered anyone any money for their delcarations. Ashley was false in saying that $2.00 was mentioned.

Witness had an indistinct recollection of being asked for money in the committee rooms,but he paid no attention to them. He did not remember anyone being in the little east room with him. He would swear that then was one chair in that room, but not more. Mr. Leary was in the west room a very short time on each occasion, not as much as 5 minutes. He saw Mr. Stratton there in the afternoon but he thought Mr. Stratton was downstairs most of the time between 4 and 5 o'clock.

Witness saw Leary there during the afternoon but would not pledge his oath that he was away for more more than fifteen minutes during two and four o'clock when he was talking to Butler. He again swore that he did not ask Butler for declaration. He did not try to get Williams either. He had no particular reason for not asking Butler and Williams for declaration. He contradicted Butler and Williams oath in reference to declarations.Mr. Glover brought in some of the men to the witness to interview. It was Glover who brought Ashley in. He did not offer Ashley $2.00. He asked Ashley to make a declaration but he refused unless he was paid for it. Later witness said he was not prepared to say that Ashley refused to make a declaration. He did not hear either Ashley or Gates say say they got money from Mr. Leary.

J.R. STRATTON.

Mr. J. R. Stratton was next put in the box and to Mr. Watson said he was at his committee rooms part of the time on election day. He knew Mr. Leary very well. He was a strong party man and witness acknowledge that Leary was supporting him and was working in the committee. Witness made no request of Mr. Leary to work for him. He knew of no meeting for organization purposes. The services were volunteered and were performed with his knowledge, but he asked Leary nor anyone else to do any particular work. Witness only directed himself. In the morning upstairs there were from 35 to 50 people. In the afternoon there would be 150 to 200.

Witness got to the rooms about half past two o'clock, and remained there from three quarters of an hour to an hour. He went out about 3.15 and Mr. Leary was not there then. Witness drove to Ashburnham, then to the north ward and around and he got back a little before four o'clock, and Mr. Leary was not there then, but got back just before five o'clock. When upstairs witness said he was in all the rooms.In the east room was a table, some stuff in the corner and he thinks there were some chairs. If not the chairs had only been removed that day. He was in the room between four and five two or three times, just for a second or two. He was downstairs practically all the time during those hours.

"There was absolutely no truth in the story of a row of men upstairs waiting to get into the east room," said Mr. Stratton. The cause of the confusion in the rooms was the lack

Mighty Battleship is Launched in Britain

Portsmouth, Eng., Sept. 30.— The Neptune, which, when completed, will be the most powerful warship afloat was launched from the government dockyard here today by King Edward's sister, the Duchess of Albany, and in the presence of a huge gathering of distinguished naval officers, politicians, and society people.

The launching was in direct contrast to the launching of Germany's first "Super-Dreadnought" at Hamburg last Saturday, which was conducted with the utmost secrecy.

The Neptune is England's eleventh Dreadnought. It is practically impossible for an outsider to get any definite information regarding the construction and armament of the Neptune. All that is known is that the ship will be armed dwith 12-inch guns mounted in pairs, and of a more powerful pattern than those of previous Dreadnoughts. Her secondary armament will consist of about twenty-five 4-inch guns, together with a particularly heavy torpedo battery. Her displacement will be 22,250 tons, or almost the equal to Germany's "Super-Dreadnought." She is expected to make a speed of 21 knots.

The Neptune will have a broadside fire of ten 12-inch guns, throwing nearly nine thousand pounds of metal, with eight more guns ahead and astern, throwing seven thousand pounds. The ship's total length is 530 feet.

The slips occupied by the Neptune will be immediately refilled by two new Dreadnoughts. Two were started in July, and four more will be commenced early next year.

According to the British Admiralty's information, the seven great maritime nations are spending on their armaments at present nearly $614,000,000 annually, divided as follows:

England	$185,713,500
United States	143,500,000
Germany	97,650,940
France	66,700,175
Russian	59,414,055
Japan	28,000,115
Italy	33,770,450

"Gambling is the Perversion of Certain Natural Instincts"

So said Rev. Dr. Cody, of St. Paul's Church Toronto, at St. Luke's Harvest Home Services—Gambling and Betting Strongly Denounced

"Gambling is the perversion of certain natural instincts in a man or a woman which in themselves are not wrong," said Rev. Dr. Cody, rector of St. Paul's church, Toronto, in the course of his excellent sermon on "Gambling—a National Menace" at the annual harvest festival of St. Luke's church last evening. The reverend gentleman denounced gambling and betting in the strongest terms, arguing that Christian bodies everywhere should pass resolutions asking that the laws in regard to race track betting and gambling be changed. At present he remarked the law was radically unsound. "We cannot over-estimate the magnitude of the evil," Canon Cody stated. He believed that a similar campaign should be waged against it as was being carried on against the liquor traffic. It was a national evil, nothing begetting more crime than it. According to statistics, Dr. Cody said that seventy-five per cent. of the embezzlements, forgeries and bankruptcies in the Dominion were the results of gambling.

Dr. Cody's remarks were most interesting. He is a fluent and eloquent speaker and his words cannot fail to make a deep impression. The service last evening was one of joyful thankfulness to Almighty God for a bountiful harvest. Everywhere were evidences of the harvests in the shape of fruits and flowers. The rector, Rev. Dr. Langfeldt, was assisted in the services by Rev. Canon Davidson of St. John's church, and Rev. Mr. Earle of Omemee. Rev. E. A. Pearson of the George street Methodist church preached the first lesson and Ald. J. J. Turner, the second one.

THE SERMON

Rev. Canon Cody based his sermon on the words found in the 23rd and 24th verses of the 19th chapter of St. John's Gospel. "Then the soldiers when they had crucified Jesus took His garments and made four parts, to every soldier a part, and also his coat. Now the coat was without seam, woven from the top throughout.

They parted my raiment among them and for my vesture they did cast lots." The speaker thought that a day when a congregation was returning thanks for a good harvest was a most opportune time to consider a national evil—gambling. He began by pleasing to his hearers the same surrounding the instance of gambling referred to in the verses of his text. The Saviour of the world upon the cross and scoffed, hard men gambling for His legacy. This evil was ride among the Jews of that day although there was no identical text in the Bible prohibiting gambling, one read such sentences he "money is the root of all evil." "Be kind one to another," and "Thou shalt not covet." The preacher continuing said that gambling was unearned gain at the cost of another. The magnitude of the evil could not be over estimated and the law was of little assistance in any effort to wipe it out. It has been stated that gambling came next to drunkenness in the curse it wrought upon society. It was not so openly repulsive as the drinking habit but to anyone who ever visited a race track or Monte Carlo it was as equally repulsive. People generally, were ignorant of its rapid growth, it being difficult to keep line with legitimate and illegitimate speculation.

BETTING DEFINED.

Rev. Canon Cody defined betting as being a stake upon a chance for gain without labor. It was a determination to gain the ownership of property by chance. It was the perversion of certain natural instincts. There were such instincts as the spirit of adventure, the love of freedom, the right full desire for money, which in themselves were not wrong.

The eloquent divine went on to show how betting violated one's natural instincts. The first one he referred to was the stewardship of money. In being one was wasting money by God. One-third of the human race was hungry and the progress of Christianity was retarded because money was being wasted. No use of money was more unrebuked than when expended in betting.

Secondly, it destroyed all proper view of the rights to property. If one lost by the shake of a dice or the shuffling of cards, then rightful ownership was denied. The transference of property by chance did away with all system. The speaker believed that gambling to a man of vigor was a sign of premature demoralization. Taking money that he had not properly earned was degrading and would ultimately lead to utter moral deterioratio

Wedding Bells

PAGE—LOGAN.

At the residence of Mr. Joseph Giles at "Fairview," North Monaghan, a very pretty wedding was celebrated when Miss Verna Page, eldest daughter of Mr. Edgar Page, of Peterborough, was united in marriage to Mr. John Logan, son of John S. Logan, Park street. The brice was prettily attired in a cream Princess gown and carried a bouquet of white roses, and was supported by her father.

The wedding ceremony was performed by the Rev. J. G. Potter, B.A., of St. Andrew's church. The young couple were unattended.

After the ceremony the company sat down to a wedding breakfast. Only the intimate relatives were invited.

The young couple will reside in Peterborough. The wedding presents were numerous and costly and testified to the esteem in which the young couple were held.

Evidence Taken in the Morning at West Peterboro' Election Trial

Mr. R. R. Hall was put in the box this morning and told quite the opposite story to what Mr. Gates and Mr. Ashley told. He also contradicted many previous witnesses. He was the most important witness of the morning and was in the box when court adjourned.

JAMES HARRISON.

James Harrison, a resident of Peterborough, was at Mr. Stratton's committee rooms on election day about three o'clock in the afternoon. Saw P. C. Meharry there and talked for about half an hour with him.Saw other faces there I knew, but can't say what th eir names are. Witness said he was in the big room and also in the small room. Saw several others going in the small room, but did not know what happened. There was no one in the little room when I went in, witness said. I saw four or five persons go in and out before I went in. After I went into the small room Mr. Leary came in. I was told the little room was a lavatory and went in for that purpose. I did not know it was Mr. Leary I was talking to. I was told afterwards that it was Mr. Leary who was in the room with me.

Mr. Watson objected to witness telling what occurred between Mr. Leary and himself as there was no charge bearing on this point.

To Mr. Watson Harrison said he was working at nights at the Quaker OatsCo., at the time of the election and was strolling around town on the day of the election. After leaving the Liberal rooms he went towards his home in the northern part of the city. He was in no particular hurry and he voted at Lee's shop just before five o'clock. Witness asked who that was in the room with him after he had come out and was told that it was Robert Leary. Witness did not see Mr. Stratton there but, recollected that he had seen W. S. Davidson there. He did not know Mr. Davidson at this time but remembered his face. The little room he saw the persons going in and coming out of was the one in the corner. I was sitting five or six yards from the door of the little room, witness said. He could not say how many persons were in the big room. Said he was subpoenaed last night and again this morning.

To Justice McMahon Harrison said he thought he was going into the lavatory when he went into the small room.

WITNESS NOT PRESENT.

Thomas Nicholls did not answer to his name.

"I want to put myself in a position to secure a warrant for this man," Mr. Du Vernet said.

"Thomas Nicholls, please come forward and answer to the subpoena that has been served upon you" the court crier called out three times, and there was no response.

"Robert Mitchell was called by the crier and a man stepped into the box. It turned out that his name was Robert Nicholls, and he was told to step down.

"Perhaps this man can tell us some thing about Thomas Nicholls." Mr. Watson said, but such was not the case.

WOULD NOT DISMISS CHARGES.

Mr. Watson asked their Lordships to dismiss charges No. 187, 7 and 11, on the ground that the witnesses who had given evidence in connection with them had been proved unreliable.

"I am prepared to argue the point with Mr. Watson," Mr. Du Vernet said.

"My learned friend is a little fresh this morning," Mr. Watson retorted.

Justice McMahon—"I think we had better hear all the evidence first. We'll dispose of all the charges together."

Mr. Watson submitted to their Lordships a number of the charges he thought should be thrown out on the ground that the evidence of the witnesses had been discredited. They were what have become known as the "Leary charges," and have reference to the alleged paying out of money by Mr. Leary at the committee rooms on election day. Among the charges Mr. Watson drew attention to were No. 17 Alsept; No. 15, Harland; No. 35, Pope; No. 173, Butler; No 174, Williams.

ARTHUR McCLELLAN.

Arthur McClellan was called by Mr Watson.

Mr. W. S. Davidson and Mr. Leary were asked to leave the court room while Mr. McClellan was in the box Mr. Watson wanted to have Mr. Leary remain but the judges ruled otherwise.

Arthur McClellan said he had lived in Peterborough thirteen or fourteen years, and was a broker. He was a son of Superintendent McClellan of the Trent Canal. On election day he was at Babb's lane in No. two ward. Was there all day with the exception of half an hour. He left there about 2.45 and went to the Royal Bank to do some banking. He was outside scrutineer in the interest of the Liberal party. Got to bank a few minutes before three, and went directly back to polling subdivision, getting back there about ten minutes after three and was there all the rest of the day. Witness knew Mr. Leary and saw him that day at Babb's lane at polling sub-division. Saw him there a few minutes after he had returned from the bank, between ten and twenty minutes after three. Mr. Leary drove up, asked how the vote was coming in, talked a few minutes, and then drove away. Would not say positively if there were anyone with Leary, there might have been. There was no possibility that it was not Mr. Leary. Did not see Leary again before five o'clock. Babb's lane was just an average division. Witness looked after canvassing in that division. He was quite sure there was nothing illegal or wrong in that division.

G. N. GORDON.

G. N. Gordon was next called by Mr. Watson. He said he was a barrister. He was inside scrutineer for Mr. Stratton at May's school house. Witness knew R. H. Leary fairly well

Did you see Mr. Leary in North Monaghan that day?

Yes: I saw him around four o'clock at May's school house. It was 10 or 15 minutes after four o'clock. He stayed there 10 or 15 minutes talking to scrutineers of both parties and the deputy-returning officer. It might have been longer than 10 or 15 minutes.

Mr. Gordon said he talked to Mr. Leary with the others. He conversed with him about driving back to the city at night. Witness thought it was about three or four miles from the city, to May's school house.Witness suggested to Leary that he (Gordon) drive back to the city with Leary at that time, but Mr. Leary intimated that witness would be able to get back to the city after the poll closed. Witness could not say that he saw Mr. Leary as soon as he arrived at the school house. He might have been outside a while.

ARTHUR MORGAN

Arthur Morgan was called and to Mr. Watson he said he had lived in the city all his life and remembered the election day. He drove a rig for Mr. Leary and sometimes with him. He started out about 10 a. m. Mr. Leary went with him at 1 o'clock, and they drove to the different city polls. They were away an hour or so. They got back between half past two or three. Mr. Leary stayed at the committee rooms until aquarter to four o'clock. He drove Leary to Babb's Lane. He got his orders from Mr. Leary. Then he went to May's School House and was there 15 or 20 minutes. They drove back arriving at the committee rooms at 10 minutes to five o'clock. It took them all that time going out and coming in. and calling at a couple of other polling places. He couldn't remember any of the places at which they stopped. Then he remembered that Babjs Lane was one of them. When they returned to the committee rooms at 10 minutes to five there was a big crowd outside and inside, but upstairs and downstairs.

To Mr. Du Vernet witness said they stopped at two places on the way out to May's. One was at Babb's Lane for 15 minutes. The next place

Looks Like Suicide Says Coroner's Jury on Springville Case

The Springville Skeleton mystery remains unsolved. The coroner's jury was unable to identify the body and they could not, from the evidence produced, state the cause of death.

The postmortem brought out nothing new. The body has been so long exposed and was so badly decomposed that it was impossible to discover any trace of the cause of death.

It will be remembered that the skeleton of a man was found in Geo. Campbell's woods on Sunday, Sept. 12 by Mr. and Mrs. George Bidgood, who were looking for a pig that had strayed. An inquest was ordered by Coroner Dr. Grey and three sessions were held. Two or three witnesses were examined but only meager information was forthcoming.

Detective Miller of the Provincial force was detailed on the case. He spent several days interviewing people in the neighborhood, but he discovered very few facts that were not already known.

On the whole nothing was found about the skeleton to indicate the personality of the deceased and it was impossible to identify the remains or to describe them in a way which would assist in identification.

The first session of the coroner's jury was in Campbell's woods on September 12th, and it was adjourned until, September 23rd.

The second session was held in Constable Reynold's store at Springville when Mr. Bidgood was examined. He told of the discovery of the skeleton. The coroner ordered an autopsy to be performed and Dr. Greer and Dr. Eastwood were appointed. The session the adjourned until last night.

DR. GREER'S REPORT.

The third and last session of the Springville mystery inquest was held in the North Monaghan town hall last night. Only one witness was called, Dr. Greer who read his report of the post mortem which was as follows:

Sept. 24th. 1909.

Post mortem examination held at the morgue of Nicholls Hospital at 4 p.m., Sept. 24th, 1909, on the remains of an unknown person.

The outer clothing was lined of medium quality,andthe underclothing was of coarse woo,en texture.

The remains were in an advanced state of decomposition, the soft parts had disappeared, except some small portions of skin and portions of the viscera. The muscular structures were represented by a putrid puttaceous mass.

There was no evidence of injury to the bones. There was some short grey hairs adherent to the skull The teeth were well preserved and none were lacking.

The legamentous structures about the joints were so far decomposed as to cause a separation of the bones.

The length andsize of the bones would indicate that the deceased was a person of small stature and light light build. The length of hair and formation of the pelvis would indicate male sex.

We are unable to so state the cause of death.

(Sgd.) ...

Newton Greer.

J. H. Eastwood.

Dr. Greer was then examined by Crown Attorney R. E. Wood, K.C., and told him that owing to the body being exposed decomposition would be much faster than if it was buried. The body, however, had been in the open for nearly a year. There was no dount about the skeleton being that of a man. there was none of the internal organs there was a thickness on one leg which would indicate a fracture or a break in years past. The person was of small stature and in middle life, somewhere around 35 years.The doctor found half an eye glass in the box with the bones and it must have belonged to the deceased. The doctor then told of the clothing which was very badly discolored and rotted so that it was hard to tell much about it. He judged the outer clothes to be brawn while the underclothes were of a light color. In conclusion the doctor said there was none of the internal organ left to throw any light on the case. He had examined the bones closely for bullet marks but found none.

The jury retired and was out for about 15 minutes when they brought in the above verdict.

Italian Wants to Meet Fred Simpson

Toronto, Sept. 30.—Carlo Libreto, the Italian champion runner, is out with a challenge to run Fred Simpson a 5-mile race indoors at a roller rink. He says he will put up a $50 side bet. Simpson says he will forfeit anybody for any sum plus 5 per cent. of the gate receipts. The race, if th eItalian comes up with the coin, will probably be run at Exhibition Worker Rink the latter part of December.

Cold in the Chest

Had Suffered for Weeks—Used Fourteen Different Remedies Without Effect.

CURED QUICKLY BY NERVILINE.

No stronger proof of the wonderful merit of Nerviline could be produced than the letter of Miss Lucy Mosher who for years has been a well-known resident of Windsor, N.S.

sore throat, wheezing tightness in the chest, etc., and can state that for years our home has never been without Nerviline. I had a dreadful attack of cold, that settled on my chest, that fourteen remedies couldn't break up. I rubbed on Nerviline three times a day, used Nerviline as a gargle, and was completely restored. I have induced dozens of my friends to use Nerviline and they are all delighted with its wonderful power over pain and sickness.

"You are at liberty to publish this signed letter, which I hope will show the way to health to many that need to use Nerviline.

DISEASES MEAT.

The condemned meat exhibit placed by the Department of Agriculture at the Toronto Fair was an object lesson which in the interest of all should not be forgotten, but should receive prompt consideration and action by the municipal authorities. This exhibit consisted of a display of beef, swine and sheep slaughtered at Toronto for the export trade, but condemned by the inspectors as unfit for food under the provisions of the Meat and Canned Food Act, which act passed the Dominion Parliament and became law in 1907. The act provides for the inspection of all meats intended for export, and during the first full year of its operation i.e. from April 1st, 1908, to April 1st, 1908, to April 1st, 1909, there were no less than 9,308 carcasses of animals and 280,591 portions of other animals as well as 353,212 pounds of meat condemned as unfit for human food. When it is remembered that these animals are of the best class procurable, the condition which exists at the ordinary private slaughter house conducted without inspection or supervision of any kind may readily be imagined.

The Medical Health Officer for this city stated in his annual report last November; that much of the meat offered for sale in the city was produced under unsanitary conditions and in violation of the provisions of the Public Health Act and the act respecting the slaughter of animal that over 200 carcasses of disease cattle were offered for sale in this market annually. He recommended the establishment of a municipal abattoir and the official inspection of all animals slaughtered for food."

The chief veterinary officer of the Department of Agriculture recommends in a circular widely distributed at the Toronto Fair "the abolition of the private slaughter-houses and the substitution therefor of municipal abattoirs conducted under the supervision of trained and qualified veterinary inspectors, as most of the objectionable meats placed on the market emanate from these undesirable and unsanitary places."

It is the duty of every man to see that his family, as well as himself, does not eat diseased and unwholesome meat. In places where establishments under Government inspection do not exist, safety in this regard can be secured only by the establishment of a municipal abattoir under official inspection. Municipal authorities have been too long neglectful of the necessity for intelligent action in the matter of meat inspection. We are glad to know, however, that our own city council has become alive to the importance of this and that a committee is now gathering information with the object of establishing a municipal abattoir, which is an ideal which the aldermen should keep before them while engaged in this investigation.

THE CEMENT MERGER.

It is asserted, says the Ottawa Journal, that as a result of the cement merger in Eastern Canada the public in the Canadian West are facing almost a daily rise of ten cents a barrel. The price has risen from $1.75 per barrel to $2.15 a barrel since the merger was effected. The West has good cause to feel concern as to the outcome of the merger. As one Winnipeg paper remarks, cement must be classed as one of the primary necessities in the building up of the many new cities, towns and villages of the West. In Winnipeg over a million dollars annually is being spent on new pavements and cement is one of the costliest materials of which they are made. Every other city of the West, also, is quite as much interested in the price of cement. They are entering upon a period of development during which millions will be spent in constructing paved streets and side-walks. In addition to these public requirements cement is becoming one of the chief elements in the making of building material. Lumber is advancing in price and many prospective home builders on the prairies are looking to cement blocks as a more economical, alternative to lumber, out of which to replace the temporary homes with permanent ones.

But though the West may imagine that the matter is of peculiar moment in that quarter it is in reality of general concern to the country. It had been suspected that the control of the Canadian output by the merger would be followed by an increase of price. This has already taken place, and the cost of cement construction must immediately go up. The burden will be more or less widely distributed. In fact, by reason of the cement merger the people of Canada are submitted to an immediate grievance.

There is, however, a remedy to hand, and it should be applied by the Dominion Government without delay. The tariff contains a provision that if it be charged that makers of a given article are in combination to restrict trade by the control of prices, the Government shall order an enquiry and if the charge be sustained by the evidence the Government may either reduce the import duties on the article in question or abolish them altogether. In the cement case the evidence is already strong enough to warrant the Government in taking action under the provisions in the tariff. An immensely powerful merger has been formed for the control of the cement output and cement prices. This merger has already put the prices up. It then becomes the duty of the Dominion Government to institute an enquiry, and upon the result of that enquiry to deprive the merger of the protection granted it under the cement duties.

AUTOGRAPH PRICES.

Regular Figures Are Quoted on Celebrated Signatures.

Whose signature, amongst those of celebrities of to-day, is worth most from the point of view of the autograph dealer and collector? The question is a difficult one to answer, for the simple reason that so much depends on the character and importance of the letter or document to which the signature is attached.

For instance, according to a catalogue issued a short time ago by a London dealer in autographs, while a Kipling letter referring to his writings is worth two guineas, an ordinary epistle of the same writer would be sold at half a guinea. The signature of Queen Alexandra can be bought for a guinea, but attached to a letter written in her girlhood days would fetch five and probably ten times that amount.

Here are a few of the market prices, so to speak, of other celebrities: Sir L. Alma-Tadema, 10s. 6d.; Sir Squire Bancroft, 2s. 6d.; J. M. Barrie, 5s.; Max Beerbohm, 10s. 6d.; Sarah Bernhardt, £1 5s.; Mr. Birrell, 2s. 6d.; Miss Braddon, 5s.; Hall Caine, 10s. 6.; Mark Twain, £2 2s.; Sir A. Conan Doyle, 7s. 6d.; Sir W. S. Gilbert, 5s.; Rider Haggard, 4s.; and Sir Charles Wyndham 5s.

With regard to famous men of the past, it is interesting to note that, while £63 was asked for a Tennyson letter, a Byron was only priced at 10 guineas, and a Cowper at 10 guineas. Twenty one pounds would have bought the signature of George Washington, and £12 that of Queen Victoria. Thirteen and fourteen guineas was asked for the autographs respectively of Dickens and Thackeray, while that of Edward Fitzgerald was priced at £21.

It is curious to note how variable are the prices of royal signatures. While, as already mentioned, £12 is asked for a Queen Victoria letter, a two-page epistle by the late Empress Frederick of Germany only realised a guinea. The sign-manual of George I. has been sold for 2s., that of George III. for £1 6s., and that of George IV. for 11s.; and it is an interesting fact that, while at one sale a letter from Charles I. to the Earl of Kingston, dealing with the request for a loan of £5,000, only fetched £21 10s., Cromwell's signature went for £80.

A Matrimonial Catch.

A remarkably active peer in the Commons is Earl Winterton, the "baby" of the last Parliament, so called because he was elected, while Viscount Turnour, when he was only twenty-one. His lordship has proved himself a young man of energy and vigilance in the House, but apparently politics do not allow him sufficient scope, for it has just been announced that he is to fill the editorial chair of The World. The earl writes as well as he speaks, and in addition is a keen sportsman. Furthermore, he possesses the distinction of being a grandson of that social queen, the late Dowager Duchess of Abercorn. In fact, someone who has counted up says that his lordship has more relatives of exalted rank than anybody else in the United Kingdom, and that the woman who wins him—for he is still a bachelor—will be related by marriage to three dukes, two marquesses, two earls, several barons, and a corresponding number of archdeacons and cockatoos.

A surgeon was hastily summoned and made an examination.

"Yes," he said, "the bone is fractured. How did it happen, Walter? Do you remember anything about it?"

"Why, yes," answered the boy. "I remember that when I tackled Skinny Morgan I fell on top of him, and I heard something crack, but I thought it was his collar bone."—Youth's Companion.

Not One of His Studies.

Miss Blank's second grade was notorious throughout the school for a lamentable lack of discipline. It was in this grade that printed reports were first issued to the children. One day Tom came home, proudly bearing the first formal record of his progress in scholastic lines. His mother, having been a teacher, was pleased to note that her offspring's ratings were of high order, but his lawyer father, having scanned the slip minutely, said gravely:

"I don't see any record of deportment here, Thomas."

For a moment Tom looked blank, revolving the possible significance of the unknown term, then his face cleared.

"Oh," he said, "we don't have that in our room."—Dollhouse.

Ability Appreciated.

Sir Charles Wyndham (speaking at a dinner) told of a young man he once heard of who was paying attention to a lady to the great disgust of her father, who remonstrated very kindly with him. The father said: "If I see you in this house again I shall kick you out." The young man came back the very next day. "I told you what would happen," said the father, and it did happen. The young man did not appear for about five weeks, and then one day the father saw him coming toward the house, and immediately went and opened the front door. "Haven't you had enough?" said the old man. "Have you come again to see my daughter?" "No, sir," replied the other, "I have come on behalf of the president of our football club."

Following Illustrious Example.

An art student in Berlin wrote recently to a brewing concern in Bohemia, offering to paint for the brewers "pictures suitable for advertising purposes—artistic, appropriate, attractive and cheap." He goes on to say: "Sir John Millais was not above taking 40,000 marks from a soapmaker for one of his paintings, to be used as an advertisement. Nor did he hesitate to offer other pictures for the same purpose at the same price. Why should not I, who owe my talent to the flea, not do the same? Stay! I shall do better. Am willing to take less than 40,000 marks for my best work."

The Last Straw.

"Say, paw," queried small Tommy Toddles, "why do they always put in a scythe when they make a picture of Father Time?"

"It is intended to represent the shortness of life, my son," answered Toddles, Sr. "Time cuts people down, you know."

"But, paw," continued Tommy, "when Time shall be no more, he'll drop his scythe, won't he?"

"Speaking of time, young man," said the father, "you go up and tell your mother it's time to put you to bed."

Stomach troubles would more quickly disappear if the idea of treating the cause, rather than the effect, would come into practice. A tiny, inside, hidden nerve, says Dr. Shoop, governs and gives strength to the stomach. A branch also goes to the Heart, and one to the Kidneys. When these "inside nerves" fail them the organs must falter. Dr. Shoop's Restorative is directed specifically to these failing nerves. Within 48 hours after starting the Restorative treatment patients say they realize a gain. Sold by all dealers.

RACING FOR THE PASS

YELLOWHEAD ROUTE DISCOVERED MANY YEARS AGO.

Viscount Milton and Dr. Cheadle in 1863 Spent Three Months Going From Edmonton to Kamloops Through the Narrow Cleft in the Mountains—Severe Privations and Laborious Travel.

From time to time there come out of the west reports regarding a race now going on between two great railway systems, the goal of which is the Yellowhead Pass. Each, it is said, is straining every nerve to be the first to locate and build its line through that famous passage across the Rocky Mountains. In that passage there is ample room and about facilities for both so that the result of the race is not of paramount importance. The important thing is that here two transcontinental railway systems propose crossing the Rocky Mountains and striking the Pacific coast at points far north of the existing British Columbia ports. This means, not only new railways, but new areas opened to development and settlement.

The Yellowhead Pass is not now engaging for the first time the attention of railway builders. Thirty years ago the Canadian Government caused a preliminary survey of the pass to be made, the intention then being to build through the pass the Government railway which had been promised British Columbia upon its entrance into Confederation. A few years later the railway project was turned over to the present Canadian Pacific Co., and the latter, having selected Vancouver as its western terminus, naturally looked for a more southerly passage through the Rocky Mountains. Kicking Horse Pass, the one in use to-day, was selected, and the Yellowhead Pass was left to enjoy a third of a century more of solitude. But its solitude has at length been broken upon. The engineers have come and taken their levels and driven their stakes. Close on their heels will follow the construction gangs. They will carry the highway of steel through the mountains, and soon these valleys and gorges will be resounding with the whistle of the locomotive.

The pass is heavily wooded, and the shadow of the forest and still deeper shadow of mountain gorges hang over the greater part of its extent. It has changed very little since that summer, forty-six years ago, when two adventurous young Englishmen, Viscount Milton and Dr. Cheadle, accompanied by an Indian guide and his wife and a very eccentric camp-follower, journeyed from Edmonton to the Pacific slope by way of the Yellowhead Pass.

It was a remarkable journey, during which the little party, toiling through dense forests, wallowing in almost impenetrable swamps and crossing on rafts turbulent rivers, endured great suffering and encountered grave dangers. Their supply of food became exhausted and it was only by killing and eating their miserable horses that they were able to sustain life until an Indian camp on the Thompson River was reached. By a very narrow margin indeed did they escape a miserable death from starvation. The two Englishmen wrote a graphic account of their journey and from its fascinating pages can here and there be gleaned descriptions of the Yellowhead Pass—especially interesting now that the pass is seen to become one of the thoroughfares of the Dominion.

It was on June 3, 1863, that Milton and Cheadle set out from Fort Edmonton for the Yellowhead Pass, their plan being to cross the Rockies, enter upper British Columbia and then follow one of the rivers down to the coast.

After days of weary travel they came in sight of the Rockies. "The prospect was a most glorious one," wrote the travelers, "and most exhilirating to us, who had lived so long in level country, and for the past three weeks had been buried in dense forests, which shut out every prospect, and almost the light of day.

Ranges of pine-clad hills, running nearly north and south, rose in higher and higher succession towards the west, and in the further distance we could see parallel to them a range of rugged, rocky peaks, banked by the snow-clad summits of some giants which towered up beyond. The snow which crowned the loftier peaks and still lingered in the hollows of the lower hills, glittered in the brilliant sunlight through the soft blue haze which mellowed the scene, and brought the far-distant mountains seemingly close before us. A cleft in the ridge, cut clean as if with a knife, showed us what we supposed to be the opening of the gorge through which we were to pass. The singular rock on the left or eastern side of this gateway, somewhat like the half of a sponge-cake cut vertically, we knew must be the one of which we had heard as La Roche a Mystie, close to Jasper House.

Coming to Jasper House, which stood at the eastern entrance to the pass, they found it "a neat, white building surrounded by a palisade, standing in a perfect garden of wild flowers." It was a noted trading post in its day, and one of the principal avenues of the Edmonton of the present time is named after it.

It was after leaving the pass that the travelers suffered the most threatening dangers. Between the pass and the Thompson river were miles of forest labyrinth through which they had to cut their way. Their progress was slow and their supply of provisions now about exhausted. Starvation stared them in the face. They killed their pack-horses and managed to subsist on the flesh until they reached an Indian camp, where food was procured. They were now passing out of the forest, greater progress was made and soon after they came to a district where were many Indian camps from which fish and game were obtained. It was late in August when they reached Kamloops, the journey from Edmonton having occupied almost three months.

Boom on Rand.

After a long interval it is once more quite "boom time" in Johannesburg. It is generally agreed that prosperous people have never been so good since 1895. All classes of business are already feeling the effects of better times. Activity on the Stock Exchange is enormous, for the public have at last fairly "gone into it."

One feature of the movement is the immense amount of pegging of claims going on in the surrounding district. Thousands of claims allowed to lapse in times of depression have been taken up again, and many fortunes are probable, but there are fears in some quarters that this may be overdone and produce a reaction.

The general view, however, is that the upward tendency will last. The reduced working costs on mines have made payable the working of millions of tons of reef which hitherto have not been a profitable proposition, and at the same time have immensely increased the profits of the more valuable mines.

It is regarded as a good sign that so far the improvement has not produced the mania of gambling which marked the 1895 "boom." In the commercial part of the town tradesmen report a marked increase in trade, especially in luxuries, such as pianos, motor-cars, carriages and horses, which first felt the bad times.

There are strong hopes that the wave of prosperity will result in the opening up of new mines and that it will then absorb the unemployed.

Her Call.

The whole southland never claimed a sweeter, more lovable and gentle woman, but she could never be persuaded to use a phone. Lately the entire household was down with colds, and there was no one else able to call a physician in the night.

After ringing up "Central" this dear little woman became panic stricken and could not think of the word the household used when they wanted "Exchange." Hurriedly she put the receiver up and whispered into the astonished ear of the telephone girl the word:

"Hurrah!"

The Sovereign.

He was a smart junior, with a rising reputation for genius in the art of cross examination. Said he to witness, a garrulous but alert old lady:

"How much money had you in your pocket when you say it was picked?"

"Four shillings, two sixpences and a sovereign in gold," came the reply trippingly on the tongue.

"Did you ever see a sovereign in anything but gold?" was the next question, cynically put.

"Yes; I once saw the King in a carriage."

A Way Out.

Servant—A newspaper reporter wishes to interview your sir.

Great Man—Did you not tell him I was hoarse—could hardly speak?

Servant—Certainly, sir! But he assured me he would only ask questions which you could answer by a nod or a shake of the head.

Great Man—Then tell him I have a stiff neck.

Surprise Party.

With a deftness acquired by long and patient practice the pickpocket extracted an old but well filled wallet from the hip pocket of the unsuspecting old gentleman with the beaming countenance against whom he had carelessly brushed when leaving the street car, and on reaching a secluded place he opened it.

The contents had been wrapped with great care in numerous thicknesses of blank paper. Removing the wrappings one by one he found in the centre of the package a card with this inscription upon it:

"Young man, give up your career of crime! Nothing in it!"

An Expert Lady Linguist.

Miss Marteina Kramers, of Rotterdam, has a wonderful command of language, and ranks among the first lady linguists. She can read and speak thirteen languages, and there are few men in the world who can equal that record. Besides, she had sufficient knowledge of seven other languages to converse in them, and she has planned to add a new language to her list every six months for several years.

Cheap Living.

She—I'm living on brown bread and water to improve my complexion. He—How long can you keep it up? She—Oh, indefinitely, I guess. He—Then let's get married.

Result of Rashness.

"Out of a job, are you?" asked the first girl. "Boss catch you flirting?"

"No; I caught the boss. Say, what sort of a wedding dress do you think is real swell?"

Truly this world can go on without us, if we would but think so.—Easy fellow.

A GIFTED NOVELIST.

Home and Personality of the Author of "Red Horse Hill."

Sidney McCall (Mary McNeil Fenollosa), the author of "Red Horse Hill," etc., when scarcely more than a girl was living in another part of Japan where the late Lafcadio Hearn began his studies of that country. Independently she, too, was absorbing the mystic influences of beauty, and in a different form, that of verse, was shaping her impressions into concrete structure. A modest little volume of poems called "Out of the Nest" is thought by many of her friends to contain some of her finest work. Lafcadio Hearn, who later became one of her valued friends, was delighted with these poems. In her home in Tokyo, with its garden where grew pansies, magnolias and "moon flowers," Mrs. Fenollosa wrote her first novel, "Truth Dexter," a book which had a great success. "The Breath of the Gods" was the outcome of her impressions of the situation in Japan and Russia just before the crisis, but it was written after her return to America in the "big, low workroom of her southern home in Alabama, which looks out upon a garden where the blossoming cherry mingles its petals with those of the rose and the jasmine." Kobinata, or little Sunshine hill, so called after the Japanese home, contains much that is best in beauty both of the east and west. Here also was written Mrs. Fenollosa's latest book, "Red Horse Hill."

Mrs. Fenollosa comes of an artistic family. Both her parents were writers. Her father, William Stoddard McNeil, was a poet of ability and a lover and keen student of nature. Mrs. Fenollosa's home life in Mobile has always been one of the units in a very close knit, large, devoted family group. "Truth Dexter" was in part an outcome of that homesickness which, while absent in Japan, she felt for the dearly loved home circle.

To her husband, the late Professor Ernest F. Fenollosa, well known in art circles as an authority on oriental art, Mrs. Fenollosa feels that she is deeply indebted for criticism, suggestion and constant encouragement, although in the matter of plot and actual writing she always works entirely alone. Their life together, both in Japan and in this country, was characterized by independent but absolutely congenial work and by harmony of interests and tastes.

In her latest book, "Red Horse Hill," Sidney McCall, as she prefers to sign herself, has furnished another American setting, that of a southern mill town. The conflict of human interests, a deep love motive that runs through four related lives among the characters of this story and the power for good or evil held in the hands of the controller of southern mills all bear a vital part in the drama.

Beauty in Dandelions and Milk.

If you want to be beautiful drink lots of dandelion tea and bathe in aerated milk. Any one who consents to drink dandelion tea is entitled to immortal beauty as a small reward. Still the stuff may be made palatable by putting things in it. For instance, a dash of brandy may be added, but the tea is better for the skin without this excessive addition. Several cups a day must be taken for the first two months of summer and then one cup a day throughout the year. Scented milk for the skin is recommended by those who study beauty scientifically. The milk must be boiled and then a few drops of violet water added. The fluid must be rubbed into face, neck and arms thoroughly and permitted to dry. Then the rubbing must be renewed. To steam the face with hot milk makes it soft and white as an infant's.

For the Tea Table.

A favorite dainty for the tea table is salted wafers or round, thin water crackers covered with beaten white of egg through which have been mixed finely chopped English walnuts. The crackers are baked in a hot oven and served instead of small cakes.

Land and Water.

There is three times as much sea as land in the world.

Hats Were Once a Luxury.

In the reign of Elizabeth the wearing of hats was considered a sign of luxury. By an act of parliament every person above the age of seven years and under a certain degree was ordered on Sundays and holidays to wear a woolen cap made in England and knitted by some of the inhabitants

RAIN SPOILS PAGEANT

FIRST DAY OF CHURCH SPECTACLE PROVES RIDICULOUS.

Bad Weather Mars Effect of Great Historic Object Lesson in London—Mud Bedraggled Saints and Monks Make Scene of Reverence Almost Comical—Retrospect of Church is Given by Huge Company.

After many months of hard work, of enduring enthusiasm, and of those little troubles which are inevitable in a great assembly of amateur actors, the English Church Pageant a few days ago gave its opening performance.

Alas! the elements were not propitious. The day was the worst we have had this summer—cold, rainy, utterly dismal. It was most unfortunate, because the pageant depended so much on the weather, not only for the comfort of actors and audience, but for its propriety.

The colors wanted the sun to bring out their richness and harmonies. All the colors on the field were dimmed and drabbled by the dank, dull atmosphere which clung about the actors. Instead of the joyousness and gaiety of those living pictures of medieval crowds on the green field, with its encompassing trees in heavy foliage, there were rather somber effects of poor people in unfamiliar garments, bedraggled in the heavy rain, and moving through the mist. This somber tone was deepened as the afternoon wore on and the light failed.

Then, too, the weather robbed the pageant of some of its revenue and dignity. It made some of the scenes fall from the sublime very near to the ridiculous, because the sympathy of one's imagination was shocked a little by the sight of saints and monks paddling about the [illegible] field, and getting into position at the wings of the open-air stage under the shelter of umbrellas. Roars of laughter greeted an episode in which British virgins were chased by savage Saxons with long spears, when, on the slippery, clayey ground, "Jill fell down, and Jack came tumbling after."

The great choir, gowned and hooded in medieval garb, were bound to abandon the dignity of history, and to commit wilful anchronisms in the full sight of the audience, and they sang the old litanies and dirges under a very forest of umbrellas.

In many ways the pageant itself, in spite of the bad weather, which tried hard to spoil it, was full of interest and supremely successful. The huge stand, with accommodation for many thousands of people, was packed to the last seat, and the enthusiasm of the audience, among whom were hundreds of clergy, was not to be damped. And the pageant pictures in the field rewarded them. Undoubtedly there was an appeal to the imagination, to the eye, and to one's sense of reverence, in this pictorial drama representing by living figures in vivid scenes the history of the old Church of England. The very field on which this drama was played is historic ground. The moat of Lambeth Palace was dug out many centuries ago, and on the field which it surrounds many great scenes, many most vital episodes in the history of our church and country, have been really enacted by men strong in spirit, whose flesh has long since gone to dust.

Thinking of that and of old things half forgotten, it seemed to one that the people on the pageant ground yesterday, vague as they were in the dank mist, were the ghosts of those who once played their parts and went their ways to death and bequeathed their ideals and purpose to those who followed on this soil of England.

The prelude, with St. George in the silver-shining armor, and with the early British saints, Alban and Julius, Dunstan and Patrick, stirred in one's memories of the dream-stories of the dawn of Christian faith in Britain—legends made true only by tradition and by a few old stories here and there.

The first scene of "The Publication in Britain of the Edict of Constantine, 313," is not recorded in history, but at least it was a reminder of the Roman occupation of Britain and of the little bodies of Christians, shattered outposts of the Faith, who lived between the rule of the Roman gods and of the Druid nature-worship, and to whom a liberal edict granted freedom of religion as to all citizens of the empire. That was all a ghost-story yesterday, but one which took one's imagination back to the dim half-light of the early world.

And so as the scenes followed—the visit of St. Germain of Auxerre to the British Christians who had fallen into heresy, the founding of Iona by St. Columba, the coming of St. Augustine to the Saxons, who had driven the British to the West and destroyed the Christian outposts, the conversion of those Saxon people who were truly the first of the English, and the strong and real foundation of the Church in England—one had before one on the field a drama, full of color, in which one saw, as on an illuminated scroll of history, the foundation of the faith of our fathers.

One was shown the influence of monasticism in England before and after the Conquest, and the martyrdom of Becket reminded one of the long struggle between the Church and State—marked not once or twice only by brutal injustice and bloody tragedies, inevitable, perhaps, in a conflict between the spiritual and the temporal power, each seeking to break down the other's prerogatives, each claiming perhaps more than was due.

The episode of Magna Charta was to prove that the old Church was sometimes, if not always, on the side of liberty. The later episode of the suppression of the monasteries and the establishment of the Reformed Faith proved one thing to one man and one thing to another, according to his religious convictions and his knowledge of history.

Go to the blood. If you are to drive out Rheumatism. A Wisconsin physician, Dr. Shoop, does this with his Rheumatic Remedy—and with seeming success. Rub-ons, says the doctor never did cure Rheumatism. It is more than skin deep—it is constitutional, always. Because of this principle, Dr. Shoop's Rheumatic Remedy is perhaps the most popular in existence. It goes by word of mouth from one to another, everywhere. Grateful patients gladly spread the news. It is an ons of kindness to tell the pain of a way to health. All

NEW LAUNCH.

Large New Gasoline Launch for Vismede's Guests.

Mr. and Mrs. William Graham of Vismede, returned yesterday from Toronto, where they purchased a new gasoline launch, which they will place at the services of their guests next summer. It is a speedy, trim craft, built not only for comfort, but for a certain amount of speed, and as it will easily accommodate about 25 persons, the guests of Vismede are assured of a good time during the summer season of 1910. Mr. Graham states that the past summer was the most successful they ever experienced and despite the handicap of a late beginning of the regular season Vismede had a large number of visitors, larger than ever before. This summer resort was rebuilt last spring and on commodious, cool and easy lines and has won many patrons during the past few years. The proprietor will begin early to make preparations for an even better season next year and they fully expect that the lakes will continue to grow more popular as it becomes more widely known.

ARRESTED EVELYN'S BROTHER.

Will Be Charged With Being Business With Imitation Diamond Ring.

New Haven, Conn., Sept. 30.—After admitting his identity to the police, Howard Nesbit, brother of Evelyn Thaw, was arraigned in the city court here today, and his case was continued until Saturday, under a bond of $500, in default of which he was locked up.

Nesbit was arrested yesterday afternoon in front of a George street pawn shop, where, according to the pawn broker, he was attempting to sell an imitation diamond ring When arraigned in court he gave his name as Roy E. Campbell, but an examination of his pockets brought to light a number of post cards, letter and a bank book with the name Howard Nesbit. The police searched the room he occupied at the Garde Hotel, and found six imitation diamond rings.

When arrested he stated he was acting as an outside advertiser for a firm, and protested against being interfered with, even threatening suit for his arrest.

DIRECTORS HAVE SURPLUS.

Of $900.87 From the Peterborough Exhibition.

The Peterborough Fair directors held a meeting last evening and wound up the business in connection with this year's fair. The president, Mr. S. B. Leary, was in the chair, and the following members were present; Messrs. Geo. Elliott, William Collins, J. J. Turner, Sr., S. A. Otz, W. Conway, J. B. Garbutt, Cruikshanks, and the secretary, Mr. F. J. A. Hall.

Mr. Leary stated that it must be a matter of great satisfaction to the directors to know that their fourth year of the year had been crowned with success. The fair had been the best that was ever held, financially and otherwise.

Mr. Hall presented a statement of receipts and disbursements. The receipts were $4,524.50, and the disbursements were $3,716.23, leaving a balance on hand of $808.27. There were 12,000 paid admissions.

The dates for next year's fair were fixed as September 14th, 15th, and 16th. The suggestion of Mr. J. J. Turner, Sr., to have a four days' fair did not meet with general favor although the matter was not definitely decided, it having been thought better to leave the matter until there was a larger number present. The accommodation that is provided is not conducive to extending the fair to four days.

The accounts were read by the secretary and recommended to be paid.

A public meeting to consider a proposition to purchase the fair grounds will be held early in October.

The meeting then adjourned.

Ate Onions and Was Sent Home.

Lindsay Post: To show what fears some of our teachers have become, one pupil was sent home because he ate onions. The infinitesimal particles of the odoriferous fruit vibrated upon the nasal membranes of the aforesaid goddess of learning and irritated her, though, she said, nauseated. The father sent the pupil back and the child was dismissed again. The principal backed the teacher, and considerable correspondence ensued, which we will publish if we can lay our fingers on it, but the father had his way. So now Nellie Johnnie Jones and his chums can eat onions to their heart's content. The question is, When did the teaching profession take upon itself the duties of regulating the diets of the ratepayers' children?—Trenton Advocate.

Deafness Cannot Be Cured.

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

TACTFUL CHAPERONS.

How They Should Dispose of Undesirable Young Men.

The perfect chaperon is born, not made, because to be at her best she must be constantly on guard without the appearance of watching her charges, and that means a poise and self control and an ability for self effacement that the average woman does not possess. And because of this lack of sufficiency chaperons are frequently maligned either by parents or young folk, for if she is too strict the latter are annoyed, and if not sufficiently so parents are displeased.

The most difficult problem that a chaperon has to manage is what to do when some whom she considers undesirable calls to her charges. To give them the cut direct is rude and places her in a most unfortunate position.

To show her displeasure quietly is not apt to be effective, for girls are likely to champion those whom they deem downtrodden, and, if the man have the least charm of manner or know how to make themselves agreeable, to snub only makes them more interesting to the average young girl. While no chaperon is so silly as to think that every man who calls has charge wishes to marry her, the older woman has nevertheless to remember that he may be a possible husband, and it is imperative that the girl should be guarded from undesirable association. Probably the best way of managing such a situation is for the chaperon to be constantly in the foreground, without the appearance of being on, not giving the man any opportunity to develop the acquaintance beyond most formal lines.

Her greatest test lies in so managing her charges that she can retain the girl's confidence, for so long as she has it she will know the situation. Once let her lose it, and she writes in the dark, not being certain what the day may bring forth. As to how much liberty a girl may be given by her chaperon to summon, one can only say it depends greatly upon the girl and her associates. If they are suitable and she is sensible there is no need of her having a protector all the time, for her own good sense is enough. Girls are always given more freedom in summer than in winter, and with a man whom she has known intimately and is known to be a gentleman in the fullest sense of the word there is no reason why she should not drive, call and walk unchaperoned.

To quickly check a cold, druggists are dispensing everywhere, a clever Candy Cold Cure Tablet called Preventics. Preventics are also fine for sweeten breath. Take Preventics at the [illegible] sign. 10 cents in all guide. [illegible] all druggists.

PREVENTION.

The Aim of Modern Medicine.

To prevent disease, to keep people well, to teach them the laws of health and how to obey them—this is the aim and task of modern medicine. Reducing this to its personal application, it means that you should dislodge small ailments before they grow big.

In the liver, kidneys, stomach and bowels, we find the instrumentalities that principally maintain life. They are prone to minor interference, that can be easily corrected by taking a weekly dose of Dr. Hamilton's Pills. When they grow sluggish or to aid them in keeping active, do not wait until you have to keep brain and eye clear by the occasional use of Dr. Hamilton's Pills. Keep clark lines from under the eyes, the skin clear and smooth and flexible—all this you may do and may do and more by the use of the most useful blood purifying and liver and kidney energizing pills, Dr. Hamilton's. That's the name of the best family medicine ever made. For stomach disorders, indigestion, biliousness and constipation, you are sure of cure by using Dr. Hamilton's Pills, 25c per box, all dealers, or The Catarrhozone Co., Kingston, Canada.

Election Protest

THURSDAY MORNING.

was near the Edison Works and stopped about 15 minutes. They stopped at Mays 15 or 20 minutes. This left 15 minutes to go to May's and back. He admitted to Mr. Du Vernet that he did not know much about the time except when they left and when they got back. He took Mr. Conroy to East City, he guessed, at 3 o'clock. About 3.15 he drove another voter to the mills and then came back to the committee rooms at 3.30 and stayed there until 3.45. Mr. Leary came to the door and said he would soon be ready. Asked again about the time he looked at the post office clock he said it was 15 or 20 minutes after 3 o'clock.

R. R. HALL.

Mr. R. R. Hall was called by Mr. Watson and said he was an active worker during the last election although he had nothing to do with the organization. He was one of the public speakers. He was in the committee rooms every Saturday night and occasionally on other evenings. The upstairs rooms were occupied by the committees and the public. A sketch of the rooms was put in as an exhibit. During the campaign there were from 75 to 200 people every night. He knew of no one being in charge. He was in the committee rooms before 9 o'clock and remained there most of the day, except at the luncheon hour. Most of his time was spent upstairs. First he looked after the manning of the polling booths. There were voters lists in both rooms and in the east room voters' lists were posted on cardboards for convenience. Witness was in charge of the lists. The crowd upstairs varied from 35 to 100, especially during the afternoon. Witness was in the east room or west room nearly all afternoon, in and out. He said there never was a theater row in the room. It was impossible for such to exist and it did not exist. There were no symptoms to indicate such an organization. Mr. Leary was at the rooms in the afternoon when he got back at 2.15, or shortly after Mr. Leary left the committee rooms shortly before ten o'clock to visit the polls in No. 2 ward. Witness talked to Leary who said he was going to North Monaghan and witness told him he couldn't go. But Leary then went out to Ward No. 2 to get information and got back so he could go to the country at a quarter to 4 o'clock. Leary got back from city polls at 3.30, saw Mr Hall and then went to Monaghan at a quarter to 4. They talked in the west room together for sometime. They were not in the east room together. They were together the greater part of the time during that quarter of an hour. He knew Leary left at a quarter to four because he said he was going to, and he got back just before the poll closed. Witness denied the evidence of the six witnesses who said Leary was there between 4 and 4.30. There was no truth whatever in the story. He did not know Ashley, Alsept, Gates, Bank, Pope, Butler, Wilhams. He remembered Meharry being there. He could not place Bartlett being there. Meharry was there about 2.30. Others there were Dickson Hall, J. R. Stratton, G. L. Henry R. H. Leary, A. H. Stratton, Mr. Kelly, W. L. Davidson, Jos. O'Brien, Jas Clark and many others.

Witness saw no money going but he heard of people being sent to the rooms to get money and some asked him about it and he told them there was none going. He knew nothing of money. One man who asked him for money was Mat. Chaney and he told him there was none.

Downstairs Elgin Meyers was in charge of the voters lists. In reference to Ashley witness said he talked with him on the night of Sept. 21st. He and Gates went to his office about 8 o'clock. They all went to his private office and introduced Mr. Stratton. Gates was anxious to sell himself and witness thought it was wise to learn something of the character of the witnesses who were to appear against Mr. Stratton. The first time Gates was there he came alone and introduced himself and then he said he heard money was going in connection with giving evidence at the protest. He said he was an important witness against Mr. Stratton and Mr. Davidson who gave him $5.00 in the Examiner office and $2. from Leary. Witness said "What do you think about it?" "Well, said Mr. Gates, "if I get $400 I'll make a false affidavit and clear out." Witness said he could not enter into any such transaction personally, but told Gates to go to Mr. Stratton and tell his story. Witness was to arrange a meeting with Mr. Stratton. Witness made arrangements and told Frank Fairen to see Gates. On the night of the final meeting, Ashley, Gates, Stratton and Witness were present. Ashley wanted $2.00 or he would swear against Leary. Messrs. Leary and Davidson were in Mr. Davidson office.

Witness then told Mr. Stratton that Gates was present to make a proposition. Gates then told Mr. Stratton that he was willing to sell out for $400. Witness then asked Ashley what he wanted. Ashley said he would sell out for $200. Witness said the same proposition should be made to Davidson and Leary. Those men were called in and were told what was going on. Mr. Davidson said "There is not a word of truth in it and I wouldn't give 10c for it." Leary said the same. Witness told Gates his proposition was impossible so Gates and Ashley left saying "We'll meet you at the sessions with a bunch of Englishmen who will surprise you." There were no declarations drawn for Gates or Ashley to sign.

To Mr. Du Vernet witness said he positively knew nothing of the $50 Gates got from Mr. Henrahan. They got particulars of the charges the first of June. Soon after witness went to the country with four declarations to get, signed by the people who were charged. He got them. He know they were necessary to establish the case. Witness said he did not know that was improper.

His Lordship said taking declarations was very improper and had been for many years.

Witness admitted he knew Gates and Ashley were to be witnesses. He also sent for Gates and arranged for the witnesses to meet Mr. Stratton. He also admitted he tried to trap these two men and arrange to have Davidson and Leary present in the adjoining room. He admitted that he told Gates to put his proposition up to Stratton.

Witness had been informed that Gates was working a ring of English men and he wanted to know about his character. The same with Ashley. He may have taken a declaration from Pritchard and Rider. He did not recall talking Pritchard or Rider what the punishment for bribery was. He told several others, however, when they asked him. He told them they were liable to imprisonment and a fine. This was not in connection with the declarations.

When Gates first came in, Witness told him he would send for him again. He got Frank Fairen to see Gates and ask him to come to witnes' office. He admitted that Davidson and Leary were there, for the purpose of hearing the proposition. Witness was trying to embarrass the two Englishmen who would give evidence against Mr. Stratton. He thought it would cause quite a sensation when Gates got in the box. Witness was never asked to sign an affidavit.

Witness admitted that Gates offered to leave the country if he got $400. Witness asked him what he was going to do with the $400. The meeting lasted 15 or 20 minutes.

On election day witness said he had no particular duties to perform, but he did work in the three committee rooms. There was a table and two chairs in the little east room. He recalled Hugh Darte being there with him. His time was devoted pretty much between all the rooms. Mr. Stratton was around the rooms most of the afternoon and was downstairs between 4 and 5 o'clock.

Mr. Leary was in charge of No. 2 ward, and was supposed to visit the polls and to spend the rest of his time in the committee rooms. Witness did not recalled being in the east room with Mr Leary all afternoon. He remembered being in the east room with two or three men.

Court adjourned for luncheon at 5 minutes past one o'clock for one hour.

of organization. Voters did not known where to go and Leary was all over making himself generally useful.

Witness had no knowledge of any one getting money from Leary. But there are always lots of talk of money at elections. So far as he was concerned there was absolutely no foundation for the statements made in the witness box. He said Mr. Leary was not around between four or five o'clock. Witness never saw or heard of any money going in the Liberal rooms and there was no foundation for it. If there was any such rumor it was manufactured. He had been asked for money on the street, downstairs and upstairs, but none of the six men mentioned asked him. Those who did ask him were laboring men that he did not know, and they did not get it. Ashley was painting a sign in the Examiner office the first time he saw him, but did not know his name. Before Ashley went out, however, he left his card on witness' desk and asked Mr. Stratton to turn what work he could his way.

Witness denied that Gates ever was instructed to get $5.00 from Mr. Davidson for him. Gate's evidence was absolutely false. Then he saw Gates in Mr. Hall's office on Sept. 25th on invitation from Mr. Hall. At that time Gates made the proposition that for $400 he would make any kind of declaration they wanted and would leave the country before the court opened. If he didn't get the money he would make his statement in court. Gates did most of the talking. Witness would not entertain any such proposition as Gates made. He also said there was no truth in any of the charges against him in the particulars.

$250,000 Fire in Mr. Chew's Lumber Yard in Midland

Midland, Oct. 1.—A fierce and uncontrollable fire this morning completely destroyed the big lumber yards of Manley Chew, M.P. for East Simcoe, causing a loss of between three hundred thousand and four hundred thousand dollars. Ten million feet of lumber were consumed, as well as the comfy tramways and docks. What the cause was has not been determined, though the blaze was first discovered at the base of a pile of lumber, where it is believed a lighted cigar may have been carelessly thrown. Happily for nearby residences the strong wind was blowing in a westerly direction, though it ensured the complete demolition of the yards. Local fire fighting apparatus was used and veins-tourn were rushed to the scene from all quarters, but the closely piled lumber heaps caught rapidly and burned like shavings. Efforts were made to cut off part of the lumber from the advancing line of flame, but this proved useless. At 1 p.m. all hope of saving evening a portion all hope of saving even a portion of the stock was abandoned, and the employees and townspeople were obliged to stand helplessly by. It is thought the mill may yet be saved. At no time was the town of Midland in danger, as the yards stand quite a distance over, though had the wind changed, it is difficult to say what might have happened. Mr. Chew's lumber industry was among the most important in this section of the country and its loss will be felt heavily. The insurance is not yet known. The lumber was owned principally by the Warner Lumber Co., Savage & Co., and Cochrane. Only ten days ago, on September 30th, the yards of Chew Brothers, situated in the center of the town, were destroyed, causing a loss of over $250,000, and destroying about fifteen million feet of lumber.

DISEASES MEAT.

The condemned meat exhibit placed by the Department of Agriculture at the Toronto Fair was an object lesson which in the interest of all should not be forgotten, but should receive prompt consideration and action by the municipal authorities. This exhibit consisted of a display of beef, swine and sheep slaughtered at Toronto for the export trade, but condemned by the inspectors as unfit for food under the provisions of the Meat and Canned Food Act, which act passed the Dominion Parliament and became law in 1907. The act provides for the inspection of all meats intended for export, and during the first full year of its operation i.e. from April 1st, 1908, to April 1st, 1908, to April 1st, 1909, there were no less than 9,208 carcasses of animals and 260,591 portions of other animals as well as 353,212 pounds of meat condemned as unfit for human food. When it is remembered that these animals are of the best class procurable, the condition which exists at the ordinary private slaughter house conducted without inspection or supervision of any kind may readily be imagined.

Judgment will be Given This Morning

Their Lordships Justices McMahon and McGee will this morning at 10 o'clock when the court opens deliver their judgment upon the Leary charges in connection with the election protest trial of Burnham vs. Stratton.

The evidence on these charges has occupied the entire week and yesterday afternoon counsel for the petitioner and respondent presented arguments.

The greatest interest centers in the judgment on these charges and the court room will be crowded when court opens.

MR. R. H. LEARY EMPHATICALLY DENIES CHARGES AGAINST HIM

Mr. J. R. Stratton was Cross-Examined Yesterday Morning---Evidence Was All in on the Leary Charges and the Opposing Opposing Lawyers Presented Their Arguments Before the Adjournment

Mr. Stratton was cross-examined by Mr. DuVernet at the beginning of yesterday morning's session.

He had considerable experience in campaigning, he admitted, there was no formal organization. I paid all legitimate expenses," said Mr. Stratton.

He did not know that Mr. Davidson had paid out any moneys. He was not working with Mr. Davidson on election day. He had not seen Mr. Leary there in the forenoon, but had seen him part of the time in the afternoon. Mr. Stratton went to the committee rooms between twenty minutes and half-past two in the afternoon. Mr. Leary was there then. About three or a little after he had asked for Mr. Leary and had been told he was out. Witness had returned to the committee rooms about four o'clock and remained until after 5 o'clock. Witness was asked for money on the street, by laboring men, by three or four parties. One or two might have asked him up in the committee rooms. Witness had replied that he had none. Farrish, who had been employed as a detective by the Conservatives said that these men had been sent there to ask for money.

"How much did you pay Farrish?" asked Mr. DuVernet.

"I did not pay him at all," replied Mr. Stratton, emphatically.

He did not know any of these parties who had asked him for money. He had told them to go to the Conservative rooms.

The first time he had seen Ashley was at the Examiner office. Witness had never employed anybody to see any of these people. Some people were brought to him. He thought Farrish brought some of these people. He could not remember the men who were brought in. It might have been more than twenty or less than twenty. Some who had been spoken to came in. Mr. Hall or Mr. Davidson might have been there some times, but it have been there some times, but it was the exception, not the rule for them to be there.

The interview with Gates and Ashley at Mr. Hall's office was gone into again. Mr. Stratton corroborating the evidence of the other witnesses in every particular.

"Ashley came to see me in my office." Mr. Stratton stated. Farrish brought him and introduced him. Mr. Stratton read the charge to him and he denied it. Pope was also brought in on another occasion, and the charge was also read over to him, with the same denial.

Asked about Mr. Elgin Myers, Mr. Stratton explained that he was acting as his private secretary at the time of the election, owing to the witness having to be away from his Toronto office.

There were from 150 to 200 people in the committee rooms during the afternoon, Mr. Stratton stated in answer to a question.

Mr. Stratton stated that he knew Alfred Kingscote. He did not think that Kingscote had brought anybody to him. He knew that he was working but did not know that he was in charge of the Englishmen, as Mr. DuVernet suggested.

To Mr. Watson, Mr. Stratton said that there was no reference by way of intimidation to any of the men that had been brought to see him. "There was no illegal expenditure of any kind before the election, on the day of the election, or after the election?"

"As far as I am concerned, "no," answered Mr. Stratton.

Chas. A. Kelly was at the Liberal committee rooms on election day from 1.30 o'clock throughout the afternoon. He knew that Mr. Leary was out sometime about three o'clock. He did not know where he had been. He went away about half-past three or twenty minutes to four. Mr. Leary had told the witness that he was going out in the country to Monaghan, witness thought. Witness remembered looking at his watch a few minutes before four o'clock and it was about fifteen minutes before that when Mr. Leary left.

ROBT H. LEARY

Mr. R. H. Leary was called and in reply to Mr. Watson said that he had lived here all his life and has held many very responsible positions. He was at the Liberal committee rooms last election day and was an active worker and supporter of Mr. Stratton although he was never asked to do so by the candidate. Election morning he was looking after the polling divisions in ward No. 2. He was in the committee rooms from 10.30 to 12. Before that he made a round of the polls and then went to May's school house in north Monaghan. He had lunch at a restaurant.

Witness said he did not pay the six Englishmen money. Their statement are not true.

He was back at the committee rooms at one o'clock and left at once for the polls and got back in about half an hour and remained until 3 o'clock. Then he made another round of the polling divisions. He was at Babb's lane and saw Mr. Arthur McClelland. This was about a quarter after three and got back between 25 to 30 minutes past three, and told the driver to be sure to be back at a there he was talking to people, shaking hands and moving about. He talked with R. R. Hall, for a few moments in the main room and in the east small room, and he used the 'phone in the west room. The east room was particularly used for quick reference to the voters lists, and it was used by everyone who wished to do so. He was only sure of one chair being in that room. He had carried the rest out to the main room. In the corner room with R. R. Hall, W. S. Davidson, Dickson Davidson, Jesse Irwin.

They went to May's school house direct from the committee rooms at a quarter to four. He stopped no place. He got back at 10 minutes to 5 o'clock. He was at May's between 15 and 20 minutes.

Witness did not know Ashley until Sept. 21 in Hall's office. He denied Ashley's evidence of getting $2.00 in the committee rooms from the witness. It was false. The same applied to Gates. Witness never at any time gave them money. He was told by Mr. Hall that two men who accused him of giving them money I would be at Mr. Hall's office on the night of Sept. 21st. When he went in he and Mr. Davidson sat in the outer office and could hear the conversation in the other room. Witness and Davidson were called into the inner office with the two Englishmen, Mr. Hall and Mr. Stratton. At that time Gates denied giving Mr. Moore any statement or affidavit. Ashley said for $200 he would sign an affidavit and pack his own trunk and get out on the midnight if necessary. Neither men, however, said at that time that they had received money from the witness. Again witness said he never saw Ashley before Sept 21st and did not know he even existed. Witness denied any row at the committee rooms. The previous evidence was false. He was in the room twice, but never alone. Witness never closed that little room door and he said that the system the Englishmen described was false. He never saw Alsept until he got in the witness box. Witness said he paid out no money in the committee rooms on election day to no one. He did not take any money out of his pocket and have it any place that day. All stories to the contrary were false. He was not introduced to anyone that day. Witness never saw Mark Harland before he gave evidence. He knew Sydney Pope as he was a gunner in the witness' battery since June of 1907. He did not see him on election day and to his knowledge Pope was not in the committee rooms. His evidence re the $2.00 was false. Witness did not know Butler and never saw him before. His statement is not correct and witness said Butler's evidence was false. Witness did not know any of the men who had given evidence and their stories was not correct. There was no money used improperly at the election.

To Mr. Du Vernet witness said he never swore while in the livery business. He contradicted the evidence of Morgan his driver, in several instances.

Mr. Watson at this point gave Mr. DuVernet some advice and Mr. DuVernet told Mr. Watson he did not wish to be interrupted. Mr. Watson replied that he was trying to assist "my learned friend." His Lordship replied "Mr. Du Vernet does not want any assistance."

According to the witness Morgan was wrong about the trip to north Monaghan as no stops were made. Witness had been asked several times for money but he told him there was none going. Witness swore that Pritchard's evidence about being in the little room with the witness alone was false. Banks came in the same class. He would not, however, swear to it. He would not swear that he did not call Banks into the room. Witness was in the little east room and he said there was no cardboard box in the room on election day. He paid no money and saw no money paid. He placed none on the table, never covered it over; never turned his back. Witness contradicted all the Englishmen who had given evidence and suggested as a reason for the perjuring themselves that they were hard up last fall and needed the money. Mr. Burnham offered for evidence.

Witness only took voters into the east room, but he swore that there was not 100 voters or 50 voters in that room with him. There might have been ten voters. Witness never handled a dollar directly or indirectly, or gave money or placed money on the table at the last election or any other election. No man ever got money from him. The previous witnesses were all wrong. He never hired anyone and never paid a dollar during the election. He saw Mr. Stratton when he got back from Monaghan but did not talk to him at all. He talked with Mr. Stratton about five minutes before he left for Monaghan. Witness paid no money to anyone in connection with the case.

JAMES JORDAN

James Jordan, an Irishman, was called and said he lived in the city and knew Arthur Alsept and saw him election day about 3.30, but did not speak to him. He saw Alsept at the Commercial Hotel, but had no conversation with him at any time.

To Mr. Du Vernet he said he did not get a cent. No man got a cent, he swore to it. He was at the Liberal the Liberal committee rooms. There was no money passed—far from it. He was never in Mr. Hall's office whatsoever. He was in the committee room to give his vote to the best man. He never signed a paper in his life but he know what a declaration meant. He said Alsept worked for him awhile and witness found he was not quite right in his head, and would not compare very favorably with himself (the witness). He got to the Liberal rooms at 4 o'clock and saw Mr. Leary there but Mr. Leary gave him no money whatsoever.

To his Lordship witness said he would not accept money. If Mr. Stratton offered it to him he would vote for the other man. He was an honest honorable laboring man.

Afternoon Evidence

R. M. GLOVER.

Mr. R. M. Glover was called. He said he knew Chas. Williams. He and W. S. Davidson went to see him on Chamberlain street. They saw him and had a talk with him about the charges. Mr. Davidson did the talking. Williams said there was nothing in the charges. In most particulars witness contradicted Williams' evidence.

To Mr. DuVernet witness said he was managing director of the Examiner. Mr. Stratton did not ask him to get declarations. He tried to get declarations. He had talked with Mr. Davidson as they were both in the same boat so far as the protest was concerned. Williams was never asked for a declaration. He took Ashley over to Mr. Davidson to make a declaration but he did not make one as Ashley wanted money, although personally he heard nothing mentioned of money.

THOS. M. HUNTER.

Mr. Thos. M. Hunter was called by Mr. Watson and he said he lived in North Monaghan and was a farmer. On election day he was deputy returning officer at May's school house. Mr. Leary came there in the

Is Keeping His Eye on Peterborough

Toronto, Oct. 1.—The hearing of the election petition in the court room at Peterborough may not be the only court proceedings in connection with the events of last October.

Whatever the result of the evidence that is being given in the investigation before Judges Mahon and Magee, it is not unlikely that if the circumstances are considered to warrant it the attorney-general, as guardian of the laws of the Province, may stretch out his arm to apprehend such parties as may have given indications of corrupt practices. Already a precedent has been established in the London bribery trial, which took place in this city a couple of years ago.

It is understood that the attorney general is keeping in touch with the evidence that is being heard in the Peterborough court room with a view to some action later if is believed that such is warranted. This, it may be concluded, may not be limited to acts of corruption during the election, but may also take in cases of perjury in connection with the election trial itself.

Germany's Act Causes Much Alarm in France

Paris, Oct. 1.—All France, but particularly the foreign office, is alarmed by the attitude of the German Government toward Alsace and Lorraine, where the German garrisons were today increased from 81,000 to 85,000 men. Since 1890 the German army josts in these frontier provinces have been enlarged, and quota of men increased until the French have come to look upon this new increase as unreasonable and indicative of German apprehension.

When the Franco-Prussian war closed, Germany left only 32,250 men in Alsace-Lorraine, but in 1890 the number had increased to 67,250; in 1905 it rose to 81,000, and today an extra detachment of four thousand men reported for duty in the various garrisons.

Mr. P. J. Scollard Gets Mail Route Contract

Mr. P. J. Scollard who has secured the contract of delivering his Majesty's mail between Peterborough and Ennismore for the next four years, commenced his duties yesterday. The courier will be Mr. J. P. Flood, who will attend to the rural mail delivery along the route and the attending duties in connection with the Ennismore, Bridgenorth and Peterborough post offices. The stage will, as heretofore be run in conjunction with the mail and prospective passengers are reminded of the fact that the hour of leaving Peterborough for Ennismore every day is two o'clock.

Freight will also be carried. It will be the endeavor of Mr. Scollard to give every satisfaction to his patrons and Mr. Flood, who is mail courier is thoroughly competent and trustworthy, and an efficient stage service is promised.

Stomach troubles would more quickly disappear if the idea of treating the cause, rather than the effect, would come into practice. A tiny, inside, hidden nerve, says Dr. Shoop, governs and gives strength to the stomach. A branch also goes to the Heart, and one to the Kidneys. When these "inside nerves" fail, then the organs must falter. Dr. Shoop's Restorative is directed specifically to these failing nerves. Within 48 hours after starting the Restorative treatment patients say they realize a gain. Sold by all dealers.

R. H. Sheppard was Arrested on Two Charges of Perjury

Information Laid by Wm. A. Brundrette and J. G. M. Wilson as a Result of Sheppard's Evidenc at Election Protest Trial

Robert H. Sheppard is the first man to be arrested as a result of the West Peterborough election protest trial. He was placed behind the bars last night about six o'clock. There are two charges of perjury against him as a result of the evidence he gave before Justice McMahon and McGee. The information was sworn out by Mr. William Arthur Brundrette and Mr. John G. M. Wilson. The warrants were drawn by County Crown Attorney R. E. Weed, K.C., and placed in the hands of the police who took charge of Sheppard.

The news of Sheppard's arrest spread rapidly last night and quite a sensation was created. Sheppard will appear before Magistrate Dumble this morning for his preliminary hearing.

Application for bail was made and was granted. The sum required was $1,000 in two sureties of $500 each. Mr. R. R. Hall is one surety and Sheppard is the other.

THE CHARGES.

The particulars of the charges are as follows:—

The information is that Robert H. Sheppard, was duly sworn as a witness on behalf of the petitioner, in the Burnham vs. Stratton election trial and then and there upon his oath aforesaid did falsely, wilfully and corruptly upon his oath aforesaid in substance and to the effect the following, that is to say; That he, Robt. H. Sheppard, had been engaged or employed by James Kendry, John G. M. Wilson and the said Wm. A. Brundrette, to go into the Liberal Committee rooms during an election which took place for the purpose of electing a member of the House of Commons to represent the Riding of West Peterborough, under false pretences and to set a false part whereas in truth and in fact the said Robert Sheppard never was employed by the said James Kendry, John G. M. Wilson and Wm. A. Brundrette for the purposes aforesaid, nor for any other purpose at any time whereby the said Robert H. Sheppard did then and there commit wilful and corrupt perjury contrary to the provisions of the criminal code.

The above information was sworn to by William Arthur Brundrette, as a result of the said Robert H. Sheppard's evidence at the West Peterborough election protest trial before Justices McMahon and McGee.

SECOND CHARGE.

A second charge is issued against Robert H. Sheppard by John G. M. Wilson of perjury in the West Peterborough election trial. The information is that the said Sheppard swore falsely and wilfully when he said that he had been engaged by the complainant and James Kendry to pretend to be a supporter of James Stratton and to work in his committee rooms and to sit on his committeeman and to get all the information that he could and to supply such information to the said Wilson and Roland M. Waddell. The complainant states that no arrangement or engagement was made between Sheppard and Kendry or between any of them on the said 20th day of September nor at any time.

SUCCESSFUL RALLY

Held at the Y.W.C.A. Rooms Last Night.

The opening rally of the Y.W.C.A. was held last night and proved to be to be exceedingly interesting and successful. The affair took the form of a social evening and an excellent program was rendered, although the real object was to organize for the season.

The attendance was very large and the gathering included many prominent ladies and gentlemen of the city who are supporting the work of the institution. That a greater interest is being manifested in the Y.W.C.A. is a fact of which there is evidence on all sides and the coming season gives promise of being the greatest on record.

The rooms of the Y.W.C.A. were very prettily decorated for the occasion with autumn leaves, etc., and the effect was pleasing and credit is due the young ladies in charge. The thanks of the association is also extended to those who assisted in the following program;—

Chairman—Inspector Mowatt.
Instrumental—Miss Burnette.
Vocal Solo—Miss Edna Pringle.
Reading—Mrs. Briasell.
Vocal Solo—Mrs. Dixon Hall.
Violin Selection—Miss J. Choate.
Piano Solo—Miss Jean Hill.

After the program dainty refreshments were served and a thoroughly enjoyable evening was brought to a close.

Doctors Condemn Oily Liniments

The Public are Warned to be Careful of These Strong-Smelling Oily Liniments Containing Acids, Ammonia, Etc.

Many people have clung to the old-fashioned idea that a thick, greasy liniment is the best kind. Doctors say not — and they know.

Recently a number of these white, oily liniments were analyzed, and they were found to contain an enormously high percentage of harmful acids, and such irritating chemicals as ammonia, etc. For the moment they may cause a warm sensation when first applied, but their continued use never cures rheumatism, and only deteriorates the skin, sets up inflammation and causes endless trouble.

When a doctor warns you to quit using a white, oily liniment—do so. He knows that a thick liniment can't penetrate, can't sink through the pores and reach the seat of the pain.

When asked his opinion a few days ago, Dr. Roberts stated that he considered a strong, penetrating, pain-subduing liniment, such as "Nerviline," to be superior to any of the white ammonia liniments. In his twenty-five years of practice he had witnessed cases of rheumatism, sciatica and lumbago that simply would not respond to ordinary treatment —but Nerviline cured them. The same physician also spoke of the great advantages of keeping a preparation like Nerviline in the house always, because of cramps, diarrhoea, stomach disorders, earache, toothache, headache and such minor ailments. Nerviline is a first-class cure. There is scarcely an ache or a pain, internal or external, that Nerviline won't cure. In thousands of homes no other pain-relieving medicine is used. Fifty years' continued success and the endorsement of the profession are proof that Nerviline is the liniment for the home.

Any good druggist or dealer can supply the large 25c. bottles of Nerviline. 13

BOTH WIVES DEAD.

Sarnia Clergyman Causes Death of Two Women.

London, Sept. 30.—Mrs. Margaret Price Evans, wife of a clergyman, shot herself today at Penwylt, her native place, which she was visiting after an absence of twenty years. Her husband is the Rev. E. T. Evans, formerly of Llandovery, Carmarthenshire, but was living in the United States.

The woman was found in her room, and at her side was a revolver, two chambers of which had been discharged. Mrs. Evans had been depressed of late.

THE CANADIAN VICTIM.

Sarnia, Ont., Sept. 30.—Rev. Even T. Evans, whose wife is reported to have committed suicide at Penwylt, Wales, came to Sarnia three years ago, from Wales, as rector of St. John's Episcopal Church, in the south-end of the town. He was an energetic administrator, and the new St. John's church was built by him. Shortly after his arrival his wife and family joined him. A little over a year ago his attentions to some of the female members of his congregation excited considerable comment, and his wife a year ago left him returning to Wales. A few days after her departure Evans disappeared with a woman named Nellie Davis, forty years old, who had been a clerk in the registry office and a members of the church choir. Evans told Miss Davis that he had secured a divorce from his wife, and the pair were married by the Episcopal minister at Niagara Falls, N.Y., they then went to New York. Miss Davis had several hundred dollars, which she took with her, and this Evans borrowed a month after the marriage and deserted her. She was brought back to Sarnia by her mother and sister, and died in the hospital here a month later. There was a strong impression that she committed suicide. Evans left his financial affairs here in very bad shape. Since his departure there have been several rumors as to his location, but no definite word has been received about him.

Physicians Who Know Recommend Algonquin Park.

Many people have chosen resorts by the sea for their vacation this summer, others the mountains, and many the inland waters of the "Highlands of Ontario" for that much needed rest that one should take at least once every twelve months. In many cases the desired haven was found, but in others, the more fashionable resorts did not give the restful quiet which in most cases is needed and good accomplished. There is one return to the cities with only half the pleas, however, while others multiply ed inducements to those whose health is run down, or those who are in need of relaxation from worry and work. This place is known as the Algonquin National Park of Ontario, situated 205 miles north of the City of Toronto and 168 miles west of Ottawa. Here the conditions are ideal. The altitude at the Park station, your objective point is 1760 feet above the sea level. The "Highland Inn," built for the accomodation of 100 people on a bluff overlooking Cache Lake, is a comfortable hotel set on one of the beauty spots of this charming reserve.

Modern with bathrooms with hot and cold water, large, bright sleeping rooms, cosy lounging rooms with large, bright open fire places, are a few of the special features. The Inn is also heated by furnaces.

The months of October and November are ideal in this locality and a sojorn there is recommended.

For further particulars, descriptive literature, maps, etc., apply to J. D. McDonald, Union Station, Toronto, Ont.

A large shipment of new toys and games have arrived and are now being opened up at Times Bookstore. Give us an early call. Prices start at 5c.

Talents Fostered

Often Turned Wrong Course

By JOHN A. ROWLAND.

SOME time ago an acquaintance of mine, who finds pastime in looking a little into sociological conditions, expressed it as his opinion that educational institutions, for the masses at least, do not go far enough in the work of equipping the young man for his occupation in the world.

Why should not the schools, colleges and universities—perhaps even the state itself—establish a commission which should examine the student body on practical lines and give to the individual student its best opinion as to the line of work for which he is best fitted? Thousands of young men fail, not because of incompetent bodies and brains, but because of misdirected ambitions. They are the round pegs in the square holes.

Probably a thousand reasons could be advanced to show how and why such a commission inevitably would fail of such a purpose. Under an absolute monarchy, where government asserted absolute ownership of its citizens, the idea might be carried out—and fail. But under democratic government, where the individual citizen is slow to yield his individuality in any degree, even to the public good, such a commission might sit for ten years without having an applicant upon which to pass its constituted judgment; and after that lone applicant had received this judgment, the chances are that between himself and advisory friends the findings would be disregarded.

A fact too little regarded to-day is that our complex civilization is such as to discourage talent and genius as it never before was discouraged.

When a young man has had four years of college work, he is eligible for matriculation in a medical school of standing. After which, according to estimates, it will cost him $1,000 to $1,500 to acquire his medical degree.

Do you see where the scheme of my friend would fall in this instance? Suppose that in the grammar grades of a public school some boy were discovered who showed unmistakable evidences of genius in surgery. What would it avail that boy if he were one of four or five children in a family of a father who drew a salary of $30 a week? There are a hundred chances to one that instead of ever becoming a noted surgeon, that boy will gravitate from the eighth grade in grammar school to the position of driver for a grocer's wagon.

Follow your bent if you can! Take no one—not ten—negatives for final answer! But if, in the face of the inevitable, you are forced to accept the next best thing, honest earnestness must bring its compensations.

A New Use for the Genus Cat

By HARRIS DICKSON

At the end of a winding and climbing red road, an old red brick house clung to the Alleghany mountains. A slashing scar of red against the green—that was Chestnut Crag. The house here had a different flavor; the apples had a peculiar fragrance; the musty old library could have existed nowhere save in Virginia. In truth, the Sinclaire lived only ten miles from the University of Virginia; and Monticello, the home of Thomas Jefferson, was on their road to town.

The quaint, pre-revolutionary house had got an absent-minded start. Its builder provided parlors and dining room, library and guest chambers—but forgot a staircase. "Oh, well," he said, "it doesn't matter; we'll cut off a piece of the hall and a corner of the library." This he did, and ran a sort of stepladder to the upper floor.

Ever since that day the people in Chestnut Crag have been forgetting things and losing things. In the bosom of the family they call themselves the "Ju-cos."

At one end of the colonial dining room is an alcove for the sedate and richly carved sideboard; to the left is a linen closet; to the right a silver closet, both opening inward to the sideboard. These doors were kept locked, and those keys were lost. Once a week Mrs. "Ju-cos" went to town for a locksmith to come and open her silver closet. "Well," said Katherine Ju-cos, "there is just one thing about this house that doesn't get lost; that's old Tom." The big gray cat always sat in the corner of the fireplace. She tied the keys around his neck. So whenever the Ju-cos wanted silver or linen, old Tom was there with the keys.

Moral of the Cash Register

By JOSEPH G. ROGERS

In the small office where retail sales across the counter were a part of the clerk's business there once dwelt an original cash register. Daily this register showed different results, sometimes being short and sometimes being way over.

The sales made were small, seldom averaging more than eight cents to the customer, and when some picturesque person invested in 25 cents' worth of goods it was noted as a large sale. The necessity of handling pennies and making small change for nearly every purchaser may have accounted for the original trend of the register. There was, however, no suspicion of dishonesty because the machine about balanced month in and month out. The amount of the shortage when it was short was too small to tempt a thief, and the only explanation was that in the hurry and bustle of waiting on a number of customers at once, with a number of different clerks "ringing up" on the register, mistakes were frequently made.

After several months of this "high and low and closing quotations" on the part of the register the proprietor became extremely angry. Shouting that it was a shame that his clerks couldn't handle a simple thing like a cash register, he declared that he would look after it himself, just to show them how it should be handled.

No one else touched it. As was to be expected—by every one but himself—at the end of the first day the machine was $1.68 shy, and at the end of the second day 86 cents over, and at the end of the fourth day the proprietor gave it up in disgust.

With this test as proof the proprietor now declares that where a number of small sales are handled in a hurry, and where the clerk must sell the goods and handle the register one man, no matter how faithfully he works, may make frequent errors.

IF SICK--WHY PAY

Unless Health First Returns.

Here is what should and can be done!

Now you would not willingly pay for food that was worthless—would you?

Then why pay for medicine until that medicine first proves to you its actual worth?

Positively knowing what Dr. Sheep's Restorative can do for the sick, I say to all: "don't pay unless health first returns." And I back my assertion with a signed cash refund 30 day offer. No risk. No red tape.

I especially invite to the sick everywhere those "Dr. Sheep's Restorative is absolutely free if it fails". Let others do the same or else pass their prescriptions by.

If you need more strength, more vitality, more vigor or more vim, use my Restorative a few days and note the increase in improvement.

When the digestive organs are weak, or the nerves go wrong, then but Dr Sheep's Restorative. It will make the stomach and intestines the heart of Kidneys, for that is wrong. You see I cast away those ancient ideas in medicine. They books believe will beat half you have I am overstating.

These books also tell of a tiny hidden "the abdominal," no larger than a fifteen thousandth. They tell how that nerve, until it fails, extremely close to the Heart in power, its cause, its nerve-shaking action or impulse.

These books will open up new and helpful ideas to those who are not well. They tell how the Stomach, and Kidneys each have their "double" or power nerves. They tell how the Heart was especially made to reach and revitalize these weak or failing inside nerves. All of these facts tell why I am able to say: "It is free if it fails".

This is why I say "take no chances on a medicine whose maker dare not back it just as I do by this remarkable offer".

So write me today for the order.

I have appointed honest and responsible druggists in nearly every community to form my medicine to the sick.

But write me first for the order.

All druggists sell Dr Sheep's Restorative, but all are not authorized to give the 30 day test.

So drop me a line instead—and thus avoid disappointment and delays. Tell me also which book you need.

A postal will do.

Besides, you are free to consult me as you would your home physician. My advice and the book below are yours—and without cost.

Perhaps a word or two from me will clear up some serious ailment. I have helped thousands upon thousands by my private prescriptions or personal advice plan. My best effort is ready worth [illegible] Restorative. So write now while you have it fresh in mind, for tomorrow never comes. Dr. Sheep, Box 12 Racine, Wis.

QUINQUENNIAL ECHOES.

Toronto Ladies Still Talk of Their Strong-Minded Guests.

If the half were to be printed of what is being told about delegates to the Quinquennial Council in Toronto that town would not contain the writing thereof. There were adequate daily reports as to how the council occupied its business hours, but the private lives of its members while there is a subject which has been left to gossip, and some funny stories are passing currency.

Some of the European visitors stopped at other points on their way to Toronto, and it is said that a Montreal family, returning to the city for a brief sojourn in their town house in preparation for their visit to the city, learned entirely to their surprise, a [illegible] delegate to the council occupying their house, and housing their servants. They deprecated [illegible] arrival during their absence and the upset condition of the house, and assured her of their complete surprise. But their guest considered her involuntary entertainment with the assurance of the great comfort of her entertainment, and her intention to remain until it was time to move on. Meeting later on in Toronto, the German lady was equally candid in informing the Montreal people that she was not being half so well entertained in the Queen City.

There is an old cricket story, which saw the light in the times when cricket matches never extended into the second day, about some Englishmen exiled to France, who desired to alleviate their homesickness by indulgence in the national game. They secured a free lease from a wealthy landowner near the town of a pasture portion of his pasture, and soon came to find so much pleasure that their secretary wrote their benefactor representing him to remove his cow from their cricket field. Some of the delegates must have come descended from these old cricketers.

A Toronto lady who bears a foreign name, but yields in loyal British sentiment to no one in the Empire, was called upon to entertain a lady friend over the week end one daughter. The expected guest seized the privilege of bringing another daughter, and unexpectedly turned up with three daughters and a maid. No doubt the hospitable hostess, who has never wilted under the hardships of nymed times, began to understand why the quartering of soldiers used to be supported, and has ceased to be controversy, especially when her enterprising guests turned her out of her own room.

Niagara's Age.

According to Mr. Spencer, of the Canadian Geological Survey, the great spectacle of Niagara Falls, as we see it to-day, has been about 32,000 years in the making. Mr. Spencer, in common with other geologists who have studied Niagara, believes that originally the cataract fell into Lake Ontario over three steps, or platforms, the first being 35 feet high, and the third being at or near the edge of the lake proper, instead of seven miles back up the river as at present. It took the stream 25,000 years to hollow out the first three miles of the gorge, and only 7,000 years for the other four miles. The difference of time in these two stages of the erosion, and of the subsequent recession of seven miles, is to be explained on the theory of a sudden and enormous increase of the volume of water, caused by volcanic disturbances, or earthquake.

Formerly the Niagara River carried an outlet to Lake Erie only. After the upheaval, the waters of Lakes Huron, Michigan, and Superior, which previously had debouched directly into Lake Ontario, were diverted into Lake Erie into the Niagara River, swelling that stream to six times its former volume. Mr. Spencer's figures, of course, can be taken only approximately, as even contemporary children see fit to variance as to how the Falls of Niagara have receded during the past fifty years—some estimates making it 1.33 metres per annum, others 1.83. Moreover, while the U.S. Geological Survey declares that the rate of recession of the Falls has increased during the last fifteen years, the corresponding Canadian official report shows that the rate has decreased some 66 centimetres per annum.

Elevators and Flour Mills.

The Department of the Interior has recently issued a map of that part of Canada lying west of the Great Lakes, showing the positions of grain elevators and flour and oatmeal mills, together with tables showing their individual and collective capacity. In the three provinces of Manitoba, Alberta, and Saskatchewan there are 320 grain elevators, with an aggregate capacity of 43,885,400 bushels. The terminal elevators at Lake Superior ports have a capacity of 23,325,700 bushels, and there are also transfer elevators at eastern points with a capacity of 24,625,000 bushels. Thus the total elevator capacity of Western Canada amounts to 91,836,100 bushels. Manitoba has 39 flour and oatmeal mills, with a daily capacity of 17,425 barrels; Saskatchewan has 23 mills, with a possible daily output of 3,225 barrels; while Alberta has 17 mills, with a possible daily output of 1,375 barrels.

Delicately Put.

"The first day out was perfectly lovely," said the young lady just back from abroad. "The water was as smooth as glass, and it was simply gorgeous. But the second day was rough" and—er—decidedly disgorgeous."

Sir Wilfrid and Family Prayer.

The death of Rev. Dr. Williams of Montreal, recently, recalls a circumstance that concerns Sir Wilfrid Laurier, and that is vouched for by a prominent public man of Toronto, says a religious exchange.

Mrs. Wilfrid was a daughter of Mr. Murray of Quebec, one of the old Puritan stock. Up to the age of eighteen Wilfrid Laurier could not speak a word of English, and he went to live in the home of Mr. Murray for the purpose of learning English. It was Mr. Murray's habit to read a portion of Scripture and have family prayer every morning, and the French-Canadian boy was told that he might remain during these devotions if he wished to. He did so, and was a member of the family circle for about four years.

After he had become distinguished in the public affairs of the Dominion, a friend who knew of his association with the family of Mr. Murray, asked him what effect it had on him, and his answer was at once an honest appreciation of good living and a tribute to principle. Said Sir Wilfrid:

"The sterling integrity of character and uprightness of life displayed in the home of Mr. Murray made such an impression upon me that I will never forget it as long as I live."

FIGHTING FEVERS.

Why Vigorous Measures Are Necessary In Cases of Sunstroke.

A clinical thermometer is probably as matter of course a household convenience in most families as is a stepladder or a broom, and it is well that its use and the general significance of its disclosures should be understood by those in authority, but fussiness and constant resort to it and continual discussion of temperatures are to be deplored.

The old-fashioned way of placing the hand upon the child's body and announcing that it felt feverish or had a fever without any regard to mathematical accuracy as to degrees and fractions worked just as well as, perhaps better than, the new fashioned way carried to a nervous extreme. At the same time a rise of temperature always means something, and it most decidedly means the calling in of a physician if it does not go down of itself or yield to simple remedies.

When the temperature is taken by the mouth the thermometer should register about 98.7 degrees, although this may vary at different times during the day in perfectly well people. When it registers 99 degrees or 99.5 degrees the person is said to be feverish. Anything below 98 degrees is subnormal, and anything over 105 degrees is called hyperpyrexia, or high fever.

In many cases fevers are a sort of blessing in disguise. These are the fevers caused by the toxins of bacteria, of which typhoid is a type. The whole system is then engaged in a fight against the germs, and the battle is waged to more advantage apparently when "the blood is fighting hot." This is why, although the fever can be beaten down by the application of cold and the administration of drugs, it is often poor practice to suppress it in this way. Getting the fever down may be a momentary satisfaction, but it does nothing to help cure the underlying cause. It is as if a general should insist upon silencing his own guns.

At the same time the fever must be watched and kept in check, because this sort of fight is calling for an immense outlay from the system, and a raging fever not only burns up bacteria, but it feeds upon tissue and blood and all it can find, as any one can testify who has watched or lived through a convalescence from one.

What is true of the fever of a germ disease is false altogether in the fever of sunstroke. In this case the fever is the disease. It is not a regiment of infantry, but a conflagration, and it must be put out as quickly as possible and by all the means at one's disposal—cold baths, ice packs, ice water, anything that will beat it down.

The character of a fever is a great assistance to diagnosis in many cases, and this is why a physician should always be asked to sit in judgment on it.

Five Stages of the Sword.

It may be said that the evolution of the sword has passed through five distinct stages. First came the epoch of pure carnage, when men seemed to love and hack each other for the mere pleasure it gave them; next the era of legend, when stupendous and impossible feats of arms were said to have been accomplished. Then followed the feudal time, a curious mixture of bloodshed and religion, when the piety of the crusaders was pushed by their ability to slash the equally bloodthirsty Saracens. Succeeding this period sprang the noble season of skillful fence as the sword, no longer a weapon of pure attack, became a mixed arm of offence and defence combined. Finally we see its fall, being to-day a mere military accoutrement, after attaining a glory that no one dreamed of during the days of its first rude and barbarous use.

Cause for Thanksgiving.

One fine summer night the whole village was disturbed in its slumbers by the deep tones of Nasreddin giving praise and thanks unto Allah. "What hath befallen thee, O Nasreddin," they inquired, "that at this hour of the night thou doth give praise and thanks until Almighty Allah?"

"As I lay half sleeping on my divan,' replied the hodja, "I looked up and suddenly beheld a white thing flapping by this window. This must be a ghost or jinn or some other evil spirit sent by Shaitan to torment true believers, methought, so I seized my bow and drove an arrow through it. I forthwith arose, and, behold it was no jinn, but my own shirt which the arrow had transfixed. Wherefore do ye see me giving just praise."

Hats Were Once a Luxury.

In the reign of Elizabeth the wearing of hats was considered a sign of luxury. By an act of parliament every person above the age of seven years and under a certain degree was obliged on Sundays and holidays to wear a woolen cap made in England and finished by some of the fraternity of cappers.

Governor's Son as Boy Scout.

Roderick Dudley, son of the Governor-General of Australia, has joined the Boy Scouts, and has, says The British Australasian, qualified in Sydney and received his uniform. One of the rules provides that the Scouts shall record at least one good action every day, and as "cleaning up the back yard" at their homes is the popular good deed, the lad's fellow members are somewhat curious to see what good action he will report.

A Canadian Cantatrice.

Mrs. Cecil Edwardes, whose appearances in grand opera at Covent Garden this season have brought her much praise, is sister-in-law to Lord Kensington. She is a British Columbian; studied under Jean de Reszke; and made her first public appearance as a singer in oratorio.

Go to the blood, if you are to drive out Rheumatism. A Wisconsin physician, Dr. Shoop, does this with his Rheumatic Remedy—and with seeming success. Rub-ons, says the doctor never did cure Rheumatism. It is more than skin deep—it is constitutional, always. Because of this principle, Dr. Shoop's Rheumatic Remedy is perhaps the most popular in existence. It goes by word of mouth from one to another, everywhere. Grateful patients gladly spread results. It is an act of humanity, to tell the sick of a way to health. Tell some sick one. Sold by all druggists.

STUDYING ESQUIMAUX.

Government Will Make Further Investigations In North.

The Canadian Geological Survey, under the late Dr. G. M. Dawson, gathered from time to time a large amount of interesting and valuable information regarding the native races. Since the death of Dr. Dawson this portion of the work of the department has been allowed to languish, but this year a fresh start was made in a direction which cannot but prove to be of great historical and ethnological interest, as well as being of particular value in allowing the people of Canada to become better acquainted with their fellow citizens who occupy the vast frozen territory which forms our northern boundary.

The present subject of ethnological research by the department is the Esquimaux race; and it is deemed especially desirable that this work should be resumed amongst them just now, because their habits are rapidly changing and becoming more difficult for scientific study, as the white man penetrates the Far North.

The Esquimaux is perhaps by his natural gifts the most admirable of the native races of Canada. There are no more intelligent and kindly people than the Esquimaux of Northern Canada, and none that so readily respond to courtesy and good will; and yet they are probably the most misunderstood and misrepresented of all native races. The expedition which was fitted out last year for the study of the Esquimaux consists of Mr. V. Stefansson and Dr. R. M. Anderson. The undertaking is by no means a new task to Mr. Stefansson, as it is the second of a series of journeys he has planned to carry out within the next fifteen years, during which period he hopes to visit and study every Esquimaux settlement from East Cape, Siberia, to the east coast of Greenland and the shores of of Labrador.

The present journey is planned to cover two years, one of which Mr. Stefansson expects to spend between Cape Brown and Baillarge Inlet, Canada, the other on the Colville river, Alaska. He believes that near the mouth of the [illegible] there is a group of Esquimaux who have never seen a white man; these he desires to study while as yet they are uncontaminated by white influence, and before "civilized" ways change their system of living.

Dynamited by Dog.

The news of a very remarkable accident at a mining camp at Hanging Stone Lake, near Gowganda, by which one man was killed and two injured, was brought to Montreal recently by Frederick Dunn, a resident of St. Johns, Quebec, who accompanied from Northern Ontario the remains of Andrew Dunn, the principal victim, for interment at his old home just outside that city.

Andrew Dunn and companions were dynamitting a vein. The fuse was ignited and the men ran, followed by Dunn's collie dog, which picked up the dynamite stick in his teeth. The explosion came just as the dog reached the cabin and dropped the explosive.

Dunn was killed almost instantly, his skull being fractured in two places, and one of his arms and two ribs being broken. One of the other men, Sims, was stunned and badly cut about the neck, while the other miner, Hesbett, escaped with a few bruises. The dog, which was the cause of the disaster, bounded away and escaped injury.

A Man of Weight.

People in many Ontario towns know Mr. Holland, of Whitby, who has done excellent work as grand organizer of the Sons of Temperance. Mr. Holland is a big man—not only big in achievement, but big in person. He related on one of his tours how he had gone into a certain place to be weighed, but as the scales went up to only two hundred and fifty pounds, he could not proceed.

One time he went to the little village of Port Robinson, where the lodge was presided over by a dusky but droll Worthy Patriarch. After the customary preliminaries Mr. Holland was admitted, and as he made his ponderous way to the platform the halting Worthy Patriarch remarked dryly:

"Well! they told me Holland was coming, but I think it's all of Holland and part of Belgium."

She Didn't Go Back.

Miss Agnes Laut, whose address on "yellow journals" and how they may be got rid of, created much a stir at the International Congress of Women, has ever been noted as one with views of her own and with a courage of her convictions. In Winnipeg she is remembered as a delicate girl with definite opinions and an independent spirit that entirely belied her looks.

When Miss Laut left Winnipeg to try her fate in the big world of journalism and literature, there were not wanting those who predicted that she would soon be back at her desk in The Free Press office. Her first work was the reporting of the meetings of the Joint High Commission in Quebec, and in this she succeeded in a way that rushed her work with that of the ablest Ottawa and Washington correspondents. From that time her rise has been steady, and though she has several times visited Winnipeg, she has evinced no tendency to enter her old desk.

The Moose.

The moose is the largest animal now existing of the deer family, standing often as high as six feet, and sometime weighing 1,200 pounds; but notwithstanding its great size, it is very fleet of foot. When brought to bay, a blow with its fore foot or horns is a very serious matter for the huntsman. Often when pursued by man they have their intelligence to thank for their escape, for sometimes, if closely followed, they double in their tracks and stand motionless in some thicket until the hunter has slipped by, when they quickly glide away. At other times they make such a commotion as to unnerve any but an experienced hunter, and thus escape.

A Sisley Story.

Stories of Lord Roberts are perhaps more numerous than authentic. Here is one which may or may not be authentic, but is certainly amusing. The Commander-in-Chief was watching the firing at Bisley, and noticed two or three mistakes on the part of the markers. So he went to the telephone and rang up the officer in charge. "The marking is very bad," he observed. "It's the best you'll get," retorted the officer. "Do you know who I am?" sternly demanded Lord Roberts. "No, I don't." "I'm Lord Roberts." "Well, I'm Lord Wolseley." Lord Roberts loves a joke, but how he took this one history does not record.

Queen Victoria's Journals.

Lord Escher has been giving some interesting particulars of Queen Victoria's journals. There are said to be over 100 volumes of them, all written closely in a small running hand. The last entry is dictated and was added just ten days before the Queen died. The journals, it is said, will never be seen hereafter in their complete form.

Bernard Shaw's Next Play.

Bernard Shaw has written another play since "The Showing Up of Blanco Posnet," says The Nation. It is entitled "Press Cuttings, Compiled From the Correspondence and Editorial Columns of the Daily Press," and consists of an ironical discussion of woman's suffrage and universal military service.

England's Oldest Barber Dead.

Allen Batchelor of Guildford, England, who was reputed to be England's oldest barber, died recently at the age of 88. He claimed to have been patronized by kings, dukes, bishops, judges, policemen, politicians, publicans, "and sinners no end."

The Time to Save.

As a general rule the question whether a man's career is to spell success or failure is settled between the ages of thirty and forty-five.

If a man cannot attain prosperity at forty his chances after that age are remote.

At fifty the sensible man plays for safety rather than for high stakes, for after that age not one man in five thousand can recover his financial position if he should cease a cropper.

At sixty 95 per cent. are either dependent upon their daily earnings or upon their relatives.

It is evident, therefore, that no man should put off saving for old age after he has passed his fortieth birthday.

Clever People Who Can't See.

The history of the past assures us that there are few, if any, departments of human knowledge in which the blind have not distinguished theselves, says The War Cry.

Two of the world's greatest poets—Homer and Milton—were sightless; while Dr. Saunderson, once professor of mathematics in the University of Cambridge, lost his eyesight when twelve months old, but, although his parents were poor, he advanced so greatly in knowledge that he became an expert Greek scholar.

Then, John Metcalfe, of Knaresborough, another blind man, became a champion swimmer, a musician, and an engineer, who distinguished himself in building bridges and making roads.

There still exists, we believe, a monument to the memory of Dr. Hugh James, the blind physician of Carlisle; while in Birmingham there is a blind man who cleans and repairs clocks, and has even constructed new ones.

In Search of Coal.

A party of prospectors has left Prince Albert on a six months' trip to the country lying between Isle la Crosse and Athabasca Lake. They have been sent out by the Lands branch of the Canadian Department of the Interior, and will work their way across to Fort McMurray by water, and return by dog trains. The object of the expedition is to discover definitely what coal deposits are in the north, and to find further outcrops which the Indians report to have found from time to time.

Indian Skeleon Found.

While workmen were digging clay in a brickyard in St. Boniface, Man., the other day they unearthed a skeleton of an old Indian in perfect condition. Upon his breast was a peculiarly shaped little cup, which had been filled with hazel nuts.

HOT-FOOT AFTER KINGSTON'S CHINESE LAUNDRYMEN

Attempt to Create Sympathy for the Almond-Eyed Alien is Stiffening the Backs of Kingston's Aldermen

(From the September number of the Canadian Laundryman Published at Peterborough, Ont.)

The columns of The Laundryman for September were practically filled when the laundry tax, once more came up before the Kingston City Council, and we felt it our duty to give our readers the results of the Chinks' fight against the tax to date. To avoid being prolix on a question already dealt with editorially in this issue we will refer our readers to the Kingston Standard's report of the latest action taken by the Limestone city's municipal fathers re the laundry tax, which will be found below. Still, The Laundryman cannot let the opportunity pass of expressing its unqualified gratification that the slant-eyed aliens' fight against the tax, instead of gaining support, is apparently creating stronger opposition than ever amongst the powers that be to modifying the law to satisfy the Chinese. Both the Canadian and American public are manifesting considerable interest in the little fight at Kingston, more so than we can find room to refer to in this journal, and we are assured that The Laundryman is not unduly optimistic in asserting that Kingston is destined to be the pioneer municipality of similar laundry tax by laws commensurate with the requirements for every city and town in Canada. Kingston's white laundrymen have paid, and are evidently willing to pay, the $50 tax, then why should Ald. Kent introduce a by-law to repeal the measure and encourage the Chinese in their characteristic avoidance of most of the white man's conceptions of what is just and beneficial, morally nationally, sanitary and monetary? It seems to us quite evident that should the by-law in question be repealed, most people will infer that the Aldermen supporting such action are either deplorably weak-kneed or lend their ears more readily to the demands of almond-eyed aliens than to the needs of their brother citizens. The Laundryman moves, seconded by all white launderers, that Ald. Kent's by-law in question be given 99 years' hoist.

THE COUNCIL MEETING

Here is the Kingston Standard's report :—

The laundry tax is once more before the City Council. At last night's meeting a by-law was introduced by Ald. Kent to repeal entirely the requirement to pay a fee of $25 on a transfer of the license from one premises to another, and to reduce the license fee from $50 to a sum to be fixed by Council. Ald. Kent moved that rule 31 be suspended and that the Council go into a committee of the whole on the second reading of the by-law. It requires a two-thirds vote of Council to secure the suspension of this rule, and on the division taken on Ald Kent's motion nine yeas were recorded and twelve nays. Consequently the second reading of the by-law was not proceeded with. The division was as follows :

Yeas—Mayor Cooper, Angrove, Graham, Hoag, Kent, McCartney, Nickle, Rigney, Robertson—9.

Nays—Ald. Carson, Chown, Craig, Clagston, Elliott, Free, Givens, Harvey, McCann, McKay, Toye, Tweddell —12.

It was pointed out that the second reading of the by-law could be taken up at the next Council meeting, and Ald. Graham suggested that in the meantime Council suspend proceedings against those who had not yet paid the tax.

Ald. Elliott thought that it would not be legal to do this. The laundry tax was now law, and he questioned whether Council had any business to hold up the law.

Ald. Nickle said that while Ald. Elliott was technically right, nevertheless it would be more courteous not to enforce the by-law until the matter was finally disposed of.

The majority of Council seemed to take this view, and on the assurance of the Mayor, that he would endeavor to have the by-law suspended until final action of Council, the matter was dropped until next Council meeting.

'Ald. Angrove asked if it was true that certain laundrymen had offered to pay their tax but were advised by the city's officials not to do so as the tax was likely to be reduced.

Mayor Cooper replied that he was not aware of any such case. Certainly no officials had been instructed to issue any such advice.

A letter was read from Kung Choo, Chinese consulgeneral at Ottawa, a regard to the tax on laundries. The writer considered that the tax was adopted on the basis of a very selfish policy, and continued as follows in his quaint phraseology :—

"Allow me to state to you that I am not disputing here your right of making laws; rather bet to invite your attention to see that the welfare of my people in this country is fully regarded. In actual effect, the Chinese will have to pay ten times more than what they were asked to pay previously, but it is difficult to see at the same time how much the Kingston treasury will be benefitted by it. It would bring her little or no material advantage that can be seen, the Council to see its way to waive this action, with perhaps the same facilities to inspect these laundries, and injure not the feelings of the nation concerned.

Arguments of defence on the part of the Chinese, the pretentious way the laundry tax was raised, and fair and square ways of the administration of justice in this country, and, lastly, coupled with our mutual obligations of a country's people toward another, are reasons sufficient for the honorable members of the City Council to have for reconsidering the question, and to bring another effort to see it amended.

"Meanwhile, I hope my people will obey the laws of the city and live peacefully as they have always been doing, that their work will not be paralyzed, so as not to suffer any further loss.

"I avail myself of this opportunity to forward you, gentlemen, the assurance of my highest consideration.'

EDITORIAL COMMENT

Here is the Kingston Standard's editorial notice of the matter :—

The vote of the City Council in refusing a second reading for Ald. Kent's by-law reducing the license tax on laundries from $50 to $10 shows quite clearly that the members of Council are getting tired of the agitation to reduce the tax. Council acted deliberately in passing it and the members are beginning to resent therefore it may be just as well for the attempt to bull-doze them into changing their mind on the question.

The misrepresentation as to the motives of the Council in enacting the by-law is also having its effect; and the quite patent effort to arouse sympathy for the Chinese by stating that they are being singled out, when as a matter of fact all laundries are taxed the same amount, is also stirring up opposition to any change in the tax. The vote of 12 to 9 shows that those advocating a change in the tax are steadily losing ground.

It is to be hoped no fresh effort will be made to introduce the by-law again as it will only result in stirring up further antagonism to the Chinamen. Hitherto they have been well treated by Kingstonians. It behooves their friends to let well enough alone.

RHEUMATISM & STIFF JOINTS

When you have any deep-seated pain in the joints, the back, the wrists, or elsewhere, pour a liberal supply of Zam-Buk on the fingers, or on the palm of the hand, and rub it in. The penetrating power of this "embrocation balm," kills pain and removes stiffness.

Sound rubbings of the affected parts with this wonderful balm will drive out all pain, reduce swelling, strengthen the skin and tissues (enabling them to resist cold and damp better during the winter months), and restore perfect elasticity and looseness.

MONTREAL LADY'S EXPERIENCE.

Mrs. Frances Wyatt, of 25 Guy Avenue, Montreal, says :—"I have found Zam-Buk most soothing and valuable in a very bad case of rheumatism, and also for stiffness of joints and muscles. I suffered long and acutely from rheumatism, and tried one liniment after another in vain. I also took medicines internally, but it remained for Zam-Buk to effect a cure.

"I began applying this balm wherever I felt the aches and pains of rheumatism coming on, or felt any of the stiffness.

"The result was truly wonderful. Zam-Buk seemed to penetrate to the very seat of the pains, driving them out completely, and I am now quite cured."

WHAT ICE HOUSES AND STE... DID FOR HIM.

Mr. P. G. Wells, of 203, Ogden Street, William, Ont., says:—"Following ... duties in attending to ... I often get wet through with ... (the latter in winter). I seemed to get little ... better, no matter what I tried, ... was my state when Zam-Buk was ... mended to me. I laid in a supply, ... my great joy it began to ease me ... had it well in every sense, and where ... pains had been I found I ... from the pain and stiffness of ... Zam-Buk is a positive and certain cure for cuts, burns, bruises, sprains, festering sores, ulcers, scalds, blood-poisoning, eczema, scabs, chapped hands, cracks, chilblains, ringworm, scalp sores, bad leg, diseased ankles, and all other diseases and injuries. Rubbed well into the parts affected, it cures rheumatism, and sciatica. All druggists and stores sell at 50 c. box, three for $1.25, or post free from Zam-Buk Co., Toronto, for price. FARMER'S WIFE'S STORY.

Food Lacks Variety—Ill Health Frequent.

Everything one eats in town comes from the country, yet the farmer's table shows the least variety and his wife undoubtedly works the hardest. In this sweeping arraignment Mrs. J. Y. Tate gives the cause of her ill-health: "I lost my appetite, gas formed in the she stomach and caused great distress. A sense of fullness or extension, with aching pains in the left shoulder blade and back, inflicted further suffering upon me. My system was sluggish, and with other troubles incident to woman, my state was miserable, I used to wish for this and that to eat, but a farmer's table is mostly for well folks. It was a good thing I heard of Dr. Hamilton's Pills—they fixed up the stomach some, and then I could eat. By acting splendidly upon the system, my blood was made pure, and I got color and strength. In a few weeks I had no more gas, nor the full feeling—everything seemed to get right all at once. I can eat anything now, do my own work and feel life worth living."

Don't fail to use Dr. Hamilton's Pills—they are the right medicine to make and keep you well. At all dealers, in 25c boxes, or The Catarrhozone Co., Kingston Ont.

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

Election Protest

evening between four and five o'clock. To Mr. DuVernet witness said Mr Leary had no business in the polling place, but it was open. He was talking with Mr. Leary at noon and Mr Leary told him he had been there between four and five o'clock.

ALFRED KINGSCOTE

Alfred Kingscote was called but did not answer to name as he was out on the mail route.

A. H. STRATTON.

Mr. A. H. Stratton was called and he said he was in the Liberal rooms on the election afternoon and Mr. Leary went to North Monaghan at 3.45. He did not know what time he came back. He did not see Leary leave the committee rooms. Witness was in both little rooms during the afternoon several times. There was no money going that day, and there was no foundation for a statement of such a statement.

To Mr. DuVernet, witness said he saw his brother there at 4 Mr Leary also. He saw his brother there frequently on election day. Witness was in the rooms most of the afternoon.

At half-past three o'clock the case of the Leary charges was completed and it was decided to have the argument on these charges proceeded with and Mr. DuVernet began at 3.30 o'clock and presented a most eloquent and learned argument taking the evidence in detail from beginning to end. He occupied until a quarter to five o'clock.

Mr. Watson then began his argument and endeavored to point out that there was no foundation for the charges and the case must necessarily fail. He described the English witnesses as specimens of the lowest type of degenerate humanity.

NEW PHYSICAL DIRECTOR.

Mr. McLaughlin of New London, Conn., has Accepted the Position in the Y.M.C.A.

Mr B. M. McLaughlin of New London, Conn., has been secured as the new Physical director of the Y.M.C.A., succeeding Mr. Collings. His last appointment was the position of assistant physical director of the Y.M.C.A. in Washington, D.C., and during the past season he has had an average of five classes a day and in three weeks taught 33 men to swim. These facts will convey an idea of Mr. McLaughlin's ability and under his direction the fall classes at the Y.M.C.A. should open with a large membership and excellent work should be accomplished. Further notice will be given in this respect after Mr. McLaughlin arrives in Peterborough.

HAPPY WOMEN PRAISE PE-RU-NA.

It Is Works, Not Words, That Has Made Pe-ru-na Famous Throughout The Land.

The miss and the matron alike praise Peruna. Girls and women have all discovered the value of Peruna. The Miss and the Mrs. have been ill, each in her own peculiar way, and have found relief by taking Peruna.

Fair girls and beautiful women, frail daughters and ailing mothers everywhere have taken Peruna and know its value in the relief of ailments peculiar to their sex. From the grandmother to the girl babe the gentler sex are under numerous obligations to Peruna.

All this being true and the woman does not hesitate to tell it, her words win the confidence of other women, and thus the fame of Peruna spreads from household to household until millions of homes acknowledge Peruna as their favorite and reliable family medicine.

Peruna is good for many minor ills. It can be relied upon to mitigate the many disagreeable effects of colds and irregularities so common among women. All the ailments of a catarrhal nature belong within the scope of Peruna's remedial action.

Internal Catarrh.

Mrs. Fred Webber, 19 Wellington St., Brantford, Ont., Second Vice President Woman's Industrial League, writes:

"Last fall I caught a severe cold, which caused inflammation of the internal organs. I suffered excruciating pains and kept getting worse and worse until I gave up all hope.

"My attention was called to the wonderful cures produced by Peruna, and I made up my mind to try it for two months and see what it would do for me.

"Within one month I felt much better and at the close of the second I was like a new woman. I kept improving and finally was fully restored. I have advised many of my friends to try it, and all are pleased with the results."

Head, Stomach, Lungs.

Miss Olivine Perrault, 325 Davidson street, Boulevard St. Paul, Montreal, Can., writes:

"I write you a word to congratulate you on your famous remedy, Peruna. I tried other remedies, but my cold did not get any better, and I feared I was becoming consumptive.

"The condition of my head and stomach was very annoying. I had coughed day and night for three months, as the result of a cold which I had contracted from sudden change of temperature.

"My brother advised me to try Peruna, and I did so, for he was cured by Peruna. I took it regularly and improved steadily. I have now taken three bottles of it and am completely cured."

To Suffering Women.

"I feel it my duty to write and tell you of the good Peruna has done me.

"I was subject to internal weakness. For six years I suffered more or less.

"We consulted various doctors, who gave me relief, but no cure. I have suffered a great deal, and my husband had very large bills to pay.

"In my despair I decided to try Peruna, and the first bottle taken according to your directions gave me relief. I have had no backset since then.

"Since we have used Peruna, a doctor has seldom been in our house. It would take a book if I were to tell all the good Peruna has done in our family.

"Please accept my most sincere thanks.

"I have often recommended your medicine with good results, and if any suffering woman wishes to write to me or to call on me, I will give her my information in regard to Peruna at any time."—Mrs. Martha Fredrich, Central Park, L. I., N. Y.

One Woman's Experience.

"I was troubled with very serious internal weakness, which exhausted me so that I feared I would lose my mind.

"I suffered agony with my back, the pain extending down my left leg. The pain was so severe that I would have welcomed death as a relief.

"Peruna cured me of this trouble—no wonder I recommend it so highly. It will soon be two years since I found relief from the pain, and not a sign of it has returned.

"I am glad that there is a way in which I can speak of this, so many sufferer may read my testimonial, and not only read, but believe."—Mrs. William Henderson, Crank, N. W. T., Canada.

Hon.J.R.Stratton will Retain His Seat as a Result of Protest Trial

After Judgment in the Leary Cases Mr. Du Vernet Withdrew Other Charges - —Counter Charges Dropped

Hon. J. R. Stratton, M.P., will continue to represent the West Riding in the House of Commons. Mr. Justice McMahon and Mr. Justice McGee dismissed the Leary charges and severely criticised all the witnesses produced by the petitioner Mr. J. H. Burnham, while he upheld Hon. Mr. Stratton, Mr. R. H. Leary and the rest of the witnesses for the respondent. The judgment handed down by their lordships was not a surprise to those who had followed the trial, and when court adjourned Mr. Stratton was surrounded by his friends and congratulated.

The judgment of the court is a complete vindication of the representative of West Peterborough and of Mr. R. H. Leary against whom the charges of bribery were laid, and when their lordships had finished Mr. DuVernet, solicitor for Mr. J. H. Burnham rose and said, that in view of the ruling of the court on these charges it would be a waste of time and of means to continue the case. He therefore had no further evidence to submit. Mr. Watson, solicitor for Mr. Stratton, consented to the withdrawal of the petition without costs to either side and said that he would withdraw the cross petition.

This was the finish of the West Peterborough election protest trial which had been going on for the entire week and if continued to the end promised to be good for several weeks more.

Peterboro' Branch of W.A.A. Elects Officers

The annual meeting of the Peterborough branch of the Women's Art Association of Canada was held on Tuesday evening, Sept. 28th, at the Y.W.C.A.

There was a large and enthusiastic meeting and much interest was shown in all the branches of the work. After the usual routine work reading of reports, etc., the officers for the coming year were elected. The treasurer's report shows a balance in the bank to the credit of the branch of $26.21.

A vote of thanks was passed to the retiring officers, Mrs. Charles, Mrs. J. R. Stratton, Miss Doble, Mrs. McCullough; to Mr. Montizambert, for the use of the bank building and to the Board of the Y.W.C.A. for the use of the room for the meeting.

The following officers were elected;
Hon. President—Mrs. Dignam.
Hon. Past Pres.—Miss Berryman.
President—Mrs. Arthur Stevenson.
1st Vice Pres.—Mrs. Harry Rush.
2nd Vice Pres.—Mrs. R. R. Bell.
Secretary—Miss Madeline Wilson.
Treasurer—Miss Maud Rush.
Convenors of Committees—Social, Mrs. Aylmer; lectures, Mrs. R. S. Davidson; home industries, Mrs. Geo. Rubidge; exhibition, Miss Hatton; reading club, Mrs. Fredericks; archivist, Mrs. Palmer.

SECRETARY'S REPORT.

The secretary's report was presented as follows;

As in former years the most important event in the history of the branch during the year was the Foreign Exhibition. This exhibition, was held in the building formerly occupied by the Bank of Montreal in the second week of February.

The exhibition this year was especially interesting to Peterborough people as we were fortunate enough to secure a number of works by our most distinguished member, Miss Katherine E. Wallis. Among them was a replica in bronze of the celebrated "Cabbage Baby," which had been exhibited in the Paris Salon in the previous spring. An exquisite portrait of Miss Wallis, in low relief. Mona. Waldman, the celebrated French portraitist, and some spirited examples of his work as an animalist was very much admired and created a great deal of interest. The pictures, among which were several specimens of the best modern Dutch water colorists, and some excellent Scotch oils were very much admired. The Water Crane room was a great center of attraction, and genuine, indeed, was the delight with which many recognized the originals of the the illustrations which had been the joy of their childhood hours.

Peterborough was very fortunate in having such a varied, excellent exhibition and while we feel sometimes as if our efforts were not appreciated we were pleased this year to find that the attendance was larger than ever before. We had the pleasure of having our first president, Miss Bertram, with us for a few days, and her bright and cheery presence and words of encouragement were much appreciated. Tea was served during the exhibition by the King's Daughters.

The prize given by the branch for the best group of original drawings to be exhibited at the Peterborough Industrial Fair was won by Miss E. Wadel of Orono.

The Reading Club, in connection with the association, was not as successful as regards the attendance, as it deserved to be. An excellent program was arranged by the leader, Mrs. Palmer, who very kindly gave the first address on "The History of Art," from the earliest time." During the winter excellent papers were given on the representatives of the Flemish, Spanish, and French schools of art. The traveling library, secured from McGill University, was a great help. It is to be regretted that more of the members do not avail themselves oftener of this most enjoyable branch of the work of the Association in Peterborough.

Read the little book, "The Road to Wellville," in every third pkg.

CRIED EASILY
Nervous Woman Stopped Coffee and Quit Other Things.

No better practical proof that coffee is a drug can be required than to note how the nerves become mastrung in persons who habitually drink it.

The stomach, too, rebels at being continually drugged with coffee and tea—they both contain the drug—caffeine. Ask your doctor.

An Ia. woman tells the old story thus:

"I had used coffee for six years and was troubled with headaches, nervousness and dizziness. In the morning upon rising I used to belch up a sour fluid, regularly.

"Often I got so nervous and miserable I would cry without the least reason, and I noticed my eyesight was getting poor.

"After, using Postum a while, I observed the headaches left me and soon the belching stopped (water brash from dyspepsia). I feel decidly different now, and I am convinced that it is because I stopped coffee and began to use Postum. I can see better now, my eyes are stronger.

"A friend of mine did not like Postum but when I told her to make it according to directions on the package, she liked it all right."

Always boil Postum well and it will surprise you.

E. F. MASON'S LOWER STORE GUTTED BY FIRE ON SUNDAY

Early Morning Blaze Causes Heavy Less—Mr. Mason's Stock of Provisions and Groceries Completely Destroyed—Damaged Stock of Other Stores

E. F. Mason & Co.'s lower store on George street, next to R. Hall & Son, was gutted by fire yesterday morning between three and four o'clock. The stock which was worth from $8,000 to $10,000 is a complete loss. What the flames and smoke did not destroy the heat of the fire did, so that there is practically nothing saved. The store fixtures were also either destroyed or very badly damaged by the heat.

The fire was discovered by the night watchman who sent the alarm in from box 23 at 3.15 o'clock. The fire brigade turned out and were quickly on the scene and at work, and although they worked heroically they could not save the store, but they did prevent the fire from spreading. It was confined to the one store and for that only the department deserves great credit.

The smoke and water did a great deal of damage to the stock of R. Hall & Son. Milburn's jewelry store the Singer Sewing Machine store. The cellars were flooded several feet deep and the stores were filled with smoke. The damage to R. Hall & Son's stock by the smoke and water will be almost as much as that in Mr. Mason's store. The cellar contained large quantities of woollen and other goods and they were soaked while the dry goods upstairs will be damaged by smoke.

The fire started as nearly as can be ascertained about the center of the cellar and was evidently burning for some considerable time before it was discovered as the whole block was filled with smoke and the fire was burning fiercely when the firemen arrived. This made it the most difficult fire to fight the city has had since the permanent brigade was inaugurated. But the chief and his men did wonderful work. They went right into the thick of the smoke and fire and devoted their energies to the central blaze and in this way they saved many thousands of dollars of property.

The back half of Mason's store is a wreck. At an early hour the floor in the back went down carrying everything with it and this only added more difficulties and greater danger.

Deputy Chief Grainge went down in the cellar in an endeavor to learn the location of the fire. The smoke was so dense that he became overcome and had to be carried out and for a time it was feared that he would lose his life. The Dan Spence ambulance was called and medical assistance summoned and the unfortunate man was hustled off to the hospital. He recovered in a few hours, however and yesterday morning was removed to his home and will be all right again in a day or so. Chief Howard also got too much smoke while looking for fire in adjoining cellars and he collapsed but recovered shortly after. Two or three other men were forced to get out into the air for short periods. It was a bad fire and a hard one to watch but that it was confined to the one place is eloquent testimony of the ability of the chief and his men.

How the fire started is a mystery. There is not a furnace or stove of any kind in the place. There is no fire about the store. It is heated by the boilers under the C.P.R. ticket office and it is lighted by electricity and only last spring it was re-wired and inspected. When the store staff left Saturday night about midnight everything was in good order and no sign of smoke or fire was noticed.

Mr. Mason was on the scene early and he worked heroically with the firemen and rendered valuable assistance, as did several other citizens who have the interest of the city at heart.

When the fire was gotten under control and the flames extinguished, after several hours' hard labor the men returned to the fire hall, but a watch was left at the store and all day yesterday the chief visited the place every hour or so.

Mr. Mason's lower store was one of the leading groceries in the city; a high class line of goods was carried and a splendid business was done. His loss is partially covered by insurance, but is, nevertheless, a serious one. As soon as the insurance adjusters get through with their work no doubt a new store will be opened by Mr. Mason.

Many Gallons of Water Poured Into the Fire at E.F.Mason & Co's

The Times has received the following very interesting information from Chief Howard of the fire brigade;—

According to the scale governing hydraulics, the following is the amount of water used at the Mason fire yesterday morning. Calculated in the following manner;

Pressure at the hydrant 85 lbs.
Average length of line 300 feet.
Pressure at the nozzle 65 lbs.
Number of gallons of water discharged per minute from each line. 268 imperial gallons.
Number of lines in use five.
Size of Nozzles 1 1-8 inches.
Number of hours working five (300 minutes).
Each line discharging 80,000 gallons in five hours.
Total amount of water used 304,500 gallons.
This amount of water would weigh approximately 2,439,600 lbs.

PREPARED A LUNCH.

For the Firemen Who Were Unable to Partake of It.

During the fire at Mason's store on Sunday morning several of the ladies residing in the flats over the stores prepared hot tea and coffee and a lunch for the firemen. Just at that time, however, the fire was in a dangerous condition and the men were unable to avail themselves of the kindness. The ladies even brought the refreshments down to the men but the chief refused to allow the men to stop work at that time as every minute counted. After the fire the chief on the order of Ald. Beller sent the men over to the restaurant where they had a big meal. The chief and firemen wish to thank the ladies for their kindness and thoughtfulness and regret that they were unable at the time to partake of the refreshments.

THE WEATHER.

JEFFRIES ASKS FOR $150,000.

Sporting Critics Profess to be Amazed Over the Report.

New York, Oct. 1.—New York sporting experts profess to be amazed today over the report from France that James J. Jeffries thinks that a fight between himself and Jack Johnson for the championship of the world is worthy of a purse of $150,000. They seem to think that if this is Jeffries' attitude the fight will never take place.

Partisans of Johnson are shouting "I told you so!" and are insisting that Jeffries never had any intention of entering the ring with the negro, and that he will take the position that the purse offered is not sufficient and will continue his career in vaudeville as long as he can draw the dollars to the box office.

This is denied by the Jeffries' partisans, who insist that the big Californian simply wants to get all he can get out of the battle, and they say that as soon as he returns to this country the difficulty will be smoothed over and the articles for the fight signed.

Bernier Planted Flag of Canada in Far North

Reached 84 Degrees and Took Possession of Island in Name of Dominion —Arctic at Point Armour

Point Amour, Que., Oct. 2.—According to members of the Canadian Government steamer Arctic, Captain Bernier and his vessel reached as far north as 84 degrees, arriving at that point on Aug. 19 last year.

The Canadian flag was planted there on an island which Capt. Bernier had reached on a previous expedition. The party was frozen in there early in September, and did not get clear of the ice until Aug 6, 1909.

The Arctic then drifted out on the ice floe from where Peary had wintered. Plenty of game, including white bear, musk ox, deer, fox and other fur-bearing animals were found but no seals, whites or Eskimos were seen.

There is one fine female musk ox on board. There were two, but one perished during the trip southward by licking paint and brass. There are also some live Arctic foxes on board the Arctic. The coldest weather experienced by the party was 57 degrees below zero. It was calm at that temperature. When the wind blew the temperature rose. There was not much snow on the heights, the snow being exposed in many places.

There has been no sickness whatever on board during the whole trip. The Arctic left here Thursday evening, and as she makes only seven or eight miles an hour will not reach Father Point before Monday morning.

P.C.I. Team Won Great Victory from T. C. S.

The P.C.I.'s put a crimp in the sails of the Trinity College School's first team from Port Hope in an exhibition Rugby match at Riverside Park. The local juniors were somewhat in the rear at half time, the score being 11—9 against them. But in the second half the boys came back strong and although they were playing against the wind they shut the visitors out and increased their own score to 14. The good sized crowd of spectators thought there was no chance for the P.C.I. as the Port Hope students had an advantage in weight and appeared to be a better bunch of players. But the real Rugby metal that has for years characterized the Peterborough boys came to the fore and by constant plugging and hard earnest efforts they pulled out a splendid victory.

The game was one of the cleanest ever put up by two junior teams in Peterborough and will no doubt do much to attract larger crowds in the future.

The Port Hope boys are a good lot of Rugbyists and will no doubt make a lot of "em sit up and take notice before the season is over. The game was a good workout for the P.C.I. and they look good for city honors.

Arrested a Justice-of-the-Peace for Shooting

Glace Bay, N.S., Oct. 2.—Superintendent Norman McKenzie, James Campbell, justice of the peace, and Coal Company Policemen Mat McAdams, Alex. Farrel, and Wesley Bond were arrested yesterday upon warrants issued upon information laid before Stipendiary McCuish.

The information charges each of them with "shooting at John Butts with intent to do said John Butts grievous bodily harm." The trial has been set down for Thursday of next week. The accused are at large on bail in the meantime. John Butts was the man whose ear was shot off.

Many wild and sensational reports of the shooting affair have been telegraphed abroad, but the account sent by your correspondent is substantially correct. The whole trouble was precipitated by the reckless use of fire-arms in the hands of special police. Had the matter been left with the regular police force the persons taking coal could have been arrested without the slightest disturbance.

No small stir has been created by a sermon preached by the Rev. Father Fraser on Sunday last at No. 2 mine. Sensational and incorrect reports of this sermon were published by the Coal Company organ. What Father Fraser did say was this; "That if some settlement was not shortly arrived at between the company and the men that there would be either loss of life or damage to property."

It was also stated that the Coal Company had taken action against Father Fraser, but such action will never take place.

Mr. Wanklyn of the Dominion Coal Company is said to have taken the affairs of the diocese in his own hands, and will have all the objectionable priests removed.

The Spanish Army is in a bad Way

Madrid, via Mendaye, Oct. 2.—With the entire Spanish force in Morocco penned up almost helplessly in the Melilla peninsula, and all Spain howling for a cessation of hostilities, the War Office today accepted the situation as desperate and 15,000 additional troops were ordered to Morocco. The first detachment of the reinforcements, the Queen's regiment of Lancers, is embarking today.

That the Spanish reverse following the abandonment of Mount Gurugu to the Moors have left the rebels in control of the situation, is the general belief here today, although the greatest care is exercised by the officials to prevent the publication of news from the front. The low line of hills that skirts the Melilla peninsula, blocking it off from the main land is now held by the Moors, who made an advance all along the line following the Spanish retirement after the death of Gen Vicaria, and the destruction of his 200 followers.

The civil authorities are doing their best to cope with a situation here which is nothing less than smouldering revolt. They fear that the ordering of further reinforcements to Morocco, when it becomes public, will be the spark that will inflame the whole country, and precipitate the uprising which they are struggling to avoid.

Premier Maura is today practically willing to admit that the situation is beyond his control, and to consent to the formation of a military dictatorship, with Gen. Weyler at its head.

Hon.J.R.Stratton will Retain His Seat as a Result of Protest Trial

Hon. J. R. Stratton, M.P., will continue to represent the West Riding in the House of Commons. Mr. Justice McMahon and Mr. Justice McGee dismissed the Leary charges and severely criticised all the witnesses produced by the petitioner Mr. J. H. Burnham, while he upheld Hon. Mr. Stratton, Mr. R. H. Leary and the rest of the witnesses for the respondent. The judgment handed down by their lordships was not a surprise to those who had followed the trial, and when court adjourned Mr. Stratton was surrounded by his friends and congratulated.

The judgment of the court is a complete vindication of the representative of West Peterborough and of Mr. R. H. Leary against whom the charges of bribery were laid, and when their lordships had finished Mr. DuVernet, solicitor for Mr. J. H. Burnham rose and said, that in view of the ruling of the court on these charges it would be a waste of time and of means to continue the case. He therefore had no further evidence to submit. Mr. Watson, solicitor for Mr. Stratton, consented to the withdrawal of the petition without costs to either side and said that he would withdraw the cross petition.

This was the finish of the West Peterborough election protest trial which had been going on for the entire week and if continued to the end promised to be good for several weeks more.

Peterboro' Branch of W.A.A. Elects Officers

The annual meeting of the Peterborough branch of the Women's Art Association of Canada was held on Tuesday evening, Sept. 28th, at the Y.W.C.A.

There was a large and enthusiastic meeting and much interest was shown in all the branches of the work. After the usual routine work reading of reports, etc., the officers for the coming year were elected. The treasurer's report shows a balance in the bank to the credit of the branch of $93.21.

A vote of thanks was passed to the retiring officers, Mrs. Charles, Mrs. J. R. Stratton, Miss Doble, Mrs. McCullough; to Mr. Montizambert, for the use of his bank building and to the Board of the Y.W.C.A. for the use of the room for the meeting.

The following officers were elected;
Hon. President—Mrs. Dignam.
Hon. Past Pres.—Miss Bertram.
President—Mrs. Arthur Stevenson.
1st Vice Pres.—Mrs. Harry Rush.
2nd Vice Pres.—Mrs. R. R. Ball.
Secretary—Miss Madeline Wilson.
Treasurer—Miss Maud Rush.
Conveners of Committees— Social, Mrs. Aylmer; lectures, Mrs. R. S. Davidson; home industries, Mrs. Geo. Rutledge; exhibition, Miss Hutton; reading club, Mrs. Fredericks; archivist, Mrs. Palmer.

SECRETARY'S REPORT.

The secretary's report was presented as follows;

As in former years the most important event in the history of the branch during the year was the Foreign Exhibition. This exhibition, was held in the building formerly occupied by the Bank of Montreal in the second week of February.

The exhibition this year was especially interesting to Peterborough people as we were fortunate enough to secure a number of works by our most distinguished member, Miss Katherine E. Wallis. Among them was a replica in bronze of the celebrated "Cabbage Baby," which had been exhibited in the Paris Salon in the previous spring. An exquisite portrait of Miss Wallis, in low relief. Mona Waldman, the celebrated French portraitist, and some spirited examples of his work as an equalist was very much admired and created a great deal of interest. The pictures, among which were several specimens of the best modern Dutch water colorists, and some excellent Scotch oils were very much admired. The Water Crome room was a great center of attraction, and genuine, indeed, was the delight with which many recognized the originals of the the illustrations which had been the joy of their childhood hours.

Peterborough was very fortunate in having such a varied, excellent exhibition and while we feel sometimes as if our efforts were not appreciated we were pleased this year to find that the attendance was larger than ever before. We had the pleasure of having our first president, Miss Bertram, with us for a few days, and her bright and cheery presence and words of encouragement were much appreciated. Tea was served during the exhibition by the King's Daughters.

The prize given by the branch for the best group of original drawings to be exhibited at the Peterborough Industrial Fair was won by Miss E. Wadel of Orono.

The Reading Club, in connection with the association, was not as successful as regards the attendance, as it deserved to be. An excellent program was arranged by the leader, Mrs. Palmer, who very kindly gave the first address on "The History of Art," from the earliest time." During the winter excellent papers were given on the representatives of the Flemish, Spanish, and French schools of art. The traveling library, secured from McGill University, was a great help. It is to be regretted that more of the members do not avail themselves oftener of this most enjoyable branch of the work of the Association in Peterborough.

No better practical proof that coffee is a drug can be required than to note how the nerves become unstrung in persons who habitually drink it.

The stomach, too, rebels at being continually dragged with coffee and tea—they both contain the drug—caffeine. Ask your doctor.

An Ia. women tells the old story thus:

"I had used coffee for six years and was troubled with headaches, nervousness and dizziness. In the morning upon rising I used to belch up a sour fluid, regularly.

"Often I got so nervous and miserable I would cry without the least reason, and I noticed my eyesight was getting poor.

"After, using Postum a while, I observed the headaches left me and soon the belching stopped (water brash from dyspepsia). I feel decidly different now, and I am convinced that it is because I stopped coffee and began to use Postum. I can see better now, my eyes are stronger.

"A friend of mine did not like Postum but when I told her to make it according to directions on the package, she liked it all right."

Always boil Postum well and it will surprise you.

E. F. MASON'S LOWER STORE GUTTED BY FIRE ON SUNDAY

Early Morning Blaze Causes Heavy Loss—Mr. Mason's Stock of Provisions and Groceries Completely Destroyed—Damaged Stock of Other Stores

E. F. Mason & Co.'s lower store on George street, next to R. Hall & Son, was gutted by fire yesterday morning between three and four o'clock. The stock which was worth from $6,000 to $10,000 is a complete loss. What the flames and smoke did not destroy the heat of the fire did, so that there is practically nothing saved. The store fixtures were also either destroyed or very badly damaged by the heat.

The fire was discovered by the night watchman who sent the alarm in from box 23 at 3.15 o'clock. The fire brigade turned out and were quickly on the scene and at work, and although they worked heroically they could not save the store, but they did prevent the fire from spreading. It was confined to the one store and for that only the department deserves great credit.

The smoke and water did a great deal of damage to the stock of R. Hall & Son, Milburn's jewelry store the Singer Sewing Machine store. The cellars were flooded several feet deep and the stores were filled with smoke. The damage to R. Hall & Son's stock by the smoke and water will be almost as much as that in Mr. Mason's store. The cellar contained large quantities of woollen and other goods and they were soaked while the dry goods upstairs will be damaged by smoke.

The fire started as nearly as can be ascertained about the center of the cellar and was evidently burning for some considerable time before it was discovered as the whole block was filled with smoke and the fire was burning fiercely when the firemen arrived. This made it the most difficult fire to fight the city has had since the permanent brigade was inaugurated. But the chief and his men did wonderful work. They went right into the thick of the smoke and fire and devoted their energies to the central blaze and in this way they saved many thousands of dollars of property.

The back part of Mason's store is a wreck. At an early hour the floor in the back went down carrying everything with it and then only added more difficulties and greater danger.

Deputy Chief Grange went down in the cellar in an endeavor to learn the location of the fire. The smoke was so dense that he became overcome and had to be carried out and for a time it was feared that he would lose his life. The Dan Spence ambulance was called and medical assistance summoned and the unfortunate man was hustled off to the hospital. He recovered in a few hours, however and yesterday morning was removed to his home and will be all right again in a day or so. Chief Howard also got too much smoke while looking for fire in adjoining cellars and he collapsed but recovered shortly after. Two or three other men were forced to get out into the air for short periods. It was a bad fire and a hard one to watch but that it was confined to the one place is eloquent testimony of the ability of the chief and his men.

How the fire started is a mystery. There is not a furnace or stove of any kind in the place. There is no fire about the store. It is heated by the boilers under the C.P.R. ticket office and it is lighted by electricity and only last spring it was re-wired and inspected. When the store staff left Saturday night about midnight everything was in good order and no sign of smoke or fire was noticed.

Mr. Mason was on the scene early and he worked heroically with the firemen and rendered valuable assistance, as did several other citizens who have the interest of the city at heart.

When the fire was gotten under control and the flames extinguished, after several hours" hard labor the men returned to the fire hall, but a watch was left at the store and all day yesterday the chief visited the placed every hour or so.

Mr. Mason's lower store was one of the leading groceries in the city; a high class line of goods was carried and a splendid business was done. His loss is partially covered by insurance, but is, nevertheless, a serious one. As soon as the insurance adjusters get through with their work no doubt a new store will be opened by Mr. Mason.

Many Gallons of Water Poured Into the Fire at E.F.Mason & Co's

The Times has received the following very interesting information from Chief Howard of the fire brigade;—

According to the scale governing hydrantites, the following is the amount of water used at the Mason fire yesterday morning. Calculated in the following manner;

Pressure at the hydrant 85 lbs.
Average length of line 900 feet.
Pressure at the nozal 42c lbs.
Number of gallons of water discharged per minute from each line, 265 imperial gallons.
Number of lines in use five.
Size of Nozales 1 1-8 inches.
Number of hours working five (300 minutes).
Each line discharging 60,000 gallons in five hours.
Total amount of water used 304,500 gallons.
This amount of water would weigh approximately 2,439,600 lbs.

PREPARED A LUNCH.

For the Firemen Who Were Unable to Partake of It.

During the fire at Mason's store on Sunday morning several of the ladies residing in the flats over the stores prepared hot tea and coffee and a lunch for the firemen. Just at that time, however, the fire was in a dangerous condition and the men were unable to avail themselves of the kindness. The ladies even brought the refreshments down to the men but the chief refused to allow the men to stop work at that time as every minute counted. After the fire the chief on the order of Ald. Butler sent the men over to the restaurant where they had a big meal. The chief and firemen wish to thank the ladies for their kindness and thoughtfulness and regret that they were unable at the time to partake of the refreshments.

JEFFRIES ASKS FOR $150,000.

Sporting Critics Profess to be Amused Over the Report.

New York, Oct. 1.—New York sporting experts profess to be amused today over the report from France that James J. Jeffries thinks that a fight between himself and Jack Johnson for the championship of the world is worthy of a purse of $150,000. They seem to think that if this is Jeffries' attitude the fight will never take place.

Partisans of Johnson are shouting "I told you so!" and are insisting that Jeffries never had any intention of entering the ring with the negro, and that he will take that position that the purse offered is not sufficient and will continue his career in vaudeville as long as he can draw the dollars to the box office.

This is denied by the Jeffries' partisans, who insist that the big Californian simply wants to get all he can get out of the battle, and they say that as soon as he returns to this country the difficulty will be smoothed over and the articles for the fight signed.

Bernier Planted Flag of Canada in Far North

Reached 84 Degrees and Took Possession of Island in Name of Dominion —Arctic at Point Armour

Point Amour, Que., Oct. 2.—According to members of the Canadian Government steamer Arctic, Captain Bernier and his vessel reached as far north as 84 degrees, arriving at that point on Aug. 19 last year.

The Canadian flag was planted there on an island which Capt. Bernier had reached on a previous expedition. The party was frozen in there early in September, and did not get clear of the ice until Aug 6, 1909.

The Arctic then drifted out on the ice floe from where Peary had wintered. Plenty of game, including white bear, musk ox, deer, fox and other fur-bearing animals were found but no seals, whites or Eskimos were seen.

There is one fine female musk ox on board. There were two, but one perished during the trip southward by licking paint and brass. There are also some live Arctic foxes on board the Arctic. The coldest weather experienced by the party was 57 degrees below zero. It was calm at that temperature. When the wind blew the temperature rose. There was not much snow on the heights, the snow being exposed in many places.

There has been no sickness whatever on board during the whole trip. The Arctic left here Thursday evening, and as she makes only seven or eight miles an hour will not reach Father Point before Monday morning.

SUFFRAGETTE MARTYRS.

To achieve martyrdom it once was necessary to die. The world has moved on and the ways of sacrifice have multiplied. There are triumphs of martyrdom well separated from its fatalities. We instance the cases of Britain's self-immolating suffragettes and the stomach pumps.

Not one of the strenuous sisters who lay in jail at Birmingham but had for source of regret the fact that she had only one life to lose for the cause. Possessed of a devouring zeal, each prisoner declined to devour her rations. A glorious end was in sight. Hunger was to consume where thirst franchise raged, and a whole sex was to gain in power through a loss of heroic members. ...

When forced feeding broke the spell of starvation, did it break also the suffragettes' bright dreams of exaltation? By no means. Martyrdom did not change its instruments and complexion. The saving by brute power of lives devoted to daring and death became a "horrible outrage." And the sufferers beneath the pump are luminous now under a fresh, unique oppression at the hands of men.

To be sure, they do not all see it that way. Regardless of the law against suicide, some of them talk of suits against the Home Secretary for the invasion of their right to starve. They should be better advised At law they will be merely plaintiffs. In the attitude of compulsory dining they figure in an apotheosis of devotion tangled in tyrannies.

CANADA HAS THE PULPWOOD.

In the recent tariff revision the United States paper manufacturers dictated the pulp and paper schedules in their own interests. They did so in the belief that this country is to be intimidated by hostile tariff legislation of the country to the south. The time was when it was so to some extent, but it is not so any longer. These United States paper manufacturers have not had long to wait before having the lesson impressed upon them that greed sometimes over-reaches itself. They imagined that Ontario and Quebec would be frightened; but there has been no fright on this side of the international line. On the contrary, the Quebec Government has decided to stop altogether the exportation of pulpwood cut on Crown lands. The United States manufacturers have largely exhausted their own supplies but pulpwood they must have, and so they are preparing to move their plants to Canada.

In September, 1900, the Quebec Government made a promise that the stumpage rates of 60 cents per cord on wood cut from Crown lands would not be raised for a period of ten years. It is intended to carry out the pledge in good faith, and no increase in stumpage charges will be made until September, 1910, when the prohibition of export will come into operation. The interests controlling the Berlin mills property in New Hampshire are planning to install a print paper mill at La Tuque, Quebec and the International Paper Company has prepared plans for numerous locations for paper mills in Canada, that company having stopped the manufacture of print paper at at number of its more expensive mills in the United States. And this, as a result of what the revisers of the tariff upward called protection of United States industry. It looks as if it would be a blessing in disguise to Canada.

Model Dwelling

State Should Own Them

By OLGA NETHERSOLE
Actress.

IN considering the Glackin bill, authorizing the state of Illinois to establish by special taxation a tuberculosis sanatorium, the question arises as to whether it should end with the establishment of a sanatorium for tuberculosis only, or whether the proceeds of the special tax should not be also used for the establishment of a sanatorium for the cure of other diseases and for the betterment of tenement districts.

The tenement house laws could work in co-operation and be part of this new law. There could be built, with the proceeds of this tax, model tenements, of which the state should be landlord. These tenements should be designed and built for the health and welfare of the working classes.

No better model could be followed than the Krupp dwellings of Germany. These buildings are built in squares, with open stairways, large central court, bathroom, kitchen, parlor and bedrooms—no shutting out from the people of their natural rights—God's light and air.

The model dwellings should be under state control and visited at intervals by official inspectors. No overcrowding should be allowed, cleanliness and hygiene should be insisted upon, and the tenants of these dwellings should have free medical treatment from medical officers of the fund, and should, in fact, be under medical supervision.

I venture to suggest that such tenements could be run by the state on a paying basis, and the benefit of the community would be so far-reaching that it is impossible to limit it by any statement.

The effect on the health of the individual is obvious, and the moral awakening would be a revelation, because, as the tenement question now stands, it is quite a common occurrence for ten families to live in a house originally built for one family, and several people of both sexes, boys and girls, men and women, to sleep in one room.

The tenement house to-day breeds physical and moral disease. As W. J. Hurlbut, in his play, "The Writing on the Wall," asserts, "The tenement house landlords are a trust—a combination in restriction of health, of decency, of virtue." The state must fight the trust by becoming the landlord of model tenement dwellings for the people.

The Bills We Like to Receive

By JOSEPH E. IRVIN

of bills is a fine, firm quality of linen, known as "distinctive" paper, manufactured under government inspection at Dalton, Mass. Its delicate yet tough fibers have had a varied history before receiving the government stamp. The flax grew, perhaps, in the moist, fertile fields of Ireland.

It was gathered, bleached, spun and woven largely by woman's skill. It may have formed at one time dainty lingerie; it may have been the garments of babes; it may have been the confirmation suits of children or the graduating gowns of girls.

The paper employed for the printing

Loving hands have caressed it, patched it, darned it, and finally consigned it to the rag bag. Its mission, however, was not thereby concluded. By a process of modern alchemy, it is transformed and issued anew, not from looms, but from rolls, to take up another cycle of usefulness. Feeding avarice, serving as a channel for charity, satisfying hunger, paying bills, building homes and perhaps devouring brides whose mothers were the same fibers when they stood before the altar, the bank note could tell a rare story of comedy and tragedy.

College Work But a Part of Life

By PROF. WOODROW WILSON

Of all the erroneous and harmful ideas that young men and young women have, the worst is the pernicious belief that college is simply the stage which precedes the real beginning of life, and that the real life and the real tasks are still to come. University life is not an introduction to life, but a part of it, and a most important part of it. More and more, as the years go by, in the business as in the professional world, the stress is being laid upon the trained mind, able to grapple with the complicated problems of industrial and urban life. Those whose minds are not trained will be servants, who will not only have to obey some one else, but will have to bear the added indignity of being told how to do the work. And the training of the mind, which will make a man a master and not a servant, is to be had only through hard work, intellectual work, and by a utilization to the full of the great opportunities which a university training spreads out before one. To give that training, to help that mastery of one's mental powers, in which lies the secret of Midas and of Socrates, is the purpose and the aim of a university.

Life's Discords Often Work for Good

By JOHN H. LeSAGE

A small discord will sometimes ruin a large symphony.

A discord is anything that disturbs the tranquil trend of things.

No matter how crude or how savage a people may be if left to themselves they exist with a certain degree of harmony. This is one of the selfish requirements of self-preservation.

It is not necessarily a matter of ethics. At war with other tribes, even at war with nature, the savage, nevertheless, lives in rude harmony with his own people.

War is the great discordant note of civilization. Among enlightened nations 2,000 years of Christian civilization should have made war impossible.

As long as wars exist the symphony of civilization is incomplete.

All great souls have been discords, out of harmony with existing ideas.

"The carrion in the sun will convert itself to grass," says Emerson.

Physicians Who Know Recommend Algonquin Park.

Many people have chosen resorts by the sea for their vacation this summer, others the mountains, and many the inland waters of the "Highlands of Ontario" for that much needed rest that one should take at least once every twelve months. In many cases the desired haven was found, but in others, the more fashionable resorts did not give the restful quiet which in most cases is needed and good accomplished. There is one return to the office with only half the place, however, which offers unlimited inducements to those whose health is run down, or those who are in need of relaxation from worry and work. This place is known as the Algonquin National Park of Ontario, situated 205 miles north of the City of Toronto and 166 miles west of Ottawa. Here the conditions are ideal. The altitude at the Park station, your objective point is 1,700 feet above the sea level. The "Highland Inn," built for the accomodation of 100 people on a bluff over-looking Cache Lake, is a comfortable hotel set on one of the beauty spots of this charming reserve.

Modern with bathrooms with hot and cold water, large, bright sleeping rooms, cosy lounging rooms with large, bright open fire places, are a few of the special features. The Inn is also heated by furnaces.

The months of October and November are ideal in this locality and a sojurn there is recommended.

Get Well First

Don't risk even a penny—until health first returns.

and I mean just exactly that. I am the one physician who says to the sick "I will, out of my own pocket, pay for your medicine if it fails to bring you help!" And for 30 years Dr Shoop's medicines have been used and recommended in every city and hamlet in America. They are positively stocked in every community—and everywhere. Then why pay the cash, and so very rich, for other unwarranted and uncertain medicines? Thousands upon thousands have in the past successfully used Dr. Shoop's Restorative. When the stomach nerves, or the Heart or Kidney nerves fail, these sick ones know how quickly Dr. Shoop's Restorative will bring them back to health again. But best of all, they positively take no money risk whatever. They know that when health fails to return, Dr Shoop will pay the druggists for them. And by that test a full 30 day treatment is freely granted. But write me first for an order.

This will save delay and disappointment.

All druggists sell Dr. Shoop's Restorative and Dr. Shoop's Rheumatic Remedy, but all are not authorized to give the 30 day test. So drop me a line please—for I have appointed an honest and responsible druggist in almost every community, everywhere, to whom may be referred those who write me. Then Pay him, or pay me, nothing to the druggist. And by that book you will surely open up new and helpful ideas to those who are not well. Besides you are perfectly free to consult me just as you would your home physician. My advice and the book I have are yours—and without cost.

Perhaps a word or two from me will clear up some serious ailment. I have helped thousands upon thousands by my private prescription or personal advice. plan. My best effort is surely worth your simple request to write now, while you have it fresh in mind, for tomorrow never comes. Dr Shoop, Box 11, Racine, Wis.

RAIN SPOILS PAGEANT

FIRST DAY OF CHURCH SPECTACLE PROVES RIDICULOUS.

Bad Weather Mars Effect of Great Historic Object Lesson in London—Mud Bedraggled Saints and Monks Make Scene of Reverence Almost Comical—Retrospect of Church is Given by Huge Company.

After many months of hard work, of endearing enthusiasm, and of those little troubles which are inevitable in a great assembly of amateur actors, the English Church Pageant a few days ago gave its opening performance.

Alas! the elements were not propitious. The day was the worst we have had this summer—cold, rainy, utterly dismal. It was most unfortunate, because the pageant depended so much on the weather, not only for the comfort of actors and audience, but for its propriety.

The colors wanted the sun to bring out their richness and harmonies. All the colors on the field were dimmed and drabbled by the dank, dull atmosphere which clung about the scene. Instead of the joyousness and gaiety of those living pictures of mediæval crowds on the green field, with its encompassing trees in heavy foliage, there were rather somber effects of poor people in unfamiliar garments, bedraggled in the heavy rain, and moving through the mist. This somber tone was deepened as the afternoon wore on and the light failed.

Then, too, the weather robbed the pageant of some of its reverence and dignity. It made some of the scenes fall from the sublime very near to the ridiculous, because the sympathy of one's imagination was shocked a little by the sight of saints and monks paddling about the saddened field, and getting into position at the wings of the open-air stage under the shelter of umbrellas. Roars of laughter greeted an episode in which British virgins were chased by savage Saxons with long spears, when, on the slippery, sloshy ground, "Jill fell down, and Jack came tumbling after."

The great choir, gowned and hooded in mediæval garb, were bound to abandon the dignity of history, and to commit wilful anchronisms in the full sight of the audience, and they sang the old litanies and dirges under a very forest of umbrellas.

In many ways the pageant itself, in spite of the bad weather, which tried hard to spoil it, was full of interest and supremely successful. The huge stand, with accommodation for many thousands of people, was packed to the last seat, and the enthusiasm of the audience, among whom were hundreds of clergy, was not to be damped. And the pageant pictures in the field rewarded them. Undoubtedly there was an appeal to the imagination, to the eye, and to one's sense of romance, in this pictorial drama representing by living figures in vivid scenes the history of the old Church of England. The very field on which this drama was played is historic ground. The most of Lambeth Palace was dug out many centuries ago, and on the field which it surrounds many great scenes, many most vital episodes in the history of our church and country, have been really enacted by men strong in spirit, whose flesh has long since gone to dust.

Thinking of that and of old things half forgotten, it seemed to one that the people on the pageant ground yesterday, vague as they were in the dank mist, were the ghosts of those who once played their parts and went their way to death and bequeathed their ideals and purpose to those who followed on this soil of England.

The prelude, with St. George in the silver-shining armor, and with the early British saints, Alban and Julian, David and Patrick, stirred in one's memories of the dream-stories of the dawn of Christian faith in Britain—legends made true only by tradition and by a few old stories here and there.

The first scene of "The Publication in Britain of the Edict of Constantine, 313," is not recorded in history, but at least it was a reminder of the Roman occupation of Britain and of the little bodies of Christians, scattered outposts of the Faith, who lived between the rule of the Roman gods and of the Druid nature-worship, and to whom a liberal emperor granted freedom of religion as to all citizens of the empire. That was all a ghost-story yesterday, but one which took one's imagination back to the dim half-light of the early world.

And so as the scenes followed—the visit of St. Germain of Auxerre to the British Christians who had fallen into heresy, the founding of Iona by St. Columba, the coming of St. Augustine to the Saxons, who had driven the British to the West and destroyed the Christian outposts, the conversion of these Saxon people who were truly the first of the English, and the strong and real foundation of the Church in England—one had before one on the field a drama, full of color, in which one saw, as on an illuminated scroll of history, the foundation of the faith of our fathers.

One was shown the influence of monasticism in England before and after the Conquest, and the martyrdom of Becket reminded one of the long struggle between the Church and State—marked not once or twice only by brutal injustice and bloody tragedies, inevitable, perhaps, in a conflict between the spiritual and the temporal power, each seeking to break down the other's prerogatives, each claiming perhaps more than was due.

The episode of Magna Charta was to prove that the old Church was sometimes, if not always, on the side of liberty. The later episode of the suppression of the monasteries and the establishment of the Reformed Faith proved one thing to one man and one thing to another, according to his religious convictions and his knowledge of history.

Boom on Rand.

After a long interval it is once more quite "boom times" in Johannesburg. It is generally agreed that prospects have never been so good since 1895. All classes of business are already feeling the effects of better times. Activity on the Stock Exchange is enormous, for the public have at least fairly "gone into it."

One feature of the moment is the immense amount of pegging of claims going on in the surrounding districts. Thousands of claims allowed to lapse in times of depression have been taken up again, and many flotations are probable, but there are many in some quarters that this may be overdone and produce a reaction.

The general view, however, is that the upward tendency will last. The reduced working costs on mines have made payable the working of millions of tons of reef which hitherto have not been a profitable proposition, and at the same time have immensely increased the profits of the more valuable mines.

It is regarded as a good sign that so far the improvement has not produced the mania of gambling which marked the 1895 "boom." In the commercial part of the town traders report a marked increase in trade, especially in luxuries, such as pianos, motor-cars, carriages and horses, which first felt the bad times.

There are strong hopes that the wave of prosperity will result in the opening up of new mines and that it will thus absorb the unemployed.

Her Call.

The whole southland never claimed a sweeter, more lovable and gentle woman, but she could never be persuaded to use a phone. Lately the entire household was down with colds, and there was no one else able to call a physician in the night.

After ringing up "Central" this dear little woman became panic stricken and could not think of the word the household used when they wanted "Exchange." Hurriedly she put the receiver up and whispered into the astonished ear of the telephone girl the word:

"Hurrah!"

The Sovereign.

He was a smart junior, with a rising reputation for genius in the art of cross examination. Said he to witness, a garrulous but alert old lady:

"How much money had you in your pocket when you say it was picked?"

"Four shillings, two sixpences and a sovereign in gold," came the reply trippingly on the tongue.

"Did you ever see a sovereign in anything but gold?" was the next question, cynically put.

"Yes; I once saw the King in a carriage."

THE HAY FIELD.

With slender arms outstretching in the sun
The grass lies dead;
The wind falls tenderly, and stirs not one
Frail, fallen head.

Of baby creepings through the April day
Where streamlets wend,
Of childlike dancing on the breeze of May,
This is the end.

No more these tiny forms are bathed in dew,
No more they reach
To hold with leaves that shade them from the blue
A whispered speech.

No more they part their arms, and wreathe them close
Again to shield
Some love-full little nest—a dainty house
Hid in a field.

For them no more the splendor of the storm,
The fair delights
Of moon and star shine, glimmering faint and warm
On summer nights.

Their little lives they yield in summer death,
And frequently
Across the field bereaved their dying breath
Is brought to me.

—Elsielyn Wetherald.

Conundrums.

Why are tallest people the laziest? Because they are always longer in bed than others.

Why was Job always cold in bed? Because he had much miserable comfortless.

What is the proper length for ladies' skirts? A little above two feet.

Why is a dyer's life an enigma? Because he lives when he dyes and dyes when he lives.

What is the greatest affair of the heart known to science? The circulation of the blood.

One Shot Wounded Two.

Belleville, Ont., Sept. 23.—While Fred Mills and Burt Bell, of this city were hunting in a bush just west of the city limits yesterday, they were getting through a fence, when the gun carried by Mills was accidentally discharged. The bullet penetrated the fleshy part of Mills' thigh, passed through it, and struck Bell on the tip of the right thumb, taking off a portion of it. The injuries sustained by Mills are not considered of a serious nature. He was brought to the city and taken to the hospital.

FAMOUS WAX ARTIST

Mme. Tussaud Had an Exciting and Dramatic Career.

IN THE FRENCH REVOLUTION.

During That Era of Bloodshed She Modeled Some of the Heads That Fell by the Guillotine and Was For a Time in Prison Herself as a Suspect.

This is the story of Mme. Tussaud, who was born in Berne in 1760 and died in London in 1850, and who, during the stormy time of the French revolution, modeled in wax some of the heads that fell by the guillotine.

Marie Grosholtz was the daughter of an aid-de-camp of General Wurmser in the Seven Years' war. She was born after the death of her father.

Her mother was the sister of Dr. John Christopher Curtius of Berne. This Dr. Curtius had made many anatomical and other models in wax and had attracted the attention of the Prince de Conti. This nobleman urged Curtius to come to Paris and establish himself as a modeler in wax.

The Curtius studio became the rendezvous of the fashionable world, and in connection with this he had a museum of curiosities. Among his patrons were Voltaire, Jean Jacques, Rousseau, Meesmer, Mirabeau, Diderot, Benjamin Franklin, Paul Jones and many other notable persons.

In his visits to his sister at Berne Dr. Curtius had taught his niece, Marie, many of the secrets of modeling in wax. She showed such ability in this that her uncle urged her mother to make a home with him in Paris and to allow him to adopt Marie as his daughter.

Marie began earnest study with Dr. Curtius, and she was so skilful in the modeling of wax flowers that this art became a craze. Even the royal personages in the palace took it up, and Marie spent some time giving lessons to Mme. Elizabeth, the young sister of Louis XVI.

When the revolution broke out Dr. Curtius took the side of the people and sent for Marie to come from the palace. It was rather singular that two of his wax models should have played a foremost part in the opening scenes of that awful period. In his collection of models was a bust of the minister, Necker, father of Mme. de Staël, and one of Philippe, duke of Orleans. Two days before the storming of the Bastille a mob took these two busts from his museum in the Palais Royal, draped them in black crape to show their sympathy and started to parade the streets with them.

As the procession filed across the Place Vendôme a troop of dragoons and one of the regiments charged. A sword stroke cut the bust of Necker in halves, and the man who was carrying it was hit by a musket ball in the leg and received the thrust of a sword in his breast.

The bust of the Duke of Orleans escaped injury, but in the fight to defend [illegible] several persons were killed. The soldiers made desperate efforts to demolish it.

At the taking of the Bastille Dr. Curtius was active and for his services to France was rewarded by the national assembly. A badge of honor was presented to him, and this was inscribed with the famous date and a memorial of his bravery and patriotism. His house was a favorite place of meeting with the leaders of the revolution, so Marie had an opportunity to see them all.

There was only one time when Marie was in any danger during this desperate period. She was "suspected" and sent to prison. Here at the same time was Mme. de Beauharnais, who had barely escaped the guillotine and who was later the Josephine of Napoleon Bonaparte. Her uncle was able to get Marie's release from prison, and she came out in time to see the downfall of Robespierre, Danton and Desmoulins.

In the days of their power she had been called to model the heads of many who fell by the guillotine. She was obliged to take them just after the fall of the fatal knife. She did the awful work with the heads of poor Marie Antoinette and of the Princess Lamballe, the queen's friend. When the leaders suffered by the guillotine in their turn she modeled their heads.

After the revolution her uncle died, and in 1795 she married M. Tussaud. She could not overcome the shock of her experiences during the revolution, and she persuaded her husband to take her and the valuable collections of wax models left her by Dr. Curtius over to England.

They established this collection in the Strand. The collection was taken all about the country, and in 1802 it was brought back to London and made a permanent exhibition. Her sons conducted the business, and she took no active share in this till she was eighty years of age.

Clever People Who Can't See.

The history of the past assures us that there are few, if any, departments of human knowledge in which the blind have not distinguished themselves, says The War Cry.

Two of the world's greatest poets—Homer and Milton—were sightless; while Dr. Saunderson, once professor of mathematics in the University of Cambridge, lost his eyesight when twelve months old, but, although his parents were poor, he advanced so greatly in knowledge that he became an expert Greek scholar.

Then, John Metcalfe, of Knaresborough, another blind man, became a champion swimmer, a musician, and an engineer, who distinguished himself in building bridges and making roads.

There still exists, we believe, a monument to the memory of Dr. Hugh James, the blind physician of Carlisle; while in Birmingham there is a blind man who cleans and repairs clocks, and has even constructed his own [illegible].

Queen Victoria's Journals.

Lord Esher has been giving some interesting particulars of Queen Victoria's journals. There are said to be over 100 volumes of them, all written closely in a small running hand. The last entry is dictated and was added just ten days before the Queen died. The journals, it is said, will never be seen hereafter in their complete form [illegible].

Woman's World

A GIFTED NOVELIST.

Home and Personality of the Author of "Red Horse Hill."

Sidney McCall (Mary McNeil Fenollosa), the author of "Red Horse Hill," etc., when scarcely more than a girl was living in another part of Japan when the late Lafcadio Hearn began his studies of that country. Independently she, too, was absorbing the mystic influences of beauty, and in a different form, that of verse, was shaping her impressions into concrete structure. A modest little volume of poems called "Out of the Nest" is thought by many of her friends to contain some of her finest work. Lafcadio Hearn, who later became one of her valued friends, was delighted with these poems. In her home in Tokyo, with its garden where grew pansies, magnolias and "moon flowers," Mrs. Fenollosa wrote her first novel, "Truth Dexter," a book which had a great success. "The Breath of the Gods" was the outcome of her impressions of the situation in Japan and Russia just before the crisis, but it was written after her return to America in the "big, low workroom of her southern home in Alabama, which looks out upon a garden where the blossoming cherry mingles its petals with those of the rose and the jasmine." Kobinata, or little Sunshine hill, so called after the Japanese home, contains much that is best in beauty both of the east and west. Here also was written Mrs. Fenollosa's latest book, "Red Horse Hill."

Mrs. Fenollosa comes of an artistic family. Both her parents were writers. Her father, William Stoddard McNeil, was a poet of ability and a lover and keen student of nature. Mrs. Fenollosa's home life in Mobile has always been one of the units in a very close knit, large, devoted family group. "Truth Dexter" was in part an outcome of that homesickness which, while absent in Japan, she felt for the dearly loved home circle.

To her husband, the late Professor Ernest F. Fenollosa, well known in art circles as an authority on oriental art, Mrs. Fenollosa feels that she is deeply indebted for criticism, suggestion and constant encouragement, although in the matter of plot and actual writing she always works entirely alone. Their life together, both in Japan and in this country, was characterized by independent but absolutely congenial work and by harmony of interests and tastes.

In her latest book, "Red Horse Hill," Sidney McCall, as she prefers to sign herself, has furnished another American setting, that of a southern mill town. The conflict of human interests, a deep love motive that runs through four united lives among the characters of this story and the power for good or evil held in the hands of the controller of southern mills all bear a vital part in the drama.

Beauty in Dandelions and Milk.

If you want to be beautiful drink tea of dandelion tea and bathe in scalded milk. Any one who succeeds in drinking dandelion tea is entitled to immortal beauty as a small reward. Still the stuff may be made palatable by putting things in it. For instance, a dash of brandy may be added, but the tea is better for the skin without that alcoholic addition. Several cups a day must be taken for the first two months of summer and then one cup a day throughout the year. Scalded milk for the skin is recommended by those who study beauty scientifically. The milk must be boiled and then a few drops of violet water added. The fluid must be rubbed into face, neck and arms thoroughly and permitted to dry. Then the rubbing must be renewed. To steam the face with hot milk makes it soft and white as an infant's.

For the Tea Table.

A favorite dainty for the tea table is salted wafers or round, thin water crackers covered with beaten white of egg through which have been mixed finely chopped English walnuts. The crackers are baked in a hot oven and served instead of small cakes.

Go to the blood, if you are to drive out Rheumatism. A Wisconsin physician, Dr. Shoop, does this with his Rheumatic Remedy—and with startling success. Rub-my, says the doctor never did cure Rheumatism. It is more than skin deep—it is constitutional, always. Because of this principle, Dr. Shoop's Rheumatic Remedy is perhaps the most popular in existence. It goes by word of mouth from one to another, everywhere. Grateful patients gladly spread its fame. It is an act of humanity, to tell a sick or ailing friend about it. Dr. Shoop's Rheumatic Remedy is sold by druggists everywhere. Send your name and address to Dr. Shoop, Racine, Wis., and ask one. Sold by all dealers.

BOYS BALLOON TO TAKE HOME.

Dayton Man Goes up In the Clouds On a Fresh Balloon Trip.

Indianapolis, Ind., Oct. 1.—Attempting his debut as an aeronaut in a balloon still redolent the smell of the factory, Henry D. Prudent, 40 years old, of Dayton, is today hitting it south on the front balloon trip of the decade. Prudent heard a week ago that balloons were for sale here. He came here and looking over some, said, "I'll take that one." He ordered one inflated at once, and "geared he'd ride it right home." The manufacturer had some trouble in convincing him it would require two or three days to prepare for the trip.

Prudent said he would wait, as he wasn't in any hurry to get home that day. Last evening, with a couple of friends, he cut himself loose. The big bag shot up to a tremendous height and whirled over the city southward The next heard of it was when it passed over Edinburgh, Ind., and descended within speaking distance.

"How far are we from Dayton?" yelled Prudent. As he signalled the aeronaut laughed in the high tension wires of the Indianapolis and Louisville Traction Company and snapped them in twain. The electrical display that followed must have frightened Prudent, for he dumped ballast and ascended beyond sight. Meanwhile the entire traction system between here and Louisville was out of commission for three hours.
